15° Cold Due Here Today; 45 Die in Northwest

Blasts From Arctic To Follow Preview Of Spring Luring Thousands Outdoors

The Weather Bureau warned last night that Washington was in the path of a mile-a-minute Arctic gale which yesterday took 45 lives in North Dakota and Minnesota.

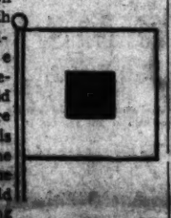
Yesterday's spring temperature of 59.3, which brought out the crocuses here, was expected to plummet to 15 degrees—a record for the winter—by tonight.

Sweeping southeast from the Gulf of Alaska, the bitter wind, accompanied by a blizzard, created havoc in the States surrounding the Great Lakes.

Grave fears were expressed for the safety of at least 25 members of fishing parties adrift on ice floes in a raging storm on Lake Superior, Associated Press reported. Six persons were rescued, and the Coast Guard braved a 50-mile gale and gigantic waves in search of the others.

"Amazing Rapidity"

The Washington forecaster, Charles L. Mitchell, declared last night that the cold front was descending on the Capital with "amazing rapidity." The snows, he predicted, would die out before reaching this country, but he warned that the mercury would fall to freezing by morning and that the city could expect violent winds together with bitter cold by night.



Cold wave coming

The frigid spell, the forecaster cautioned, will continue through Tuesday night.

The heavy toll of deaths in Minnesota and North Dakota were caused by the winds, recorded in some sectors at 85 miles an hour, together with sharply dropping temperatures and heavy drifts.

Automobiles were blown off the highways. Stalled motorists and farmers trapped in their fields were frozen to death.

On Lake Superior it was feared that 25-foot waves would smash scattered ice floes on which small fishing parties were marooned before they could be rescued by Coast Guardsmen. The missing persons including two women, had gone out on the ice to fish early yesterday morning. The storm struck at noon, and the ice field began breaking up, some floating 10 miles from the mainland.

Those adrift were believed to be from Baraga, L'Anse and Pelkie, Mich. Six fishermen were blown ashore on cakes of ice.

Motorists Missing

Most of the storm victims in Minnesota and North Dakota were motorists. At Tilden, N. Dak., a station agent left his wife and child in an automobile which had slipped into a ditch. Mother and child were found safe; the father vanished in the swirling snow. Near Crookston, N. Dak., a farmer became separated from his wife and child when they tried to reach their home after their car had stalled. Search parties found no trace of the two.

The Minnesota Highway Department had to rescue 37 persons, many suffering seriously from exposure, when their cars got stuck on the roads.

JACK M. WHITE

A package of gems passed unrecognized through hands of a Washington taxicab driver yesterday.

The driver, Jack M. White, 22, of 2305 Eighteenth Street Northwest, only learned of it an hour after he had returned a package found in his cab. What he had returned was said to have been reported to the cab company as $100,000 worth of jewels.

White related the incident this way:

"I picked up a fare at Dupont Circle and was told to drive to the Union Station. She was from the home of Mrs. Eleanor Patterson. I put a couple of suitcases in the cab and a couple of others in the rear compartment.

"After leaving the station, I picked up a party at Eighth Street and Mount Vernon Place and then saw a little case on the back seat. After taking my party to Barnaby Street I hurried over to the station and found the woman I had taken there and she seemed much excited. A man in the party reached in his pocket and handed me a $10 bill."

White said when he returned to the Yellow Cab station at 1820 Fourteenth Street Northwest, he was told that the steward at the home of Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, 15 Dupont Circle, had phoned the cab company's operator, saying the "package," which had stamped initials "E. P." contained the $100,000 worth of jewelry.

Mrs. Patterson, who said the gems included several pearls and were left her by her mother, had "more sentimental than actual value."

Mrs. Patterson is publisher of the Washington Times-Herald.

Train Wreck Kills 3; Laid To Sabotage

Cars Plunge in River, 30 Injured; Spikes Removed, Company Vice President Finds

By the Associated Press

Baden, Pa., March 16.—A Pennsylvania Railroad train carrying 100 passengers plunged into the icy Ohio River during a sleet storm tonight, killing at least three persons and injuring more than 40.

After a preliminary investigation, railroad Vice President E. W. Smith said the wreck was "very definitely caused by sabotage."

"All the spikes were removed from one rail and the rail was moved in on the ties," Smith said. "Splice bars which connect the rails were found at the river's edge and along the bank, where they were apparently thrown by saboteurs."

The dead were unofficially reported as Engineer A. L. Weigle, Cleveland; Rose Marie Jagielaki, 5, Pittsburgh, and an unidentified woman.

Most of the injured were from the Pittsburgh district. Others reported treated at various hospitals were:

E. L. Nixon, State College, Pa.
J. L. Hoffman, Cleveland.
Elizabeth McDonald, Altoona, Pa.
Mrs. H. W. Lockhart, 505 Pennsylvania Avenue, Greensburg, Pa.

Crushed by Coal

The locomotive and two cars remained on the bank, but Weigle was crushed to death when his cab was filled with coal, which poured upon him with terrific impact from the fuel tender.

Three coaches and the baggage car toppled into the river, the baggage car being almost completely submerged.

The presence of mind of the train's fireman, C. H. Millburn, of Alliance, Ohio—who escaped with cuts and bruises while his "buddy," Engineer Weigle, was killed—prevented a worse disaster.

Although dazed by shock, Millburn remembered that a freight train was scheduled to pass the wreck within an hour and might plough through scores of injured and dazed passengers wandering about the roadbed.

Stumbling through snow and wind, Millburn ran back and flagged the freight to a safe stop.

The train was Cleveland-Pittsburgh passenger train known as the Buckeye.

Fireman C. H. Milburn, also of Cleveland, climbed unassisted out of the cab of the locomotive. He was only shaken up.

The express was only 25 miles and 25 minutes from Pittsburgh when it plunged from the tracks at approximately 9 P. M. (E.S.T.)

Woman Calls Police

Passengers said that at Conway, a small town near Baden, the train slowed slightly at a crossing, careened on the rails, then shot across the bank and into the river.

Authorities first learned of the wreck when a woman telephoned Ambridge police, shouting:

"A man has just come to my door, he's cut in the face and blood is dripping from both his arms. I'll give him what first aid I can until a doctor comes."

Her call started an alarm that mobilized the medical and hospital forces of the district. Ambulances sped to the scene from Rochester, Sewickley and other neighboring communities.

Officials of the railroad at Pittsburgh hurried here on a relief train

Roosevelt to Put War Aside, Dedicate Art Gallery Tonight

Leaving his desk burdened with the transient reports of war, the President tonight will enter the marble National Gallery of Art and dedicate its ageless treasures to the American people.

Witnessing the dedication at 10 p. m. will be an invited audience of 6,000, including the Diplomatic Corps. They may enter the new $15,000,000 structure at 8 p. m., and so before the dedication view the collections which Andrew Mellon and Samuel H. Kress acquired from the richest art corners of the world.

The dedication will be broadcast. The President's speech, of 10 minutes' duration, will start at 10:15 p. m.

Facing the audience, as platform guests with the President, will be Vice President Wallace; Mrs. Roosevelt and Mrs. James Roosevelt; Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, Secretary of State Hull and Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau; Paul Mellon, son of Andrew Mellon; Samuel H. Kress; Dr. Charles G. Abbot, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution; Duncan Phillips, David Bruce, Donald D. Shepard, the Rev. Dr. ZeBarney Phillips, chaplain of the Senate; Otto R. Eggers; F. Lammot Belin; David E. Finley; Harry A. McBride, the Gallery administrator and John Walker, the chief curator.

The program of dedication follows:

10 to 10:01 p. m.—Descriptive announcement for the radio audience; 10:01 to 10:02½—The President will walk from his entrance to the platform. The United States Marine Band will play; 10:02½ to 10:03—the station announcer will introduce the Rev. Dr. Phillips to radio listeners only; 10:03 to 10:04½—Invocation by Dr. Phillips; 10:04½ to 10:07½—Chief Justice Hughes, chairman of the board, will speak; 10:07½

50,000 Lost in Duce's Drive; England Past Help, Hitler Says

Report British Entering Turkey

(Hitler's Text, Page 11.)

By the Associated Press

Berlin, March 16.—Adolf Hitler declared today that no amount of additional outside help for Britain can wrest final victory from the Axis.

Germany's armed forces, he said in a Memorial Day speech in the historic Zeughaus, or army museum, will take the lead during the spring and summer from the Italians, who bore the brunt through the winter in wearing Britain down.

Facing some 150 field marshals, generals, admirals, higher staff officers and about 100 cabinet members, Reich leaders, Gauleiters, Black Shirt and Brown Shirt chiefs and party bigwigs, the Fuehrer spoke not in his usual fervent manner, of a man trying to win the German people over to his viewpoint. Instead he spoke calmly, almost monotonously—as though he were once again restating what his thinking is long accustomed to—German victory.

Wearing a grayish long overcoat from which his rank was not discernible, but keeping on his gold-braided cap with the insignia of chief commander throughout the address, Hitler grasped both sides of the reading desk and—with one exception—changed position only to turn the pages of his manuscript.

"England Will Fall"

That exception was when, with an emphatic gesture of his right hand and in a raised voice, he said:

"No power and no support coming from any part of the world can change the outcome of this battle in any respect. England will fall."

(Hitler's speech followed by only a day President Roosevelt's broadcast Saturday night, in which he declared that Britain and Greece will get "ships, food, tanks, and guns and ammunition, and supplies of all kinds" from the United States, and adjured Americans to back an "all out" effort until "our victory is won.")

Except for reference to some remarks he said were made before a

London, March 16.—British observers said today that the zero hour is near in the Balkans and that Britain is ready to give Greece all-out support in meeting an expected German thrust.

The British air force is holding its ground in Albania and is prepared to defend Salonika in the impending clash of war machines on ancient Macedonian battlefields.

The uninterrupted flow of German troops and munitions down the Danube Valley to Bulgaria indicated the eruption of violence will come soon, observers declared, and predicted the R. A. F., Royal Navy and British land forces will deal heavy blows the moment Hitler strikes.

British fighter planes already in the Near East are prepared to counter the German dive-bombers, and British bombers are ready to assault the long German communication lines, it was reported.

Another Division Lands

Belgrade, March 1 (AP).—Britain poured more mechanized troops into the Balkan arena today as the feeling increased in diplomatic quarters here that apparent Nazi hesitation to attack at once might be due to anxiety over Russia.

The Nazis, these quarters said, appear to be studying the peril to their extended communications line from Russia on one side and from Yugoslavia, still unyielding

Sub Feared Lost With 40 Men, London Reports

London, March 16 (AP).—The British submarine Snapper is overdue and must be considered lost, the admiralty announced tonight.

The Snapper, one of the Shark class which displace 670 tons on the surface and carry a normal complement of 40 men, was the British submarine credited by the admiralty last July with having torpedoed five supply ships in two separate convoys near Norway.

Vessel Torpedoed In 2d R. A. F. Attack On Valona, Rome Says

By the Associated Press

Rome, March 16.—Countess Edda Ciano, Premier Mussolini's elder daughter, was one of the last to leave a sinking Italian hospital ship when two torpedoes from British planes swiftly sent the vessel down, Stefani, official Italian news agency, declared today.

In what it called "an ignoble new crime," Stefani said British planes, raiding the Albanian port of Valona Friday night, ignored other ships in the harbor and sent their torpedoes into the hospital ship, Po, "clearly illuminated and bearing all international signs of recognition."

Countess Edda, it said, was aboard the Po as a voluntary Red Cross nurse and remained aboard until the last at her own desire.

British Sell Rayon Plants To Buy Arms

Americans Purchase Viscose Factories Employing 18,000

By the Associated Press

New York, March 16.—The sale of what is regarded as the largest directly owned British industrial enterprise in the United States, American Viscose Corporation, to a group of American investment bankers was announced today by Sir Edward Peacock, British financial envoy.

After certain deductions 90 per cent of the proceeds of the sale of the huge corporation, estimated unofficially to be valued at from $100,000,000 to $150,000,000, will go directly to the British government.

Seventeen American firms, headed by Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., and Dillon, Read & Co., cooperated in the purchase.

The company manufactures rayon yarn and fiber and is regarded as one of the largest in the world.

It was established in the United States about 30 years ago and employs 18,000 American workers in seven factories in Marcus Hook, Lewistown, and Meadville, Pa.; Parkersburg and Nitro, W. Va.; Roanoke and Front Royal, Va.

The sale is the first of its kind that the British government had made in this country in its all-out effort to get funds for munitions of war.

However, Sir Edward indicated

Actions to Speak

By William V. Nessly
Post Staff Writer

Determined moves by President Roosevelt and the Congress are to be made this week to assure swift movement of munitions to nations resisting aggression.

The Chief Executive, carrying out his warning that the defense program must not be handicapped by "unnecessary strikes" or "short-sighted management," is expected to issue orders creating a special defense mediation board to curtail labor stoppages.

In a Sunday conference with Philip Murray, C. I. O. chieftain, who has expressed opposition to the mediation proposal, Mr. Roosevelt is reported to have obtained assurance that the C. I. O. will cooperate if the board is created.

Congress, meanwhile, was set to give quick action on the Administration's $7,000,000,000 bill providing funds for the aid-to-Britain program. The measure will reach the House from the Appropriations Committee tomorrow, with a vote on Wednesday provided for. Immediate Senate hearings will follow, to be completed by the weekend. Senate passage of the measure a week from today was forecast, and if Mr. Roosevelt departs this week for a Southern cruise, as he hopes to, the bill can be flown to him for his signature, thereby completing the process of authorizing the tremendous aid program.

Seventy-five to Confer on Training

The far-reaching nature of the all-out defense needs was illustrated further by these developments:

Seventy-five of the country's leading industrialists and labor leaders in the metal trades industries were summmoned by the Office of Production Management to meet here today for a two-day conference on in-plant training, designed to lessen labor bottlenecks in those industries.

Leon Henderson, defense price stabilization commissioner, declared that recent advances in packer hide prices and hide futures "appear to be speculative and not warranted by actual supa training cruise in Pacific waters, the Navy Department disclosed here yesterday.

It is the first reported movement of United States war vessels in the Southern Pacific since the outbreak of the European war, and the disclosure follows a dispatch from the Far East that a new United States cruiser arrived in those waters to join the Asiatic fleet.

The purpose of the visit to the British dominion, said the Navy Department, "is for good will and recreation, and at the completion of the visit this unit will return to its normal operating base at Pearl Harbor."

The department's announcement was made after dispatches from Aukland told of the expected arrival of the vessels.

The detachment is commanded by Capt. Ellis S. Stone, aboard the light cruiser Brooklyn, and includes another light cruiser, the Savannah, and Destroyer Division Six.

The destroyer division, commanded by Commander H. E. Paddock, consists of the Tucker, Case, Shaw and Cummings.

The Tucker is commanded by a Washington man, Lieut. Comdr. W. R. Terrell, 4735 Nebraska Avenue, who served as aide to the commandant of the Navy Yard here for nearly two years before he was transferred to sea duty, aboard the Tucker, last January.

Born at Denison, Tex., Commander Terrell was graduated from the Naval Academy June 2, 1925.

'Authority Shaken'

By the Associated Press

Athens, March 16.—At least 50,000 Italian soldiers in a Fascist army of 120,000 were put out of action and Premier Mussolini's personally-directed "blitzkrieg" aimed to smash the Greeks at all costs turned into what his own men bitterly called a "real massacre," authoritative Greek sources declared tonight.

The official Greek spokesman asserted that Italian prisoners said the Fascists were "furious" because the seven-day offensive in the Tepelani sector was crushed with terrific losses.

(Mussolini himself has gone back to Rome from the Albanian front "with his prestige weakened and his authority shaken," the Greek radio said in a broadcast heard in New York by C. B. S. The radio also said the Italians suffered "terrible losses.")

A Greek army inferior in numbers to the Fascist attackers hurled them back and today the thrusts had dwindled almost to local actions, the Greeks said.

The attacks were launched over a 20-mile front from the Viosa River to the southern slopes of Mount Tomoros, but the real attempt at blitzkrieg in the mountains was made on a 3-mile front from Mount Trebeshina to the village of Boudese.

There the Italians concentrated the bulk of their force, including artillery, and the whole weight of their aviation estimated at 300 planes.

Generals Given Ultimatum

Captured Italian officers said, the Greeks reported, that Italian divisions engaged in the offensive averaged losses between 40 and 50 per cent of their strength.

The Greeks said the Italian offensive efforts degenerated into weak attacks after the heavy assaults of last Thursday and Friday were thrown back.

The Greeks earlier had said Mussolini gave his Albanian generals an ultimatum to "do something" by last Saturday.

Authoritative Greek sources said their troops, increasingly confident of final success, had gained the initiative over the Italians.

In addition to the great losses of men and material, six prominent Fascist personalities, including two of Mussolini's oldest collaborators, were reported killed or captured.

The Greeks said they had further

Turks Expect Yugoslav-Axis Compromise

By the Associated Press

Istanbul, March 16.—Turkish newspapers today conceded that a Yugoslav compromise with the Axis seems inevitable and that Germany probably will attack Greece, but gave no hint that Turkey plans any interference.

This attitude bolstered the belief among most foreign observers that Turkey, although fully prepared, will not enter the war unless directly attacked.

While a Turkish courier bore President Ismet Inonu's reply to Adolf Hitler's recent message expressing an interest in Turkey's "well-being," Turkish minds went back to the last war in which the country was allied with imperial Germany.

The nation commemorated the death of Turkish soldiers killed when British troops occupied Istanbul, 22 years ago today.

Discussing the anniversary, the newspaper Cum Huriyet said, "we cleared this black page with other feats of victory (in the war against the Greeks after the World War), so much so that our enemies of yesterday extended their hand to us in a gesture of equality."

President Roosevelt's speech on aid to Greece and Britain was delivered too late for comment in today's newspapers, but Turkey cordially welcomed passage of the British Aid Bill and it was only to be assumed that the country likewise would warmly receive the President's address.

evidence that Mussolini toured the front in an armored car urging his commanders to smash through the Greek front at any cost.

The famous Italian Eleventh Army was said to have been hit so hard that it was necessary to reorganize it with strong reinforcements. Despite its losses, it was ordered to continue fighting.

The government spokesman said the Italians yesterday picked up their wounded and displayed little activity otherwise.

Easily Repulsed

"They launched two attacks with reduced elements on the night of March 14-15 and another at 6 a. m. yesterday in which one company was used. In both cases they were easily repulsed by our automatic arms fire. The enemy retreated with losses and left their dead and wounded in front of our lines.

"In the northern sector the Italians launched a local attack at 4 a. m. but retreated in disorder.

"In the course of these operations we captured some prisoners, automatic arms, and rifles.

"The prisoners said Fascist circles were furious because of the failure of the offensive, adding that the losses were terrific and were a real massacre.

"The forces used totalled about 130,000 and suffered about 40 per cent loss of their strength."

The British said their bombers set afire a gasoline dump at Beriat and destroyed four planes on the ground at Valona yesterday. The British said the Beriat fire could be seen 50 miles away. It was added direct hits were made on the airdrome runway at Valona.

Pan-American Opens New Airline in Ecuador

New York, March 16 (INS).—Pan American Grace Airways announced tonight it had inaugurated a new air service in Ecuador in a move to maintain American supremacy over heavily subsidized German lines.

to Axis pressure, on the other.

Diplomatic messages said another British mechanized division was disembarking at the Greek mainland ports of Piraeus and Volos.

Authoritative sources said yesterday that almost 100,000 British troops—vanguard of a force of 300,000—already had been landed in Greece with all equipment necessary for war, including flame-throwers, tanks and mechanized equipment.

Fresh Australian and New Zealand troops, meanwhile, are pouring into Cairo to reinforce the army of the Nile, according to these advices, and may later be brought to the Balkans also.

Nazis Rush to Soviet Border

Observers here considered it significant that great numbers of German troops in Rumania are now being rushed to defensive positions along the Prut River which forms the frontier between Nazi-occupied Rumania and Russia.

Defense of that line was turned over to the Rumanians weeks ago, but apparently imminent war with the British in southeastern Europe seems to have changed that plan.

Diplomats saw in this move an indication that Germany still is not certain that when her forces become occupied elsewhere the Red army might not consider it an advantageous time for some kind of "adventure."

A diplomatic report from Bucharest said that Marshal Semeon Timoshenko, Soviet defense commissar, had been in Chisinau, in Bessarabia just across the Prut River, last week while Admiral Nikolai Kuznetzofff, the Red navy chief, was at Odessa, Russia's big Black Set naval base.

German military moves along the Greek frontier of occupied Bulgaria are going forward behind a wall of utmost secrecy. The Nazis have greatly extended the military zone in Bulgaria from which civilians are barred.

Throughout Yugoslavia, which still is standing aloof from Axis ties, spring military preparations were progressing rapidly with troops on the march everywhere and the skies filled with diving, swooping planes.

More and more buildings, such as this city's Sport Palace, are being requisitioned for military use.

All military attaches of foreign governments have been warned they must no leave the Belgrade city limits or take airplane trips without special permits.

The air of tenseness was increased today by the appearance at a leading hotel of a German admiral in full uniform accompanied by three medal-bedecked Nazi army officers wearing swords.

The naval officer was Admiral Rhe.hold-Adow, who came here, the German Legation said, on a "lecture tour." The legation said the officers were in uniform for a "state occasion."

German pressure on Yugoslavia to permit passage of troops and war supplies and also to demobilize has not been relaxed, but there has been no indication that this country will accede.

President Roosevelt's radio broadcast yesterday (exhorting the United States to "all out" aid for Britain and her allies), and the reports of British landings in Greece are increasing resistance in Yugoslavia to any complete capitulation.

All newspapers now are printing editorials in every edition reflecting this new resolution to retain some degree of national independence.

Typical articles denounced those who "by threats, deceptions and promises which humiliate the Yugoslav people" try to divert the nation from its "path of neutrality and peace."

A strong bloc of Serb military and political leaders are taking the position that Yugoslavia should join Greece in the war on the Nazis now that the British are preparing a Balkan front.

Information reaching Belgrade yesterday indicated that Britain was preparing to take the initiative in an offensive against German forces massed above the Greek frontier in Bulgaria.

This group is counter-balanced by Croats who have gone far toward a "peace at any price" position.

Yugoslavia's repeated delay in reaching some decision was explained by observers as partly typical Balkan political maneuvering or stalling and partly German refusal to accept anything less than a pact containing a military clause.

Nazis Would Release Troops

With the danger of war breaking out in the Balkans any day, some diplomatic sources think Germany likely to accept suddenly Belgrade's offer of some kind of a pact without a military clause in order to lessen the danger of trouble in this quarter while Nazi forces are occupied farther south.

German circles say frankly that the reason Berlin has been so insistent on Yugoslav demobilization is because of her desire to release thousands of Nazi troops now concentrated along Yugoslavia's frontiers with Rumania, Bulgaria and erstwhile Austria.

Should the Yugoslavs stand firm in their refusal to demobilize, some percentage of the Nazi expeditionary army would have to continue to man these frontiers along a 1,000-mile German communication line.

1K'1 shrdlu mh mh mh m hmhm.

The potential danger to this line, both from this direction and from the Russian, is believed by military men to be one of many reasons for German hesitation in admitting that the British are in Greece or in carrying out often repeated threats made even by Adolf Hitler himself as to what the Nazis would do the instant their enemies put foot on the European continent.

Nazi Bombers Attack Ship Off Eire

By the Associated Press

Berlin, March 16.—The probable destruction of a 5,000-ton armed British freighter about 220 miles west of Donegal Bay, Ireland, by long-distance bombers was reported today by the German attackers.

The aviators said they registered several effective hits and that the vessel listed and started burning.

From the Mediterranean front, it was reported that German fighting planes cruising over Malta engaged in several air fights. The Nazis claimed they shot down an English Hurricane plane with no loss to themselves.

Nazi night raiders started one large fire in London's harbor and a number of smaller ones Saturday night, the German high command said today, while other planes "effectively" bombed south England airdromes and harbor facilities with high explosives and incendiaries.

The daily communique's only mention of German troops in Bulgaria was to say their march "is running according to schedule."

In North Africa, the communique declared, Nazi fighting planes engaged British motorized columns and troop concentrations near Agedabia south of Bengasi, Libya, while other planes bombed the Maltese airports of Lucca and Halfar and shot down one British bomber.

Yugoslavs Seen Aligned in War With Allies

Copyright by New York Times

Belgrade, March 16.—War in the Balkans before summer involving Yugoslavia, Turkey, Britain and Greece on a common front against Germany must be accepted as almost inevitable, according to a symposium of opinion from leading Belgrade diplomats, trained observers and well-informed military and political experts, disclosed today.

Yugoslavia's sharp reversal of policy in concert with Anglo-Turkish pledges of support and Greek determination to carry on the war at any cost, from the foundations of the general belief in Belgrade circles that war is coming, and soon.

"Diplomacy," one British diplomat empahasized today, "is only as strong as the force behind it. Germany could not be checked down here until somebody could make definite declarations to certain governments and insure them with force, which is the only understandable language in this part of the world today."

Yugoslavia skirted the brink of revolution, unless most diplomats and observers missed their guess, during the critical days which followed the original German demand handed to Premier Cvetkovitch and Foreign Minister Cincar-Markovitch at the Berghof in mid-February.

Grave Unrest Seethed

Despite the government's frantic concealment policy, a gagged press and efforts stretched to almost ridiculous limits to present a surface view of tranquility, the crisis grew and stirred the gravest unrest and apprehension among the opposition parties, the civil and peasant populations and the army—reaching its peak on the night of Thursday, March 6, when Prince Regent Paul, after a harrowing day, summoned his chiefs of state and told them Yugoslavia must come to terms with Germany.

He offered his plan, a compromise signature of a pact of nonaggression and friendship with the Reich. The alternatives, he pointed out, were signature of the tripartite pact, political, military and economic submission, probable eventual military occupation of the country—or war.

There was a clash immediately and—according to reliable information—five ministers offered their resignations on the spot.

Prince Paul argued, coaxed and threatened and forced his rebellious government into line, and extracted an agreement to what he held was necessary for the life of the government and the preservation of the Yugoslav integrity—the compromise.

A second "black Thursday" followed. German pressure disappeared on the surface, but it was renewed with redoubled intensity and with Italian assistance under cover. Viktor von Heeren and Francisco Mamelli, the German and Italian Ministers, beat a path to the door of the foreign office and the Presidency. Last Wednesday Prince Paul summoned his council again to make the final decision the following day.

People Opposed Pact

The entire atmosphere, however, was swiftly changing. The bans (provincial governors) of Serbia, Macedonia, Croatia, Montenegro, Herzegovinia, Slovenia and Slavonia advised the palace that the Yugoslav people were against the signature of the tripartite pact and against any concessions to Germany and that rebellion might result if the Belgrade government gave way.

Provisional mobilization already had been ordered. Every ablebodied mna between 22 and 50 was summoned. Troop trains unloaded fresh soldiers and equipment at Nish and Shoplje and the Yugoslav army moved up to the Rumanian and Bulgarian frontiers opposite the growing German concentrations.

Alarmed and querulous, Herr von Heeren called again and again at the Yugoslav foreign office to demand what it was all about. Italian troop concentrations simultaneously were begun at Scutari, on the southwestern Yugoslav frontier.

The verdict of the second palace council was virtually the same as the first, but it was reached under vastly different conditions.

Opposition leaders declared that the signature of anything in Germany, "even a dinner check," would mean the collapse of the Cvetkovitch government, open revolt in the provinces and disaffection in the army.

Offers of Support

More important, the British Minister, Donald Ian Campbell, has returned from his Athens conference with Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, empowered to make representations to Prince Paul, including strong hints about the Turkish position. The American Minister, Arthur Bliss Lane, called upon Prince Paul and the premier to emphasize President Roosevelt's "measures-short-of-war policy" and to point out that the forthcoming passage of the lease-lend bill would release planes, ships and guns to Yugoslavia as well as Britain, if armaments were needed. Turkish Ambassador Koperler called in person to inform the government that Ankara would look with favor upon Yugoslav resistance to all concessions and would back Yugoslavia if it came to war.

Petitions are still pouring in from everywhere demanding a standfast policy.

Summing it up tonight, a leading neutral Belgrade diplomat declared that "this thing is a metamorphosis which must be almost incredible to those who don't know these people and somewhat staggering to those who do know them but who have witnesed the events of the last six months and the usual reaction here.

"We may escape war down here but I would say it is 100 to 1 against it—and just a question of a few weeks, at the inside, or a month or two at the most."

Production Area Definition Widened By Wage Hour

The wage-hour administration yesterday extended its definition of an area of production to include off-the-farm processing of all agricultural and horticultural commodities. The extension becomes effective April 1.

Employes within an area of production are exempt from the minimum wage and maximum hour provisions of the Wage Hour Act.

The extension, officials said, applies to such sources of employment as cotton warehouses, grain elevators, and milk stations.

The regulation specifies that processing and packing plants which draw their raw materials from the general vicinity of their operations and employe ten or less workers are to be considered within the exempted area of production.

The previous rule said that processing and packing plants were within the area of production if they drew their raw materials from sources within a radius of ten miles, were located in a rural area or a town of not less than 2,500 population, and employed not more than seven persons.

R. A. F. Stalls Italian Traffic In Eritrea

Copyright by New York Times

Cairo, March 16.—British warplanes supporting British and French forces around Cheren yesterday caught a column of 30 to 40 Italian trucks on the Cheren-Asmara road in Eritrea.

The British planes let loose with their machineguns and set the entire group afire. The Italian trucks were still burning fiercely to the accompaniment of loud explosions two and a half hours later.

Air attacks have so harassed enemy motor traffic that it has been forced to halt. Meanwhile, Italian troop and gun positions have been bombed and strafed.

South African air force fighters near Diredawa in Ethiopia yesterday morning. Three were shot down in air fights while two Savoia bombers and three Fiat fighters were burned out on the ground as a result of air strafing.

Royal Air Force bombers had raided Diredawa itself a few hours earlier.

The West South African column's position has not been reported but it is probably now in the vicinity of Harar since it is known that the column's advance has been continuing.

It is now announced that Belgian troops from the Congo cooperated in the capture of Asosa.

British Menace Portugal, Says Roman Press

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, March 16.—Portugal, which is regarded as the only Western European country outside the direct or indirect influence of the Axis, is in danger of British occupation, the Popolo di Roma asserts.

The newspaper expresses for that nation the same concern that the Axis felt for Bulgaria two weeks ago when Germany decided to "protect" Sofia against British "intrigues."

"Britain," the newspaper writes, "is believed to be planning to disembark troops on the Azores and even on Portuguese soil. It is a variation of a former plan to obtain new Atlantic bases through the Archipelago Islands. It is not yet possible to know up to what point this plan will be carried out, that is whether it will be put into action or remain only a threat."

The newspaper then goes on to repeat the familiar charge that "England is in desperate search of diversions and of new battlefields in the hope of eluding the fate which awaits her."

As a matter of fact everything is ready for the Axis spring offensive and London's death knell is about to ring, the Italian press confidently announces.

Several editorials purport to give the main lines of how the campaign will start and the Gazetta Del Popolo flatly states that before attempting an invasion of the British Isles the Axis will concentrate on destroying the British fleet and mercantile marine as well as the air force.

"After the winter pause," the newspaper says, "the battle for the conquest of England which Berlin sees as the only possibility for a decision is beginning with renewed vigor . . . It is only too obvious that a final military action against the Isles must have as its premise the annihilation of the enemy air force and fleet as well as a total blockade which will eliminate all of almost all supplies so as to determine the impossibility of an efficient defense of the country."

However, the newspaper stresses that the Axis is not losing sight of other fronts where Britain is apt to receive "hard knocks" and an "unspecified number of troops," it asserts, "are at Casablanca in French Morocco." Others are arriving steadily in Libya while the motorized divisions already in Bulgaria have created "considerable alarm" among the British in Turkey.

Virginio Gayda in Voce D'Italia announced that "new and numerous Italian and German forces are ready to enter into action now in the Atlantic" and predicts an "acute crisis of supplies for Britain."

cessive aerial torpedo attack. The Italian high command's war bulletin Friday, in telling of the first attack, said that "in the morning hours of March 13, enemy torpedo-launching planes attempted to attack Italian steamers in the Bay of Valona Harbor." Stefani said five British planes took part in this attack and two were shot down. At that time it was said a merchant ship was hit.

Stefani's report, calling the torpedoing "an ignoble new crime," said:

"Toward midnight, with the moon already high, two English torpedo-launching planes gliding silently, appeared over Valona.

"About three kilometers (two miles) from the coast was the hospital ship Po, clearly illuminated and bearing all the international signs of recognition.

R. A. F. planes, as soon as they saw the hospital ship and without paying attention to other steamers in the port, turned against it, hitting it squarely with two torpedoes.

"Naval anti-aircraft opened fire immediately, and drove off the infamous aggressors.

"Countess Edda Ciano Mussolini, who was aboard the Po as a voluntary Red Cross nurse, was among the last to leave the ship, which sank rapidly.

"There was deep indignation throughout Albania and among the fighting troops for the hateful crime deliberately committed by the R.A.F."

Claim British Repulsed

In Africa, the high command said, a British offensive has been renewed "along the entire front" in the Cheren sector of Eritrea but has been repulsed at all points.

Another British air raid on Valona Saturday also was mentioned in the war bulletin but it said little damage was caused and one of the raiders was shot down.

Axis planes, on the other hand, were said to have bombed an important Greek air base, "scatter-bombed enemy troops," attacked the half airport on the Island of Malta and bombed British truck concentrations in Libya.

Life Insurance Invests in Defense

In 1917, the American people embarked on a great defense effort. Men and women from every walk of life stood shoulder to shoulder and put that defense effort across.

On behalf of the millions of Americans who owned life insurance, the life insurance companies did their share. Before the war, these companies held almost no government bonds; at the war's end over 10% of their assets were so invested. This was in addition to the support given to the industries which stood behind our preparedness program.

Today we have embarked on another great defense effort. Today life insurance is larger. You are one of sixty-five million Americans who own policies backed by thirty billion dollars' worth of assets. Today these policyholders, through their life insurance companies, are investing once again in defense—but in greater sums than before.

On your behalf, life insurance is now investing large sums in many different types of business . . . in those which are building for us the power to defend our American way of life . . . in those which have built for us, and are building, the high standard of living which is a part of our American way of life.

In 1940, you policy owners, through your life insurance companies, bought a billion and a quarter dollars' worth of government bonds. Your companies now hold five and a half billion dollars' worth of such bonds—seven times as much as after World War I.

In other words—life insurance is investing in defense of everything we Americans cherish . . . and it is helping to build, at the same time, the solid backlog of security on which national morale must always rest.

Japanese Take Offensive on 2 China Fronts

Shanghai, March 16.—Aided by aerial bombing and strafing, Japanese forces were reported today by Domei, Japanese news agency, to have launched an offensive on two fronts in northern Kiangsi Province in an effort to smash an army of 80,000 troops comprising the cream of Gen. Chiang Kai-shek's central forces in the ninth war zone.

Six columns of Japanese began a westward drive from Nanchang at dawn yesterday and by this afternoon were reported to have captured Fengsin, a stronghold 40 miles away.

Other Japanese detachments were said to be advancing rapidly along the Chin River Valley, routing Chungking units concentrated in the ninth zone.

English Help Chungking

This was the first major activity by Japanese troops in the Nanchang area since October, 1939.

Domei also said indications of closer Anglo-Chungking relations "bordering practically on a military alliance" were seen in reports that Chungking's Loween aircraft factory had been transferred from Yunnan Province to Burma.

The agency said it had obtained information in Shanghai that American planes were being unloaded and assembled in Rangoon, Burma, and flown to Chungking by Chinese aviators.

Hand of Hitler Seen

Copyright by New York Times

Shanghai, March 16.—It is believed here that German political and military agents are largely responsible for current political nad military clashes between Chiang Kai-shek's Chungking government and the Eighteenth and the Fourth Route Armies.

Germany always has maintained a large staff of observers and experts at Chungking. It is believed that these are working to bring about peace between China and Japan.

The belief here is that the German intrigue anticipates that by stirring up trouble between Chiang Kai-shek and the Chinese Communists, the support accorded to the Chungking government by America and Britain will be withdrawn, forcing the Chungking government to sue for peace.

Mechanized Army Requires Manual Peeling of Onions

Mechanical potato peelers and dish washers are lightening the existence of the Army kitchen police detailed in the current military expansion, but the enlisted man still must perform manually one onerous and odorous task—onion peeling.

The War Department, in a release yesterday, described graphically the smooth-running labor saving "gadgets" for the soldier's kitchen but added:

"Onions? There is no machine for them. Private Jones will have to skin them with a knife as of old, and let the tears come if they will."

It said that observations at Fort George G. Meade, Md., showed that only two men, plus the potato peeling machine there "can handle all the potatoes that formerly would keep 12 men busy paring."

Other notations from the Army release:

"Going are the big G. I. cans for making soup. Steam kettles are taking their place. New deep fat fryers handle doughnuts, chicken and pork chops.

"The electric dishwasher takes in messy and greasy dishes and passes them out bright and clean. Big electric toasters now turn out browned slices of toast in wholesale quantities.

"Hand-mixing of dough for biscuits, pies and cakes is out in many posts. Meat choppers grind beef for meat loafs and hamburgers. Slicers make uniform slabs of roast beef.

"Food cutters make vegetables into neat cubes for stew.

"The old soldier, whose thoughts go back to the 1917-19 period, might think that the Army is coddling its men on kitchen police duty. He remembers the hours he spent in the shade of the mess hall, manicuring spuds and onions. But the soldier in the present mobilization camps spends only a fraction of the time on such duty and he doesn't idle between meals. He goes right back to the drill field to go on with his particular military training. He leaves his drill shortly before the next meal is to be served to get things ready. In other words, kitchen police no longer means a whole day lost from a soldier's scheduled training.

"Another important factor in the use of these machines is that they make for greater cleanliness and sanitary conditions. By reducing the need for preparing food by hand to a minimum, they contribute to the health safeguards in military camps."

Roosevelt Expected to Issue Mediation Order

ply conditions," an implied warning that action might have to be taken to limit the rises.

Secretary of Commerce Jones, reporting that "shortages and bottlenecks in certain basic industries have become sufficiently widespread as to be characteristic," said that accumulation of inventories has interferred with the flow of materials for defense needs and has "hastened" imposition of priorities in some industries.

Four steel company officials were added to the OPM staff to deal with the problem of enlarging steel capacity to meet defense and normal domestic orders.

Little real opposition to the $7,000,000,000 aid fund bill was anticipated, though Senate leaders were prepared to resist an attempt by Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, to cut the total in half. Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, chairman of the Appropriations Committee, who often has urged all steps necessary to "whip Hitler," said the move would be defeated.

Glass praised President Roosevelt's Saturday night address before the White House Correspondents Association, saying the President "seemed to promise Great Britain and the associated nations every possible help except to send our boys over there."

He disagreed with many who saw in Mr. Roosevelt's remarks an indication that the United States would convoy ships to Britain if necessary, but added that "if the President meant convoys, I'm in favor of that."

Woodrum Hails Speech

Representative Woodrum, of Virginia, acting chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, praised the President's "fighting speech," which he said "could not be misunderstood by anyone."

On the other hand, Senator Brooks (Republican), of Illinois, said in a statement that the speech "served notice on the American people that through the use of our resources he proposes to participate in every foreign war now raging through the universe."

"It will take renewed effort on the part of our people to prevent fighting," he said, "and the spilling of American blood in these wars."

Whether Mr. Roosevelt implied that this country would convoy merchant ships to England to assure the arrival of American supplies continued a lively topic.

While official sources refused to be quoted by name, several asked what else the President could have meant when he said that "from America . . . they will get ships . . . food . . . tanks and guns and ammunition and supplies of all kinds."

It was pointed out that the declaration was not qualified or the delivery of the goods conditioned upon British ability to transport them safely.

Senator Nye commented:

"If we are to send convoys, it is full time we were taken into the President's confidence. There is nothing in the Neutrality Act that would even prohibit the President from sending American cargo ships into the war zones with supplies, because the Lease-Lend Act permits the President to carry out the British aid program notwithstanding the provisions of any other law."

Thirty Strikes to Be Settled

The 11-member mediation board expected to be created by the President will be confronted at the outset with some 30 strikes, of varying degrees of importance to the defense task, and potential disturbances of vast possibilities in the coal and steel industries.

Officials still were concerned over the two-month-old Allis Chalmers strike, affecting 9,000 workers and tying up $45,000,000 of defense orders; the four-plant International Harvester Co. strike, and numerous others.

Leon Henderson statement on hide price increases said that quotations have gone up 1½ to 2 cents a pound since the middle of February, although visible supplies of cattle hides and cattle hide leather an January 31 amounted to 13,850,000 pieces compared with 13,350,000 a year ago. Domestic cattle slaughter has increased, he said, and imports from October through January were the highest in years.

No Danger of Shortage

Miss Perkins to Preside

"The net additional demand for leather due to Army shoe orders is only a small percentage of total leather consumption and cannot cause any difficulty in supplying normal leather requirements."

The OPM's conference on building trades labor will try to find increased means for training defense workers.

"The rapid increase in the defense production program is bringing us squarely up against the problem of recruiting the necessary labor supply," the OPM announcement said. "There is a rising concern at the slowness with which industry and labor in general are responding to the need for increased training on the job."

Secretary Perkins will preside at the sessions and William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman, of the OPM, and Undersecretary of War Patterson will speak.

The steel executives added to the OPM staff are:

George F. Hocker, Bethlehem, Pa., manager of heavy forgings and castings sales for the Bethlehem Steel Co.

Arthur A. Wagner, Pittsburgh, in charge of sales of plates and structural material for the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation.

Arthur J. O'Leary, Coatesville, Pa., assistant to the manager of steel plate sales for the Lukens Steel Co.

James G. West, Pittsburgh, formerly in charge of blast furnaces for the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation.

Hocker, Wagner and O'Leary have arranged for leaves of absence from their companies to work for the Government.

West will visit closed blast furnaces in various parts of the country to determine if they might be rehabilitated to increase pig iron production.

Speech Put U. S. in War, Italian Says

By Camille M. Cianfarra
Copyright by New York Times

Rome, March 16.—President Roosevelt's speech Saturday is regarded by Italian circles here as one of his strongest against the totalitarian powers. It was so strong that Ezio Maria Gray, a member of the Italian Parliament, broadcasting this evening, stated flatly that "regardless of juridical fiction the United States is now at war with the Axis."

In a violent attack against Mr. Roosevelt, Signor Gray said the war is no longer of "Europe against England but of Europe against America." He ridiculed alleged American assertions that this will be the century of United States world domination and said that Mr. Roosevelt's dreams of conquest would turn out to be like those of Genghis Khan.

However, the statement that the United States will send ships and ammunition, weapons and airplanes to Britain, Greece and Chiang Kai-shek's China 'makes no change in the situation, he asserted, inasmuch as the Axis had already foreseen that Britain will receive the greatest possible help from the United States.

Too Late for Papers

Since the speech came too late for publication in the morning press the Italian people have not yet learned of Mr. Roosevelt's strong determination to stand by Britain. Meanwhile, the acccount of the speech released by the official Stefani News Agency gives an inkling of the feeling in responsible circles.

The official agency says that the speech was delivered "with Roosevelt's usual messianic style of exalted presumption," and that it was "fired" by the most materialistic business considerations.

"It is a development," Stefani asserts, "of the mystification of which the country was a victim through the approval of the lease-lend bill."

Speech Doomed New Orders, Greeks Say

New York, March 16 (AP).—The Greek radio, in a broadcast heard here today by C. B. S., said President Roosevelt's speech of last night "has officially and irrevocably signed the death warrant of the 'New Order.'"

Roosevelt, Dictators Similar, Nazis Say

New York, March 16.—The German radio, in an English-language broadcast on President Roosevelt's speech of Saturday night, said he appealed to the American people in much the same way that Hitler and Mussolini appealed to their followers when they started on their way to power.

"Perhaps the two continents are not so far apart as they have been pictured," the broadcaster said. He was heard here by N. B. C.

"America will also see and experience certain changes in its social and economic setup. We hope that it will prove ripe for these changes not only so far as her people are concerned but also as to her leadership."

President Roosevelt, the speaker stressed, appealed to the people to be satisfied with longer working hours, smaller profits, higher taxes and other sacrifices.

Sydney, Australia, March 16 (AP). The broadcast of President Roosevelt's speech on aid to Great Britain was heard in thousands of homes all over Australia today and was acclaimed as the greatest news of the whole war for the Empire and a forthright challenge to the dictators.

The address was received at lunchtime here.

The Herald said in an editorial that "Roosevelt never before has spoken with such sureness of authority. He discarded the last vestiges of diplomatic restraint and called for a total effort which will not stop before victory."

Madrid, March 16 (AP).—The Spanish press prominently displayed President Roosevelt's Saturday night speech on aid to Britain.

Only the weekly Mundo commented, however, and its editorial did not directly concern the President's speech.

This paper said there could be no doubt but that the United States was taking part in the war, and that Washington's efforts to "involve the whole American continent in a common fate" could not but be of interest to Spain.

Mundo said the United States was intervening diplomatically in the European situation besides sending war material to England as fast as it can be turned out.

It said the basis of the United States intervention—the threat of European war spreading to the Western Hemisphere—was false, but that the danger of war in the Pacific was "real and immediate."

Speech Better Tonic Than Aid Bill to British

Copyright by New York Times

London (Monday), March 17.—President Roosevelt's speech of Saturday night came to the British as an even better tonic, if that were possible, than the signing of the lease-lend bill.

Two points especially pleased the people here. The first was President Roosevelt's emphasis on speed. Mr. Roosevelt cannot hope that "speed and speed now" will become the United States' watchword any more than the British hope it. The second was his reference to ships, since it is ships that the British need first and foremost.

More important than any specific passages in the speech, however, was its entire tone. It told Britain that aid was on the way.

At the same time it is hoped and felt here that the speech will find its way into all of Europe, including Germany and Italy. It may even have some immediate effect upon wavering nations in Europe such as Yugoslavia and Spain. It may stiffen the resistance of the Greeks and allay any fears that the Turks may entertain. It may cause France to stir within the German grip and make Spanish politicians pause before they give way to the Axis.

Swiss 'Relieved' By Roosevelt's Words

Berne, Switzerland, March 16.—President Roosevelt's speech though given only in summary form in today's very small Sunday press, was received in many quarters with sighs of relief comparable to that of the little boy whose big brother has finally dealt verbally with the big bully and who is ready at the next sign of aggressiveness to "take other measures."

Nowhere did anyone encounter former doubts that action would follow these words.

Such press comments as were available can be summed up in the words of Berner Tagblatt, which says, "The biggest event of the weekend was the speech by the American President in which he expressed in no uncertain manner his own and his country's faith in democracy and their determination to defend it . . . a veritable credo, his remarks concerning the right to survival of every small nation are more than welcome here"

Registration Of Civilians Set by Bevin

By the Associated Press

London, March 16.—Labor Minister Ernest Bevin informed Britons today that April 5 has been set for the nation's first registration of civilians for war industry.

Bevin emphasized need particularly for workers in shipbuilding and marine engineers and for women as auxiliaries to relieve men for fighting duty.

He told the nation he was confident it would respond to calls for discipline and sacrifice with stability and determination "that will far transcend anything Hitler or his Nazi regime can bring against us."

Waves of German raiders bombed a town in western England overnight in a concentrated attack lasting several hours and it was feared many casualties resulted.

The attack came after the Royal Air Force and the Luftwaffe had matched aggressiveness Saturday and early Sunday in the cross-channel air warfare.

On this occasion the R. A. F. bombed the Rhineland city of Dusseldorf and the submarine base at the French port of Lorient.

It was the second successive night attack on Duesseldorf, the air ministry said.

Saturday night German attacks on Britain, the government said, were on a restricted scale and centered chiefly on the southeastern area, including London.

One German raider was claimed as probably destroyed in the overnight air fighting.

A dance hall in suburban London was hit and a number of people killed.

Rescue squads worked throughout the night to extricate the victims, among whom were passengers in a trolley and bus which were outside the damaged second-floor dance hall.

Although about 200 soldiers, munitions workers and girls were in the hall at the time, only three were killed. All in the bus and some sheltering in doorways were killed and their bodies lay in the roadway and stores on both sides of the wrecked street.

Air Clear Over London

There was almost no Nazi activity over London tonight. The night alarm was sounded later than usual and the all clear came earlier than customary. Some bombs were reported dropped on a South Wales coast town, but the Germans apparently aimed principally at a western English town.

In the first registration of civilians April 5, he said, persons between the ages of 41 and 45 will be canvassed, and men of 41 and 42 who are not employed in certain industries will be the first called.

Bevin issued a special appeal to men with low physical ratings who have not been called for armed service to volunteer as munitions workers.

He also made a special appeal to women, saying "we must call for a great response from our women to run the industrial machine."

"There is a very urgent demand on the shipbuilding industry which must be met immediately. We must get back to the industry as many as possible of the skilled men who have left it during the past 15 years. There also is a special need for marine engineering which must be met."

Air Lines Form Cargo Carrying Plane Service

Chicago, March 16 (AP).—Formation of Air Cargo, Inc., to prepare for any expansion in the transportation of freight and express by air, was announced today by air line officials.

Col. Edgar S. Gorrell, president of the Air Transport Association of America, said the new organization was "wholly owned by four domestic airlines—American Air lines, Eastern Air lines, Trans-Continental and Western Air, and United Air lines.

"Within the near future, and certainly upon the termination of the present war, the transportation of property by air will become a far greater industry. The essentials of this industry are being created now through the manufacture of huge bombers and the transportation under all weather conditions of tons of bombs."

Alaska Lakes May Be Used As Air Fields

The possible use of Alaska's frozen lakes as emergency landing fields for big Army bombers was suggested by the War Department yesterday.

In reporting preliminary results of experiments at Fairbanks, the department said a four-motor B-17 "flying fortress" bomber had landed without mishap on the glare ice of a northern lake.

Weighing 22 tons or more, the plane was believed to be the first of its size ever to attempt a wheel landing under such circumstances.

Other experiments to determine how planes could be operated under severe conditions of an Arctic winter resulted, the War Department said, in improvements in the use of radio facilities, landing gear and deicing equipment.

The landing was made while the bomber was ferrying dried salmon to four dog teams en route from Chilkoot barracks to Ladd Field experimental station, at Fairbanks. The Thirty-sixth Bombardment Squadron and Eighteenth Pursuit Squadron have been engaged in testing operations tere in temperatures as low as 45 degrees below zero.

Raid Reveals Arm Cache

Belfast, Northern Ireland, March 16 (AP).—Police today detained four men and searched their houses following a raid on a Belfast factory where a machine gun, rifle, 21 revolvers and 1,500 rounds of ammunition believed hidden by the Irish Republican army were seized.

Cambridge Bombing Laid To Ex-Student

By Eddie Gilmore
Associated Press Staff Writer

Cambridge, March 16.—There is a strange story about a former Cambridge student, now a Nazi flier, who comes machine-gunning nearby villages and making the rounds of this ancient center of logic and classical lore.

"I'll tell you," said one native wrapping his hand around his pint of bitters, "this fellow was once at college here. He knows too much not to have been."

"Right you are, Alf," agreed another elder at the dart board. "He's a one all right."

A bank clerk repeated the story. "Shows you the value of a college education," he laughed. "But that isn't saying some of our chaps who attended Heidelberg aren't getting in some licks there."

Townfolk say the Nazi shows up on village market days, which vary the country over, and swoops down when the streets are fullest.

On one nearby town the lone raider dropped only one bomb—and this hit squarely on top of the post-office and knocked out all the telephones.

"There's talk," whispered the waiter at the hotel dining room, "that they know who he is. German fellow came over to Cambridge in the good old days. They say he wasn't a bad fellow, but he knows too much."

He pointed out that the college pastime of walking or cycling over the country roads to the many neat villages nearby would have given ample opportunity to learn the local setups.

The tactics employed by the plane gunner are usually the same. Picking an overcast sky, he drops from the clouds and comes as low as 150 feet sometimes, his guns blazing from one end of Main Street to the other. Then he swings around, returning with bombs splattering.

It's quite a homecoming to alma mater—if it is.

U. S. Colleges May Train British Medical Students

New York, March 16 (AP) The Rockefeller Foundation announced plans today for the training in American and Canadian medical colleges of British medical students whose schools have been damaged by bombing.

Raymond B. Fosdick, president, in a review of the foundation's activities, said $100,000 had been appropriated to initiate the plan and the first students would arrive during the spring.

He said only one teaching hospital in London had escaped bombing.

Twenty-five leading colleges, the review said, indicated "cordial willingness" to accept the students and some offered to waive tuition fees.

Fosdick said the plan was suggested by the late Lord Lothian, British Ambassador at Washington. Medical students are not subject to the draft in England.

British Beyond Aid Of U.S., Hitler Says

United States Congressional committee that British Prime Minister Churchill had declared in 1936 that Germany was growing too strong and must be destroyed, Hitler did not mention the United States directly.

"Fate and Freedom and Future"

Germany, he said in his 13-minute address, is entering the year 1941 "cool and determined to end that which started the year before. It is quite immaterial what part of the earth or in which sea or in what air space our German soldiers fight. They will know they battle for fate and freedom nad the future of our people forever."

Britain, he said, will be defeated in both blockade and air war.

"The air war which Churchill started will destroy not Germany but England itself," he declared. "Just so the blockade will not strike Germany but its inventor (England)."

Recalls 1940 Prediction

Going back to 1940, Hitler said:

"In exact knowledge of our preparations and plans, in boundless confidence in the German soldier, his armament and leadership and before all his attitude, I dared on Memorial Day 1940, to predict the battle before us would end in the most glorious victory in our history.

"Eight weeks later this battle started . . . (invasion of the Low Countries).

"Today German forces stand throughout the world, men and material strengthened to an inconceivable degree, ready to complete joyfully and confidently, that which was begun in the epochal year of 1940."

The German people, he went on, "feel they are carrying out the will of heroic ancestors. Beside the dead of the World War lie now the fallen in continuation of this battle. And again as then the sons of our people lie in distant places . . ."

Hitler then turned to his Italian allies.

Ideals the Same

"But we think also of the Italian soldiers, who as allies also must give up their lives in distant parts of the world," he said.

"Their ideals and objectives are the same as ours: the world is not here for a few people and an order based eternally on the distinction between the haves and the have-nots does not exist any more because the have-nots have determined to lay claim to their portion of God's earth . . .

"Behind us lies a winter of work. What remained to be improved has been done. The German army is now the strongest military instrument in our history.

"In the months of this winter our allies bore the brunt of the whole power of the British attack, but from now German forces again will resume their share of this load."

"Plutocracy" to Be Destroyed

"The international finance plutocracy wants to fight this war to the finish," Hitler said. "So the end of this war will and must be its destruction. Then may Providence find a way to lead their people, from whom the chains will be struck, into a better order."

Significantly, only a few men with field marshal's batons were present. One was the Austrian army's oldest generalissimo, Baron Eduard von Boehm-Ermolli, who stood on Hitler's right while Rudolf Hess was the party deputy on the Fuehrer's left.

Grand Admiral Erich Raeder, commander in chief of the navy, and, of the active field marshals, Walther von Brauchitsch, Erhard Milch and Wilhelm Keitel, chief of the high command, alone were present, indicating that the others are busy in the field.

Goering Absent

The most conspicuous absentee was Reichsmarshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering.

"He has a more important task at the moment," one official explained, obviously referring to the Luftwaffe's increased activity over England and Africa.

Flahking the high dignitaries on both sides of the Zeughaus' glass-covered court were wounded soldiers, some with bandaged hands or heads, some with arms in slings, some on crutches, some reclining in invalid chairs.

Behind these wounded soldiers were trophies from the Polish campaign—howitzers, machine guns and heavy cannon.

War May Produce Blessings, Says Fr. John J. Reilly

Apply the Gospel of the day to the part the United States is playing in attempting to preserve the democratic nations of the world, the Rev. John J. Reilly in his sermon yesterday at the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at Catholic University, referred to American help for the Allies. "Many living in this blessed country of ours," he said, "feel their burdens lightened by contrasting their lot, however miserable it might be, with the lot of those in other lands. Americans have never been so good-natured and grateful. They feel they have been spared the major portion of the cup of bitterness others have been forced to drink. They have learned to be most patient. This is an exalted point of view, one that has possibilities, and if such an attitude can be supernaturalized, for example, by thanking God for this, the war abroad will be just another evil from which unexpected blessings flow."

Referring directly to the lend-lease bill, Father Reilly cited the sufferings of Christ as substitutions for what the Saviour suffered for the sins of others. "Is it not strange," Father Reilly asked, "that we are substituting now for England? There never was much love between the two, and our motives when we spoke of war debts in the past were always misinterpreted. The same atonement for the deeds of others should go on in every life that bears a Christ-like trace."

U. S. Hungarians Pledge Loyalty

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, March 16.—Loyalty to "but one leader, the President of the United States," and willingness to "give all we have" to deliver the fallen democracies from bondage were expressed in words and assenting cheers today by Americans of Hungarian birth or descent at a patriotic rally sponsored by the New York Council of American Citizens of Hungarian origin. The meeting marked the ninety-third anniversary of the revolution of March, 1848, in Hungary.

Features of the rally, sobered this year by the Hungarian pact with Nazi Germany, were speeches by representatives of Gov. Herbert H. Lehman and Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, and the presence of representatives of Greece, China, Rumania, Poland, Austria, France, Norway, Sweden and Denmark.

West Africa De Gaullists Suffer Purge

By Harold Denny
Copyright by New York Times

Freetown, Sierra Leone, March 16.—Responsible neutrals here, who have been recently in French African territory, assert that if Gen. Maxime Weygand should declare unequivocally for war against Germany the great bulk of the French people and the troops in the colonies would rise in his support. But the policy now being dictated from Dakar, administrative capital of French West Africa, is definitely anti-British.

In addition, even the French colonists and army officers, who are thoroughly anti-German, now do not dare even to express anti-German sentiment for fear that reprisals will be taken against their families in France or against relatives who are now prisoners of war in German hands. Their fear has been heightened by a purge that has been carried out in French West Africa against officials who support Gen. de Gaulle.

After the French collapse last June, partisans of "Free France," who apparently were in the great majority, were not impeded in their efforts to stir up the colonies to resist Germany. A number of French soldiers were even able to slip across the border into this British colony of Sierra Leone.

"Vacation" a Terrible Sentence

But gradually the governor general began to clamp down. Whether he is positively anti-British or is merely forced to act in an anti-British manner on orders from Vichy cannot be said.

But a purge of the De Gaullists began. Officials, some ranking even as high as local administrators, were transferred to France on "vacation." Since life in France is now bleak, this was a terrible sentence.

The French navy was anti-British after the armistice, and the British attack on French warships at Oran intensified this. The British bombardment at Dakar also bred more hostility toward Britain.

This correspondent received a first-hand intimation of the feeling of French naval personnel on a voyage by a small sailboat from Portuguese Guinea to Sierra Leone, passing French Guinea en route. The boat was becalmed while trying to pass Konakri, French Guinea's one seaport, and it drifted into French territorial waters at the very point where the French have built fortifications on the islands outside Konakri.

The French, naturally, arrested us for investigation. French naval officer who came aboard insisted that we have a thorough going over and stayed to see it through.

Blames U. S. Britain

This correspondent's British visas obviously did not help. He was questioned exhaustively about America's reaction to the Oran incident.

The French officer was informed that Americans generally felt that the British were forced to take that tragic course. In reply he angrily exclaimed:

"We would never let the Germans take our ships."

And then he outlined the whole course leading up to this war, and placed the blame upon the United States and Britain.

He was especially incensed at the British seizure of a French "banana boat" a few days before. These French banana boats, which are modern air-conditioned ships with refrigeration equipment and fine passenger accommodations, have been sailing weekly—for Marseille, the correspondent was told, though this would mean passing heavily patrolled Gibraltar.

107th Ship Seized

Few people at Konakri believed that the French were getting these bananas. They believe that the shipments are going on to the Germans. The bananas not only have great food value but provide banana oil, which is used in painting airplane fabric. But this naval officer exclaimed:

"That is the hundred and seventh French ship the British have captured."

To this the British reply that the French started it by seizing British ships in African ports. So, as things stand now, with the Dakar governor checking every expression of pro-British sentiment, the De Gaulle movement seems to be driven underground in French West Africa for the time being at least.

1,300 CCC Men Assigned to Army Camp Projects

More than 1,300 Civilian Conservation Corps enrollees, a total of six and one-half companies, have been assigned to national defense construction and clearing projects at Camp Blanding, Fla., and Fort Leonard Wood, near Rolla, Mo.

James J. McEntee, CCC director, announced yesterday that this assignment brings the total of CCC men assigned to Army areas to 4,600. Four companies were sent to Camp Blanding and two and one-half to Fort Leonard Wood. Two hundred men are working at Fort George G. Meade, Md., and more than 200 at Fort Belvoir, Va.

Middleburg Roars Greeting To 'Iron Duke'

Special Dispatch to The Post

Middleburg, Va., March 16.—Society foxhunters and dirt farmers, 1,000 strong, lined the mile-long Main Street of this country town tonight to roar a welcome to the shrapnel-scarred "Iron Duke," a mobile tea kitchen from Britain, which is touring Virginia.

Along an avenue lighted by strings of electric bulbs, the regular Sunday throng, augmented by hundreds who came from miles around, watched the rolling food dispenser come into town behind the screaming sirens of 20 State policemen on motorcycles and Middleburg's sole fire engine, manned by volunteer firemen.

Mayor Courtland Smith, widely known Virginia horseman, led the parade in his car. With the policemen and firemen, Smith joined the British sandwich wagon at Aldie, 6 miles from here.

The bells of Middleburg's three churches, Baptist, Methodist and Episcopal, pealed a greeting as the mobile kitchen turned into the courtyard of the Red Fox Tavern at Four Corners under a searchlight barrage that turned the grounds into daytime brightness.

There Mrs. S. Hugh Treherne-Thomas, American-born wife of a British army officer, opened up shop and invited the neighbors in for a cup of tea. A former officer of the British Women's Voluntary Service, who is accompanying the Iron Duke on its 5,000-mile American tour, Mrs. Treherne-Thomas urged the crowd to help send similar aid to Britain.

Before the evening was through, estimates indicated that more than $1,000 had been contributed for that purpose. A benefit dinner, attended by about 150 persons, followed the courtyard scene.

The kitchen was driven by Maj. Miles Reeber, United States Army, nephew of Gen. Sherman Miles. Mementoes of the Iron Duke's months in bomb-battered London were shown.

Among these who attended the benefit dinner were the Countess Miriam Caracciolo de Melito, the former Miriam Crosby; Col. and Mrs. John Butler, Col. and Mrs. Harry Whitfield, Mrs. Raymond Belmont, Miss Winifred Maddux, Miss Charlotte Noland, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel C. Sands, Mrs. Murray Black and Miss Barbara Ravenscroft.

From Middleburg the kitchen will go on to Warrenton, The Plains and Catlett.

Curb Inflation, Sloan Warns In G. M. Report

By International News Service

New York, March 16.—Alfred P. Sloan, jr., chairman of General Motors Corporation, announced in the company's annual report tonight that this concern will do "more than its part" in the national defense program, but simultaneously warned against the danger of inflation when the program is completed.

"If inflation is to be averted," he said, "it must be controlled at its incipience."

Sales of General Motors products throughout the world in 1940 showed a 30 per cent increased over 1939, while taxes soared 180 per cent over figures for the preceeding year.

Earnings after taxes were increased 6.7 per cent and dividends but 7.2 per cent.

In addition, regular employes received highest average annual earnings in the corporation's history, with $1,804 for 1940. The 1940 pay roll rose more than $100,000,000 above that of 1939, to total $402,246,017.

Tax Bill Doubled

The corporation's 1940 tax bill totaled $210,411,000, more than twice that of the preceding year, Sloan revealed.

Merchandise sold domestically and abroad in 1940 was valued at $1,794,936,642. The number of passenger cars and trucks totaled 2,025,343. Of that number 1,860,354 were sold within the United States for a new record.

Among other corporation facts, Sloan revealed existence of 397,928 stockholders at the end of 1940.

Earnings less income and excess profits taxes amounted to $195,631,721. Earnings on each share of common stock were $4.32. Dividends on the common stock were $3.75 and the regular $5 on the $5 series preferred.

The amount of $24,578,577 was retained in the business for its protection and expansion.

Net working capital at the end of 1940 amounted to 477,940,113. Cash and marketable securities totaled $433,207,722. Included in the last amount are special deposits of $38,500,351 held on Government contracts.

Tribute to Knudsen

Included in the report was a tribute to William S. Knudsen, who resigned from the presidency of the corporation after being connected with it for 20 years to take up his present Government defense post.

Sloan, in describing the corporation's role in the defense program, declared:

"It believes that the emergency involves two prime objectives: First and foremost, to make America impregnable to attack from without; second, to maintain the strongest and most virile economy based upon the fundamental principles of free enterprise.

"While we are preparing to defend ourselves from aggression without, we must not overlook the importance of defending our way of living. We must win not only the defense, or if need be the war, but in doing so we must not lose the peace."

Asserting that consumer purchase may have to be restricted in certain fields in order to permit increased output of defense materials, Sloan added:

"One of the greatest calamities that can befall a nation, and one that is especially liable to occur during a situation such as now exists in the United States, is inflation . . .

"History shows that all great efforts, such as the national defense program, have been accompanied by a phenomenal rise in the prices of nearly all classes of goods and commodities. History also shows that if inflation is to be averted, it must be controlled at its incipience. If that is not done, it is unlikely that any subsequent control can be made effective.

"The forces that lead to inflation are numerous. In all probability they can be controlled by preventing credit excesses, by a policy of increasing the yield of taxes through increasing the productive output of the Nation by utilizing its full productive capacity, by preventing abnormal increases in wage rates, by controlling consumer purchasing power in relation to the available supply of consumer goods, and by other means."

Dr. Shotwell Urges Long-Term View On Peace Workers

Dr. James T. Shotwell, director of the economics and history division of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, declared in an annual report yesterday that workers for peace must take a long-term view and prepare for a revitalized peace movement after the present war ends.

The challenge of the present international crisis is so great, he said, "that it obviously calls for much more than a concentration upon immediate objectives under the stress of emergency."

"Never before our time," he said, "had statesmen given serious consideration to the need for the elimination of war as an instrument of policy. For a brief but unforgettable moment the peace movement played a dominant role in international affairs.

"It failed; but to regard its failure as the last chapter of the story would be a conclusion of the utmost levity. There will be many centuries after Hitler."

Leaves Paradise To Cash Check

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

MRS. RICHARD STOCKTON, in Philadelphia from Tahiti on a 7,000-mile trip to cash a check, said "it's a paradise all right but it doesn't retail right now at $75 a month." The war has made funds unavailable there

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, March 16.—Mrs. Richard Stockton has come 7,000 miles—all the way from "Paradise"—to cash a check.

Last year she and her husband sold their thriving gift shop in Bryn Mauer, an exclusive "main line" suburg and set out for Hahiti in search of a paradise where every man could be a king on $75 a month, including champagne at 60 cents a quart, with a war-torn world a million rum punches away.

"It's paradise all right," she reported today, "but it doesn't retail right now at $75 a month. Not since the war clamped down on us.

"We thought we were getting away from war and ended up practically in a ringside seat. After France fell we couldn't get any money from our bank over here, so I took our last $100 and came home to cash a check."

The French possession in the South Seas is somewhat like the story books describe, she went on, date.

Cigarettes once sold for 8 cents a pack, but there aren't any now, she except they don't bring it up to said. Champagne was 60 cents a quart, while the supply lasted, and $1.50 woul buy a quart of Scotch, providing, of course, there is some.

The United States froze all shipments of money to French territory last summer, allowing each American only $100 a month. That sum, she said, often doesn't get there on time because the island only sees a ship every three months or so. That limits foodstuff supplies too.

"My husband is making a photographic study of the islands," she said, "and when he's tired of that he goes goggle fishing. You swim under water and spear fish for dinner. He's awfully good at it, but you know you can get to hate fish."

State Police Guard Clerks At Vanadium

By the Associated Press

Bridgeville, Pa., March 16.—Under protection of State motor policemen, "white collar" employes worked today behind the gates of the strike-affected Vanadium Corporation plant in this Pittsburgh suburb, loading materials needed by defense industries.

Late today two freight cars, apparently loaded, were pulled out of the plant and taken on their way by a locomotive while a handful of pickets watched glumly.

Representatives of 400 striking workmen refused earlier to comply with urgent requests for "cooperation" by Sidney Hillman, associate director of the Office of Production Management.

Governer Calls Police

The police were here on orders of Gov. Arthur H. James who ordered "the protection necessary to take out these products which are absolutely essential to national defense and which are holding up other plants."

Strikers had refused to remove 7,500 pounds of alloys. The company moved eight box cars to a loading platform after State police were assigned, and the white collar men went in. Cars carrying them inside were unmolested.

Frank Pugne, president of the local union, said last night:

"If they're going to do it, that's all there's to it. It's a violation of the contract, because they (the white collar men) are doing work belonging to union men."

Strike a Month Old

The company dismissed the strikers a month ago after they were absent from work five days, but C. I. O. Regional Director Anthony J. Federoff, whose pleas that they return have been ignored, recently reported the company was willing to rehire all but six strike leaders.

Gov. James, in assigning police at the request of Sheriff John Heinz, said:

"It's an outlaw strike. These men are on strike in spite of the recommendations of their national officers."

The C. I. O. Vanadium Workers Union called the strike on grounds the company had hired six non-union plant guards.

Naval Ari Expert Sent to Australia

London, March 17 (AP).—The admiralty announced today that Vice Admiral Sir Guy Royle, Britain's top-ranking naval aviation expert, will be sent to Australia as first naval member of the Commonwealth naval board.

The appointment, effective May 15, is regarded as indicative of the increasing importance of the airplane in coordinating British strategy in the vital Pacific area around Singapore.

Defense Lag Laid to Draft And Strikes

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, March 16.—Industrial production for defense is being impeded by the drafting of trained workers for the Army, labor disputes and housing shortages for workers, Warren H. Atherton, chairman of the National Defense Committee of the American Legion said today after completing a 7,000-mile inspection tour of factories and military and naval establishments in 11 States.

Atherton said another threat to the defense program was a campaign now under way by a Communist clique in the Congress of Industrial organizations to unionize all tool and die makers. He explained that many industrialists had told him of this during his survey, and emphasized that if it were established the Communists would be in control of the bottleneck of all industrial expansion.

The discussion of defense progress and problems was given by Mr. Atherton in an interview. It was supplementary to the full report made by him to the legion's national executive committee in Indianapolis on Friday, in which he said that "the United States is not prepared to wage effective war."

To bring the United States to a position of complete preparedness, he said today, "and at the same time supply those who defend democracy abroad with ships, airplanes, tanks and munitions, and food, will take all-out sacrifice on the part of labor, the farmer, the businessman and every other American citizen." Atherton praised industry as a whole as "cooperating to the utmost," and asserted that "work stoppages must cease."

He said he found everywhere on his tour a shortage of trained workmen, and that the problem was accentuated by the draft. He said this problem would become more acute daily as the expansion program continued.

"The plant officials feel that this is a mechanical and production war, and that there should be standardization of deferment regulations for men in industry," Mr. Atherton said. "They favor lowering draft ages from 35 to 27. I agree on that. Most of the skilled workmen are above that age, and it would stabilize production Also, there is a sufficient reservoir of manpower for the Army between the ages of 21 and 27."

Mexico Plans Modern Army With U.S. Pact

By the Associated Press

Mexico City, March 16.—A modern streamlined army to make Mexico's military collaboration with the United States most effective in an emergency is under consideration by President Manuel Avila Camacho's government, sources close to the ministry of national defense said today.

Such an armed force—numbering about 75,000 active troops—would be Mexico's method of implementing the mutual defense pact with her "good neighbor," which is now being negotiated in Washington, these sources said.

The cost of such a military development is being carefully analyzed, as well as the need of financial assistance from the United States to carry it.

Streamlining would not imply a grea deal of mechanization, but rather of tactics and organizations, it was said. The Mexican army now has eight light tanks and two artillery regiments equippped with 75s.

New arms to be acquired probably would include more antiaircraft guns, a few tanks, heavy mortars and additional 75s.

The ministry of defense last week ordered the 63,000 men now comprising the army to be concentrated in places yet to be designated so that they could receive intensive training in modern tactics. This instruction, it was understood, would be directed by officers who have returned from observing the rapid expansion nd streamlining of the United States armed forces.

U. S. Experts To Start Tax Study Soon

Heavy tax burdens are soon to be shaped, now that the March 15 income tax payment date has passed and Treasury officials are able to calculate more definitely the Nation's revenue for the year.

With President Roosevelt stressing the need for cheerful sacrifices to pay for the defense outlays, Representative Doughton, of North Carolina, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, said last night that preliminary work on revision of the tax set-up will begin shortly. The revision, with heavy increases in rates and broadening of the base predicted, has awaited only determination of the amount of money to be yielded by this year's payments on income.

Representative Doughton pointed out that it would take some time—a week or so—for Treasury officials to obtain sufficient data to enable them to present the new tax recommendations even in tentative form to the committee. He expected the committee and Treasury experts to go to work on this problem soon, but pointed out that it was a hard, time-consuming job to devise a new tax bill on a scientific, equitable basis which would produce the revenue sought with a minimum of disturbance to the Nation's economy. He predicted that the committee would have to devote several months to this task.

Representative McCormack, speaking individually as a veteran of ten years' membership on the Ways and Means Committee, likewise pointed out that the working out of new tax legislation was a long, laborious job, if it was to be done in the "right way."

"Nobody likes to pay taxes," he remarked, "but everybody ought to realize now that we have to pay the price of security. This should be accomplished with the least possible interference with business, and it will take time to solve that problem. My personal opinion is that we should aim at $1,500,000,000 rather than $1,000,000,000, as has been suggested, in finding new revenues in the forthcoming tax bill."

Rockville Civic Group Planned

An association of business and professional men has been organized at Rockville, Md., "for the purpose of formulating and developing ideas and suggestions for improvement of the town."

At its organization meeting in the firehouse Wednesday night the group chose V. C. Wilson as temporary president and William Mason as temporary secretary. Elected temporary members of the board of directors were J. Somerville Dawson, the Rev. J. V. Lilly, Barney Welsh, Dr. W. S. Murphy and David Betts.

Officers and directors were instructed to prepare a constitution and by-laws to be presented at the group's next meeting April 9. A name for the group will be adopted at this time.

Art Dealer Tells Story of Intrigue in Mellon Effort to Buy Vermeer for National Gallery

Offered $1,000,000 For Painting Now Owned by Hitler

A $1,000,000 painting by Jan Vermeer that now hangs in Adolph Hitler's Munich palace would have been in the National Gallery of Art today had not an assassin's bullet destroyed a two-year effort by Andrew Mellon to obtain it.

This was the story told here yesterday by a portly New York art dealer, Abris Silberman, who came to Washington for the dedication of the Constitution Avenue art center.

The thousands of invited guests at tonight's ceremonies and later visitors to the gallery will see three other paintings by the Seventeenth Century Dutch artist, whose coloring and luminous brush work have been ranked above that of his contemporary Rembrandt.

But the celebrated painting of "The Painter in His Study," Vermeer's only self-portrait, missed the Mellon collection by a hair's breadth after prolonged negotiations filled with intrigue and high adventure.

Was Mellon Agent

Silberman, who was born in Hungary 44 years ago, a member of the family that served for generations as court art dealer for the Hapsburg emperors, said he was Mellon's agent in the effort to obtain the masterpiece.

The painting was in the Czernin collection in Vienna eight years ago when Silberman initiated negotiations.

Three groups, Silberman said, had to be satisfied before the deal could go through: the Czernin family, the courts which controlled changes in trusts, and the Dollfuss government, which had to grant export privileges.

Weekly, for almost two years, Silberman reported the progress of negotiations to Mellon at his Biltmore Hotel suite in New York.

"Money was never considered," Silberman said. "He had set his heart on the painting, and although the price was boosted to $1,000,000 before we were through, he was determined to get the picture."

Stage Is Set

Austria in 1934 became a pawn in a power struggle between Hitler and Mussolini, and Vienna was wracked with political turmoil, Silberman said. But the two men in New York planned, and Silberman's Vienna branch managers schemed and cajoled and raised the bid until the deal was virtually arranged. A Mellon courier was poised in Paris awaiting the signal to speed to Vienna with a $1,000,000 letter of credit.

In July, 1934, Dollfuss was shot to death in a Nazi putsch. The groundwork that had been so carefully laid was destroyed. It became impossible to remove the Vermeer from Austria.

When Austria was swallowed by the Third Reich in March, 1938, the painting was transferred to Hitler's personal collection in Munich.

"It was one of the major disappointments of Mr. Mellon's art collecting career, I believe," Silberman said. "When it seemed that we were about to obtain the picture, I asked him whether he would exhibit it for awhile in my New York Gallery. He said yes, but I couldn't mention his name.

"You can say," he said, 'that it was acquired by a man who intends to donate it to the Nation.'"

"This was the first inkling anyone had of the National Gallery of Art idea."

2 County Youths In 4th Contest

John Beall, of Clarksburg, and Melvin Walters, of Germantown, have completed 4-H farm record projects on their fathers' farms to qualify for the International Harvester contest.

The youths have kept complete records of business on their fathers' farms and have analyzed and summarized these records, according to Rufus B. King, assistant agricultural agent for the county. The youths will compete for county, State and national awards.

Silver Spring Library Expansion Sought

Howard W. Bailey, president of the Silver Spring Library Association, has named a committee to work out plans for expansion of library facilities if the State Legislature approves the project.

Market Plan Of AAA Hits Congress Snag

Agriculture Department proposals for tight Government control over corn and wheat marketing ran into opposition yesterday from some Congress members from the grain belts.

Members of the Senate Agriculture Committee said that because of concern that the proposals were "too drastic" they had asked Secretary Wickard and his aides to revise them.

With granaries bulging with surplus corn and wheat due to loss of export markets since the European war, Wickard proposed to the Agriculture Committee that penalties for marketing surpluses of the grains be increased from the present 15 cents a bushel to 40 cents for corn and 50 cents for wheat. He also asked that if farmers approved marketing controls for one year that these remain in operation for the second consecutive year unless conditions changed.

Before these controls could be applied, two-thirds of the farmers producing the crops would have to vote for them. Wickard said he would hold a marketing quota referendum among wheat farmers in May and among corn farmers early next fall.

Senator Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, said farm-minded Senators were worried about the proposed heavy penalties for marketing surpluses. He agreed, he said, that penalties of "only 15 cents a bushel for marketing excess grain are too low but I wonder if 40 and 50 cents a bushel is not too high."

Senator Lucas (Democrat), of Illinois, said he feared that farmers might fear they were being "regimented" if asked to apply controls for two years instead of a single season.

"Selfish politicians might stir up a row," he added. "They would say yes if for two years, then it may be five or ten years."

Wickard informed Senators that if quotas were approved that only the "excess production" on each farm would face the stiff penalties. Growers who did not cooperate in the present acreage allotment program would be allowed to market "normal production" without penalty.

Va. Spends $244,537 on School Bonds

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., March 16 (AP).—The State division of school libraries and textbooks purchased $244,537.95 worth of books for Virginia public school libraries during the school year ended last June 30, Director C. W. Dickinson, jr., said today in a report to Dr. Sidney B. Hall, State superintendent of public instruction.

"The new rate of matching local funds with State funds on a dollar-for-dollar basis is required by law and the new method of distribution of the State aid library fund by the State board of education stimulated several county and city school boards to make extra appropriations, with the result that each of 43 counties and 7 cities purchased more than $2,000 worth of books," the report said.

The average number of volumes in each library of the junior and senior high schools was increased from 1,820 to 2,617 from 1938-39 to 1939-40, despite the fact that the number of these schools increased from 477 to 480. There now are 151 junior and senior high schools which contain 2,000 or more volumes, and of these 29 contain 3,000 to 4,000 volumes; 14 have 4,000 to 5,000, 15 have 5,000 to 10,000, 2 have 10,000 to 12,000 and 6 have more than 12,000.

Thirty-six per cent of the junior and senior high schools met the standard of the State board of education requiring local school boards to employ teacher-librarians who hold Virginia collegiate professional certificates with a minimum of six session hours of college credit in library science, although this standard did not become effective until the present school year.

Twenty-one per cent of the librarians employed in junior and senior high schools had the equivalent of a full year's work in library science. The librarian spent two or more hours a day in library service in 56 per cent and devoted full time to such service in 31 per cent of these schools.

Two all-day training classes were conducted in different sections of the State for WPA library clerks in 31 groups by 28 school librarians and 7 public libraries. Materials discussed were based on the "Library Manual for Public Schools."

The WPA library clerks, it was reported, assisted in keeping the libraries open, helped to accession, shelf-list, inventory, repair and clean books, prepare new books for circulation, circulate books and keep the necessary records. In some cases they conducted story hours, prepared posters, displays and other publicity, typed and filed shelf-list and catalog cards, prepared pamphlets, pictures and clippings and filed them.

The 480 schools' libraries reported a total circulation of 3,565,120 books, including 122,445 to adults, 1,061,198 to elementary school children and 2,381,477 to high school students. Seventy per cent of these high school libraries also serve elementary school pupils, and 33 per cent remain open during the summer vacation.

Mexican Officials Studying Prince's Kidnaping Story

Tiajuana, Mexico, March 16 (INS).—Mexican immigration authorities tonight took charge of a man found wandering through Tiajuana streets who claimed to be Prince Alexis Romanoff, son of the late Czar Nicholas of Russia.

Both American and Mexican officials who questioned him were skeptical of his story that he was kidnaped by two men in Reno, Nev., Thursday and driven to the border city.

At the Tiajuana jail, the "prince" said he was not sure of the motive.

"It might have been an article I wrote and which was published in Finland," he said. "In that article I stated I was ready to take the oath of the fatherland. My abductors must have been agents of the present form of government in my country."

The "prince" said the last words of the men as they shoved him from the car were "Just try and get back into the United States now."

Recently cleared of charges of entering the United States illegally, Romanoff, at the time of the asserted kidnaping, was free on bail awaiting trial in Reno on charges of practicing medicine without a license.

(Editor's note—A headline in yesterday's Washington Post erroneously referred to Prince Alexis as "Prince Mike." The Post regrets the error.)

Lewis May Seek Byron's Seat

Former Representative David J. Lewis is willing to accept the Democratic nomination for the post left vacant by the recent death of Representative Byron of the Sixth Maryland Distrit, it was learned yesterday.

Lewis, now a member of the National Mediation Board, is definitely willing to make the fight for the post he held for 14 years, friends revealed yesterday. Lewis for the first time made definite his willingness to run in conversations with friends yesterday morning.

Lewis is in fine physical condition and ready for the arduous campaigning and assumption of duties at the Capitol, friends said.

Indications pointed to choice of Lewis as the Democratic candidate as it became increasingly apparent that W. Preston Lane, Democratic National Committeeman for Maryland, is disinclined to sacrifice his business interests and committeeship to make the race. Lane also is said to be disinclined to be placed in the position of taking the nomination from Mrs. William D. Byron, widow of the Congressman, who is conducting an active campaign for the nomination.

Lane had been a close personal friend of Congressman Byron and as a relation by marriage of the Byron family.

Little enthusiasm has been shown in Montgomery County for Mrs. Byron's candidacy, even mong women's groups, the practical politicians having decided that a woman can't beat Charles Stewart, believed almost certain to be the Republican candidate.

It is because of the belief of Democrats that Stewart will be the Republican candidate that the name of Lewis has been pushed to the fore. Stewart's principal strength is in Garrett and Allegany Counties.

Junior Interviewers Appointed by NYA

Appointment of Natalie L. Mess, of Forest Glen; Anna G. Burns, of Monrovia; Ethel Grubb, of Poolesville, and Ruth Davis, of Germantown, as junior interviewers for the National Youth Administration in Montgomery County was announced yesterday by Charles A. Opel, jr., local NYA director.

Miss Mess will do duty on Tuesday, Thursday and Friday at the Maryland State Employment Service in Silver Spring. Miss Burns will interview on those same days at the Damascus High School. Miss Grubb is stationed at Poolesville High School and Miss Davis can be reached at the Montgomery County Health Office on Tuesday, Thursday and Friday.

The National Youth Administration is giving part-time work to inexperienced youths so as to qualify them for full-time jobs as experienced workers.

An elaborate entertainment program, including a kiddie revue from the Charles Demma Studio of Dancing, will mark Sidney Lust's Easter Frolic to be presented at his theater in Bethesda, Saturday morning, April 12, 10 a. m. The affair will be free to the children of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase area.

It Was a Cold World to Calf Cradled in Snow After Birth

ORPHAN OF STORM—Fred Cooper, herdsman at the Sunset Hills Farm, Fairfax County, Va., feeds a 10-day-old calf that became lost in a snowstorm March 7 shortly after it was born. The calf was found 24 hours later under 10 inches of snow, "as warm as toast"

A. Smith Bowman, proprietor of Sunset Hills Farm in Fairfax County, Va., yesterday disclosed how a new-born heifer calf spent the first 24 hours of its life in a blinding snowstorm and suffered no apparent ill effects.

The calf, which is solid white, was born March 7 in the heaviest snowfall this winter. It crawled away from its mother and blended into the deepening snow. Fred Cooper, herdsman, and a dozen other employes of the farm, searched all day without success.

Hardly expecting to find the tiny animal alive, J. A. Curry, a farmhand, continued the search the next day and found the calf as "warm as toast" in 10 inches of snow. Bowman said the calf apparently had lain under the snow all night with just is nose poking out.

Although they don't usually name their calves, dairymen at the farm said they thought "Snowball" would be a good one for the heifer.

O'Conor Says He'll Rename Judge Lindley

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., March 16.—Gov. O'Conor said today in a statement directed to the General Assembly that he was "pleased to announce it is my intention" to reappoint Chief Judge D. Lindley Sloan, Cumberland Republican, whose term expires later this year.

An administration-backed bill, reducing the number of appeals judges from eight to six and giving the jurists a purely appellate function, easily passed the House last week and now is before the Senate, where a battle may develop.

Sloan, as chief judge of the Fourth Judicial District, which comprises Allegany, Washington and Garrett Counties, is a member of the Court of Appeals.

"With so much attention being focused upon our judicial system," O'Conor's statement said, "it occurs to me that the members of the Legislature might have a right to know what I propose to do when the present term of Chief Judge D. Lindley Sloan expires later this month.

"I am pleased to announce that it is my intention to reappoint Chief Judge Sloan, which appointment will be necessary to continue him in office until the general election of 1942."

The measure to reorganize the appeals court, in the form of a constitutional amendment, would be voted upon in the 1942 election.

"Judge Sloan has rendered most valuable service in his 15 years on our court of appeals," O'Conor continued.

"The experience which he has gained makes him a valuable member of the court, particularly at time when many changes are occurring on our appellate tribunal. Therefore, I have no hesitancy in stating that it is my determination to tender him the appointment when his present term expires.

"The fact that Judge Sloan is a Republican has no bearing upon the present issue. We need on our highest court men of demonstrated capacity, unquestioned integrity and wide experience. Certainly Judge Sloan should not be disqualified because he happens to be affiliated with the opposite party.

"If, in considering provisions for reorganizing the court of appeals system, the members of the General Assembly are interested to know whether Judge Sloan will be on the bench at the next election, I am able to say that his appointment to serve until that time is now assured."

N. A. M. Urges Lockout, Strike Curbs

By the Associated Press

New York, March 16.—The National Association of Manufacturers suggested today that penalties should be enforced against employers and employes to prevent or reduce industrial disputes in national defense industries.

The recommendation was included in a six-point program which had as its basis a 40-day waiting period before strikes or lockouts could be initiated.

The N. A. M. said if the recent rate of strikes continued throughout 1941 there would be an increase of 82 per cent over 1940 in the number of man-days lost as a result of such disputes.

Upon decision for a strike or lockout, the association said an investigation of the dispute should be made within 10 days by an impartial committee appointed either by the President or within the departments of War or Navy. After a statement of the facts was made to authorized officers, it should be made public, the association declared.

To provide for possible failure of voluntary methods, the association recommended legislation which could find a violating employer guilty of an unfair labor practice under the National Labor Relations Act or permit the dismissal of guilty employes.

Employes declared guilty would be denied any benefits or remedies under the NLRA, while employes would not be entitled to reinstatement or back pay.

The association said the legislation should also provide that the secret vote of a majority of workers should prevail; that the Government may maintain appropriate actions in the courts to prevent such strikes or lockouts; and that jurisdictional disputes between rival unions be outlawed on defense programs.

Other points on the program included assertions the defense emergency should not be used to bring about changes in bargaining relationships and that the term "national defense contract" should include any contract affecting defense production.

British Victory Seems Main Interest of Tallulah Bankhead

WANTS TO HELP—Tallulah Bankhead, star of "The Little Foxes," at the National, said yesterday she was ready for a week's performance in New York for the benefit of England, China and Greece, the management permitting

Tallulah wasn't tired, which shows a woman's strength, but she should have been while reclining here yesterday in a sleek blue pair of lounging trousers and a pink lounging jacket with a glittery doodad at the bosom.

Rather, Miss Bankhead, star of "The Little Foxes" at the National Theater this week, is ready to do a week's performance in New York for benefit of England, China and Greece, the management permitting. The whole company is, she said excitedly. The whole company and the electrician. "And don't forget him because he would be back of the scenes and getting no recognition."

Why she isn't tired, she couldn't say. For she has traveled far and known tribulations. Her tour totaled 17,418 miles, and touched 45 States. En route she learned her brand-new house burned down in Rockland County, N. Y.; she encountered a heat wave in St. Louis and a blizzard in Minneapolis; also a terrific thunderstorm in Portland, Oreg., and a flood in California.

Much of the while she was "so frustrated" over the delays in passing the lend-lease bill. Then she was stricken with the flu and sinus trouble. She joined the Press Club in San Francisco. "Get me my card, Dora," she called to a friend.

And there could be no "nerve tonic." "I decided not to take a drink until the British have won the war and I haven't had one since Dunkirk," she said.

She is proud of the South, where she was born. It wants to help Britain so much, she said. She hung on the President's words Saturday night and "I love him as much as I do Churchill. "If you want great leaders you must have great people and they seem now to be rallying behind him as the British did behind Churchill."

She didn't want to talk of love, particularly of her agreement with John Emory, her husband, that they separate, announced March 8.

Hoover Plan Backed by 84 Church Heads

By the Associated Press

New York, March 16.—Eighty-four American religious leaders, in a statement supporting the Hoover plan to provide food for Europe's conquered democracies, asserted today that "if we produce another generation of shriveled bodies and distorted minds there will be again an unbalanced future."

Expressing belief that the Hoover plan safeguarded the interests of Great Britain and would contribute nothing to Germany, the clergymen added:

"There is no Christian reason for continuing among these friendly people the tragedies of famine and epidemic.

"We believe the future of Europe cannot be built on starved, diseased people with minds and emotions charged with hate.

"We believe the compassionate example and teachings of Jesus Christ leave us no alternative as His followers . . . It is to Him and to this suffering humanity that we owe our first allegiance."

Word From Queen Elizabeth May Win $15,000 for Psychic

By Inez Robb

International News Service Turf Editor

New York, March 16.—It's no news that for $15,000 many people will try anything once.

But it is amazing, nontheless, what a brave and death-defying feat of psychic phenomena is to be conducted on St. Patrick's night by a lady psychic who will try to get in touch with the spirit of Queen Elizabeth who ruled England from 1558 to 1603.

It's the same Queen who was responsible for the subjugation of Ireland by England in the last year of her reign. Yet Miss Rose Anne Ericson, the lady psychic and ordained minister of the Chapel of the Eternal Star, will endeavor to communicate with the spirit of the departed Queen on St. Patrick's Day in the evening.

If Miss Ericson can contact the Queen through the wailing of banshees and the general spirit of Celtic static that fills the air on St. Patrick's night, then I say she deserves the $15,000 offered for such psychic phenomenia by the Scientific American.

Miss Ericson will try to contact the Queen in the self-same surroundings in which the Queen's father, that scamp Henry VIII, once slept.

The walls of a room in a house at Sandwich, England, where Henry once visited, are now decorating the interior of one of New York's great department stores. It is in this reconstructed room that the lady psychic will try to get a word out of good Queen Bess.

Joseph Dunninger, the outstanding authority on imaginary and illusionary effects, is chairman of the Scientific American committee. No less than six United States Presidents have asked him down from time to time to display his amazing talents. It is him on whom the committee depends to preserve its $15,000 by his ability to duplicate through natural or scientific means any "supernatural" feats set before it.

Hope for Early Accord in N. Y. Bus Strike Fades

New York, March 16 (AP).—The possibility of early settlement of a strike which has tied up almost all of Manhattan's surface transportation since last Monday faded today as the Transport Workers Union (C. I. O.) appealed to Mayor LaGuardia not to permit nonunion operation of buses, should such a move be attempted.

Michael J. Quill, international president of the union, declared at a strike meeting "that operation of buses with nonunion men can result only in trouble."

Joseph T. McCarthy, vice president of both the Fifth Avenue Coach Co. and the New York City Omnibus Corporation, whose 3,500 employes are on strike, said no arrangement had been made to run the buses with strikebreakers.

He added, however: "If our men comeback—that will be different."

Moroccan Ruler Of Tangier Zone Ousted by Spain

Tangier, Morocco, March 16 (AP).—The Spanish government abolished the last vestige of internationalism in the Tangier zone today by ordering the ouster of the Moroccan native nominal ruler.

The ruler's palace will be turned over to Germans as a consular office and the German flag will fly tomorrow over the building in this seaport on the strait of Gibraltar for the first time since the start of the World War.

Another authority will be set up tomorrow under Caid Sidi Larbi Temsamani, who, under international law, was an assistant to the nominal ruler. The Caid's powers will be similar to those of the regime in Spanish Morocco.

(An accord signed July 25, 1928, in Paris, by France, Spain, Italy and Great Britain fixed an international zone at Tangier and gave Spain police control. Spanish troops occupied Tangier on June 14, 1940, and on last November 23 the Spanish cabinet approved a law recognizing Tangier as a protectorate.)

'Deferment Rally' Set for Tonight

A rally will be held tonight at 8:30 in Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard Streets Northwest, in support of the Murray bill to give selective service deferment to dental and medical students and internes until they complete their educations.

Speakers will include Dr. Wayne Barker, of Chicago; Dr. Thomas Perry, of Boston, and Dr. Richard Lippmann, of New York.

Army Life Beneficial, Mothers Club Is Told

Kansas City, March 16 (AP).—Maj. Gen. Ralph E. Truman, commander of the Thirty-Fifth Division, told the United States Army Mothers' Club of Kansas City today their sons would be benefited by military training.

"Your sons will be returned to their homes at the end of this emergency, better men physically, mentally and morally," Gen. Truman said. Each trainee, he said, had "a most unusual opportunity" to study and learn a trade or profession, "or to grow into a persuasive leader. Any man who proves himself can be sure of an officer's commission."

Science May End Gray Hair By Vitamin B Discovery

By Howard W. Blakeslee,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

New York, March 16.—A new B vitamin expected to produce black mink fur and to relieve rubber glove allergies was described today in the journal of biological chemistry.

The substance is p-aminobenzoic acid, first identified last December as a vitamin of the "B complex" and synthesized just one month ago.

The synthesis, by making this vitamin readily available, has resulted in several discoveries about possible uses. The biological chemistry report is by Dr. J. G. Martin, Warner Institute for Therapeutic Research, New York City, and Dr. S. Ansbacher, Squibb Institute for Medical Research, New Brunswick, N. J.

Since writing the report, Dr. Ansbacher has become director of Research for the International Vitamins Corporation and has carried the new studies further. The first discovery is that p-aminobenzoic acid is able to turn certain classes of gray hair dark and to darken hair in general. It is the third vitamin B complex substance found to affect gray hair.

The other two are pantothenic acid and "filtrate factor," a substance found in the B complex by Dr. Agnes Fay Morgan of the University of California. The new vitamin took only two weeks to restore black hair to mice whose coats had turned gray because of vitamin deficiency. Dr. Ansbacher said further that this acid should produce the highly prized black color in mink fur. In the mice the new vitamin made the hair darker than what appeared to be their normal hues.

The rubber glove allergy he ascribed to sensitivity of some persons to hydroquinone, a chemical sometimes used in these gloves to slow down deterioration due to oxygen. The glove allergy results in skin trouble on the hands.

A quality of the acid which interests physicians is its ability to neutralize the activity of sulfanilamide. This has not been investigated far enough to show whether the new vitamin is an antidote for too much sulfanilamide.

Experiments on trying to turn human gray hair dark are under way with at least two of the new B vitamins and also with yeast which appears to contain them. None of these human experiments have been published. It is, however, known that where human hair is prematurely gray on account of vitamin deficiency results have been good.

100 U. S. Lawyers To Attend Meeting Of Bar in Havana

More than 100 of this country's leading lawyers, including Attorney General Robert H. Jackson and Jacob M. Lashly, president of the American Bar Association, will attend the first annual conference of the inter-American Bar Association March 24 to 28 at Havana, Cuba.

Closer relationships among the lawyers of North and South America will be stressed by speakers from 13 American Nations.

The conference will be addressed by Joe Manuel Cortina, Cuban secretary of state; Victor Vega, minister of justice of Cuba, and Dr. Manuel Fernandez Supervielle, of Havana, president of the Inter-American Bar Association.

Brookings Montgomery Survey Praised

Montgomery County leaders were unanimous yesterday in praising the thoroughness of the Brookings Institute survey of Montgomery County government, made public yesterday.

Otherwise, reaction to the report was not crystalized. No one had had the time to study the entire 720-page report, but virtually everyone had read the 70-page summary reprinted in The Washington Post yesterday.

Civic workers and leaders tended to agree that the report was a complete review of the things they had been working toward for years, while those more political-minded felt that possibly the recommendations lean too far toward the theoretical side without making allowance for problems arising in government practice.

O. M. Kile, economist and president of the Montgomery County Civic Federation, said:

"This is a most comprehensive and searching analysis of Montgomery County's present situation and future needs, political and economic. The very size of this report and the fundamental changes in county government recommended make it essential that plenty of time be taken for study and discussion before any moves are made to adopt any of the recommendations.

Parts Assigned for Study

"I have assigned various parts of the report to the appropriate standing committee of the federation for study and a new special committee will be announced in a few days to study the report as a whole and to promote county-wide discussion. Much benefit should flow eventually from this searching self-analysis.

"The Washington Post deserves commendation for making this summary promptly available to the citizens of the county," Kile declared.

Thomas Earle Hampton, president of the Montgomery County Board of Commissioners, who likewise felt that the report should be studied thoroughly before he could comment officially on its contents, said:

"It is too early to comment on the Brookings report. After it has been carefully studied, I sincerely hope and expect that the report will prove enlightening to the public and of much practical value to Montgomery County officially in its endeavor to effect improvements and economics in our government. I believe The Post has rendered a real service in placing the report before the people of the county."

County Commissioner John Oxley, of Rockville, said:

"In the rapid growth of Montgomery County, its government has necessarily expanded and many new departments and forms of government service have become necessary. These innovations have occurred at intervals and in a piecemeal fashion and thus no plan for the coordination of all county departments was apparent to those who developed these new departments of county service from time to time.

Revision Need Seen

"One with only a short experience with the county can readily see the need for a revision of our county government and particularly in bringing all possible functions under one policymaking body to be administered through qualified department heads.

"I can say at this time that I am definitely in sympathy with the general plan of the report and I am particularly impressed with the recommendation as to civil service, nonpartisan elections without designation of party affiliation by candidates for purely local offices and selection of candidates for policymaking offices representing the county by sections or districts as suggested in the report."

League Head Pleased

Washington I. Cleveland, president of the Greater Kensington Civic League, past president of the Montgomery Civic Federation and District manager of the American Automobile Association, commented:

"The report paves the way for the citizens to secure a modernization of their local government. The appalling need for a reorganization in the government of Montgomery County is abundantly illustrated in the report.

"The voters of any community are entitled to no better government than that for which they are willing to vote. Those citizens who desire full value for taxes paid and governmental administration competent to deal with the complicated problems of present-day conditions should unite in the study of this report made by one of the most competent, unbiased and nationally recognized research organizations in the United States.

"Following the study, they should join in a determined effort to secure the reforms and reorganization which are agreed upon as essential.

Disagreement Expressed

Mrs. George Graham of Glen Echo, a county employe, expressed the thought of several of those interviewed when she declared.

"The report is comprehensive in its scope but I cannot agree with all of it. For instance in the provision for a county council, it is suggested that candidates be nominated by petition and without party affiliation tags. It is explained that this is intended to give Federal employes an opportunity to participate. "What are we going to have? A night school government? Government employes are supposed to be on duty 24 hours a day. I think we have enough qualified men in Montgomery County to operate the county government on a full day time basis. Our present county officers give their days and many of their evenings and nights.

"Besides petitions are never fair. People sign them without reading when a friend asks. If you will remember, hundreds signed a petition which said in flowery language that all who signed were jackasses."

League to Study It

Mrs. Ralph Himstead, 210 Rosemary Street, Chevy Chase, Md., chairman of the Government and Its Operations Committee of the Montgomery County League of Women Voters, said the league will begin a six weeks' study of the Brookings report, "so we may know whether we approve," but that she felt it would be unwise to express an opinion before the study was completed. The study group will be organized April 2 at 10 a. m., at the Bethesda Public Library, and possibly will have branch study groups at Silver Spring, Rockville and up county. All women's groups of the county will be invited to participate in the study she said.

George W. Davis, president of the Seven Oaks Manor Citizens Association, and for six years a member of the Montgomery County Board of Education, declared.

"While there are many recommendations contained in the Brookings report with which I am in accord, the particular recommendation which I think is of vital interest to all concerns the situation existing in our county educational system under which the superintendent of schools and the school board have no jurisdiction over those persons, other than the professional staff, who render transportation to students and maintenance of buildings.

Political Control Assailed

"Under the present set-up such personnel is appointed by and under the jurisdiction of the supervisor of school property, who is appointed by the Board of County Commissioners, a political body. During the six years I was a member of the Board of Education I had ample opportunity to observe the results of such political control and they have been disastrous in many instances.

"The supervisors of school property have never had the professional background or familiarity with educational problems to enable them to coordinate their administrations with the professional phase of school development. Employes have been selected on the basis of their political indorsement and not because of proven efficiency or experience in their respective duties.

"I have for many years advocated the abolition of the position of supervisor of school property and the creation of the position of assistant superintendent of schools."

Federation Official Comments

Mrs. Vernon Brewster, Bradley Hills Grove, publicity chairman of the Montgomery County Civic Federation, said:

"Many of its suggestions seem to be in line with the items recommended by the Montgomery County Civic Federation over a long period.

Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Seofield, 12 Midhurst Road, Sligo Park Hills, said:

"We, as a county, are fortunate that the institution has performed this service. We probably will have to go about securing the fulfillment of these recommendations through the amendment method rather than through the legislature."

The citizens and officials were unanimous in declaring that both the Brookings Institution and the Washington Post had performed a great public service, the Institution for the exhaustive, painstaking preparation of the report and The Post for making its contents available to all of the citizens in such a striking manner.

Confer on Folk Festival

STUDENTS TO PARTICIPATE—Mrs. Charles B. Sinclair (left), head of the ways and means committee of the District Parents and Teachers, and Miss Elizabeth M. Andrews, chairman of the general school committee of the National Folk Festival, confer on plans for pupil participation in the eighth festival in May. Miss Andrews is principal of Bancroft School. Both served on previous festival committees

Miss Andrews Again to Aid Folk Festival

Serving for the fourth year, Miss Elizabeth Andrews, principal of Bancroft School, has accepted the chairmanship of the general school committee of the National Folk Festival.

Associated with her in the school work preliminary to the eighth annual Festival to be held May 1, 2 and 3 in Constitution Hall, will be Mrs. C. D. Lowe, president, and Mrs. Charles B. Sinclair, chairman of the ways and means committee, of the District Parent-Teachers' Association.

Sectional chairman of the general school committee also will serve for another year. They are: Senior high school, Miss Belle Mayers, department of health and physical education; junior high schools, Mrs. Evelina Burgess, department of music, and, elementary schools, Miss Katherine Scrivener, principal, Langdon school. Their acceptances were announced yesterday and subcommittees will be selected during the week.

Growing interest in the music, dances and handicrafts of an earlier America has been marked by increased attendance of school children at the festival programs sponsored by The Washington Post National Folk Festival Association. With 6,300 children at the festival in 1939 the school audiences last year exceeded 7,500. Plans for seating an equal number have been made this year according to a statement by Miss Sarah Gertrude Knott, director of the National Folk Festival.

"The study of the indigenous and vernacular music of our country enlivens and enriches the social studies in the school," Miss Andrews said, "and by the inclusion of the expressions of the many peoples who make up America we bring new color and story-interest to these studies."

Copies of many of the early songs and descriptive directions for some of the folk dances to be included in the National Folk Festival programs will be provided for all pupils in the public and parochial schools in the District. In certain schools this early music will be included in music studies or in assembly periods.

Eastern Shore Power Line Bids to Be Opened

Denton, Md., March 16 (AP).—Bids for construction of 635 miles of rural electric power lines in seven Eastern Shore counties will be opened at the office of the Choptank Cooperative, Inc., here March 25.

Approximately 1,800 families will be served by the project, the fourth such undertaking of the cooperative, said Wilbert L. Merriken, of Denton, company counsel.

Women Given Greater Role In History by Dr. Mary Beard

COLUMBIA ALUMNAE MEET—Dr. Mary Beard (left), the historian, and Mrs. J. S. Noffsinger, president of the Columbia University Alumnae Association, at a dinner meeting of alumnae last night

Dr. Mary Beard, the historian, suggested a reconsideration of the role of women in history last night at a dinner meeting of Columbia University Alumnae of Washington.

Discussing the various types of "memory" which compose one's concept of history today, she cited the influence of the memory of warriors, priests, politicians and the more recent developments of biology, anthropology and psychology.

"It has been the custom of men in all ages to hold up the memory of themselves as warriors," she said. "Memories began, however, back with the beginnings of civilization, the beginnings of culture, which seems to indicate a femininne viewpoint."

She rejected the theory that women have been subjugated throughout history, pointing to their influence from the earliest schools of Greek philosophy to the present time.

"We can have no substantial unity unless we can thrust at something larger than ourselves," Dr. Beard said. "The attempt to unify us all on the basis of force is an attempt to combine us in the memory of the warrior."

Pointing out that a feminine viewpoint is not necessarily always peaceful, she said, "German women lifted Hitler up every step of his ladder to fame."

More than 100 persons heard her speak at the dinner gathering held in the Kennedy-Warren Hotel. Mrs. J. S. Noffsinger, president of the Columbia University Alumnae Association, presided.

Transportation Group Opposes Seaway Project

Chicago, March 16 (AP).—The Transportation Association of America announced today its opposition to the St. Lawrence waterway project which, it said, would require an expenditure of more than a billion dollars.

The association's report said in part:

"The project cannot be justified from the standpoint of national defense, because it could not be completed prior to 1947; the same amount of money would purchase 125 1,800-ton destroyers, or 30 10,000-ton cruisers, or 14, 35,000-ton battleships.

"The river is navigable only from May to November.

8 'Princesses' Are Named For Festival

Winchester, Va., March 16.—Announcement was made at festival headquarters of the appointment of eight princesses to the court of Queen Shenandoah XVIII, who will reign over this city's annual spring Apple Blossom Festival when it is held here May 1 and 2.

The first princess to be named to the 1941 entourage of Queen Shenandoah was Miss Peggy Murray Brinton, of Spangler, Pa., who will represent Southern Seminary and Junior College at Buena Vista, Va.

The princesses and the schools they will represent follow:

Gretchen Aileen Malden, of Meadowview, Va., Emory and Henry College; Evelyn Powell Delp, of Comers Rock, Va., State Teachers College at Radford; Jonedith Montague Henry, of Winchester, Handley High School; Ella Camerian Dickenson, of Lebanon, Va., College of William and Mary; Peggy Murray Brinton, of Spangler, Pa., Southern Seminary; Jeannette Ann Richards of Richwood, W. Va., Greenbrier College; Mary Alice Finch, of Houston, Tex., Warrenton Country School, and Mathilda Baldwin Thomas, Fairfax Hall Junior College.

Some 30 girls in all from schools in Virginia, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Maryland and the District of Columbia are expected to be in the queen's court this year.

A. C. Buckley Named 'Outstanding Farmer'

Winchester, Va., March 16.—Arthur C. Buckley, 54, of Edgewood Farm, has been selected as the outstanding farmer of Clarke County for 1941.

Buckley, who was nominated by the Berryville 4-H Clubs, received an award at the annual banquet of Clarke County farmers, held at Boyce. The award was announced by C. C. Funkhouser, county agent.

FIRST NIGHT SPOT MAGAZINE. Peter Borras, host-owner of the Madrillon, whose cordiality is only equalled by his hight-brow qualities, is going to write, edit and publish a house organ of Madrillon news. It's to be called "The Gourmet," and the first issue will be out some time this week. It's sure The Gourmet will be diverting and informative, for Senor Pete is not only an authority on the restaurant business and cuisine, but has an excellent flair for writing. You've probably read some of his many letters published in Time magazine. He's also written song lyrics, translated classic bits of Spanish literature into English.

Ida Clarke will play organ music at a new afternoon cocktail hour to be launched at the Lounge Riviera beginning today. This charming innovation stems directly from Ida's fine success as an interlude artist at Riviera's supper dance sessions.

ELECTRIC AND LEGAL GALES are tangled up with the "Gone With the Wind" dance that Renee Villon will present at the Casino Royal this evening for the first time in Washington. Novelist Margaret Mitchell's lawyer has protested the use of the book title to describe this playful bit of dance art in which Renee's hoop skirts and pantalets are whicked off by an electric fan gale, leaving her clad in only a gauze scarf. Renee says that the "Gone With the Wind" line doesn't belong to Miss Mitchell, since it was originated by Ernest Dowson in his poem, "Cynara."

TALENT MERGER. Some really distinguished music should result from the current collaboration of Arden Clar, violinist and interlude pianist of the Shoreham's Barnee-Lowe Orchestra, with Karl Flaster of ASCAP who wrote the libretto of Vittoria Giannini's opera, "Lucedia," only American-written opera to be produced in Germany. At present the Clar-Flaster partnership is occupied with several light numbers suitable for dancing.

SUCCESS IN SEPIA. De Lloyd McKaye, golden-skinned pianist who nightly stops the show in Paul Young's, had to go to England to win recognition as a star musician. Her first outstanding success was achieved with Lew Leslie's "Blackbirds of 1935," one of the finest all-colored shows ever produced. It played a long engagement in the London Coliseum and in all of the larger British cities. De Lloyd also appeared as a solo pianist in Paris and chi-chi resorts of the Riviera. Her father was a British citizen of the Barbados and her mother Chinese.

It's a triple-threat night at the Metrenome Room this evening. The St. Patrick's party, Tommy Marvin's Monday "Boogie-Woogie Night" and Guili-Guili's nightly feast of magic will be blended into what looks like a perfect recipe for a wonderful time.

ELSIE, THE COW, will head the hilarious new "St. Patrick's Revue" opening today at the Lotus. She'll probably wear a wreath of shamrock around her horns and moo "Irish Eyes." Anyway, don't you hope so! Bob and Betty DeWitt, of musical comedy, are outstanding among a line-up of smart entertainers assembled by impresario Tom Ball. There'll be glossy parade numbers, too, and Buddy Shaner will tenor soulfully about dear old Erin.

CARMELA LAZARI, soprano lark of the Hi Hat

CIGGIES AND COLLEGE. June Sparks, hazel-eyed cigarette girl in the Rainbow Room, is majoring in English at George Washington University. Though June is pretty as a picture, she has no movie or theatrical ambitions, says "I know I haven't any acting talent and I'm not going to day dream about the stage."

A MERMAID OF SUMPTUOUS ANATOMY attired in a single earring has reached our desk. It's from Publiciteer Frank Romer, of the Neptune Room, serves to point his jeweled sentence, "Bright as the diamond glint of a drop of sea water worn as a mermaid's earring is the singing scintillance of the Dalton Boys and the gemlike quality of the twin pianistics of Bob and Bertie Hellman makes the Neptune Room an undersea jewel case of seductive sound." Such ink-spiration!

A magical novelty at Troika is the combining of Rosita Rios' voice with Sasha Lukas' violin. It's especially lovely and effective in "Estrellita."

PRIZE CUSTOMERS. Russ Lyon, of the Music Corporation of America, recently visited the Cosmos Room, was abeam with pride over the success of the Carmen Cavallaro orchestra, one of MCA's topnotchers . . . Arthur Riley, former radio man, now commissioner of conciliation for the Labor Department, always visits the Anchor Room when he's in town, says there's nothing like a spot of Matt Windsor's music. Eileen George's singing after a difficult conference . . . If Artist Dick Oden isn't at The Post, it's likely he'll be in Dick's Grill, where he and Owner Dick Ashby conduct lengthy and expert conferences on the art of Southern cookery.

STAFF NEWS: There's an important reason why the dinners at the new Plymouth are so deliciously satisfying. It's Chef Gustaf Tobe, formerly associated with the Willard and Shoreham Hotels . . . The affable new manager of Cafe Caprice is C. Pruitt, well known in Washington restaurant circles. The "C" stands for a most intriguing first name which retiring Manager Pruitt refuses to use.

MOSTEST DEPARTMENT. "Mayor" Ciro, of Ciro's Famous Village, is the most colorful night-spot owner in town . . . But wait a minute! It's certainly a tie between the "Mayor" and witty Fred Johansen, proprietor of the Silver Fox . . . Emcee Lee Everett, of Restaurant "823," holds the Southern accent championship for this territory . . . Mayfair's Paul Kain is the most daring maestro in the city in the matter of haberdashery. The cravat isn't made that Paul won't wear—unless it's conservative . . . Dick Koons, of the Mayflower Lounge, has the biggest and brightest smile among our town's band leaders.

Bandits Bind Druggist, Aide, Flee With $200

Three bandits last night appeared in a drugstore at Sixty-first and Dix Streets Northeast just before midnight, taped up Dr. Jesse A. Simpson and a clerk, Steven Ussante, and escaped with 200.

Louis Nesline, who resides and operates a restaurant at 1806 Rhode Island Avenue Northeast, reported the loss to police yesterday of $125 which was taken from a cash register and other cash tills that were hidden in the restaurant. Entrance was gained by smashing a rear window.

Lloyd R. Colliflower, of 3228 Nineteenth Street Northwest, proprietor of a stationery store at 2912 Fourteenth Street Northwest, reported that between 4 and 6 a. m. yesterday thieves had broken into the store through the front door glass and stolen $12 from the register.

By breaking the front door lock of a grocery store at 2016 First Street Northwest, thieves gained entry and obtained between $5 and $6 from the same source.

Irving W. Parrott, of 1320 A Street Northeast, reported that thieves entered his home through an unlocked window of his residence between midnight Saturday and 8 a. m. Sunday and escaped with his watch and $74 in currency.

John W. Tilson, of 3434 Brown Street Northwest, was robbed of his wallet containing $25 by a pickpocket while riding on a Fourteenth Street Northwest streetcar Saturday evening, he reported.

Joseph Oxenburt, of 5800 Sixteenth Street Northwest, notified police yesterday that $120 in cash and belongings had been stolen from his home. Entry was gained by forcing the lock on a rear window.

By use of a duplicate key, the home of Sophia Hertz, 1428 Jonquil Street Northwest, was entered over the weekend, her home ransacked and at least $15 in change stolen.

Viscose Plants Sold by British

that it probably would not be the last.

He said he was "taking the first things first" and that there probably would be other British-owned industrial corporations sold.

In a prepared statement, Sir Edward said:

"I now am in a position to state that I have completed on behalf of the British government a sale to American interests of the American Viscose Corporation, which is an American subsidiary of Courtaulds, Ltd., of England and is the largest producer of rayon in the United States.

"The sale could only have been completed in so short a time as has been available by the exercise of good will and mutual trust on both sides.

"I desire to express my appreciation of the way in which this matter has been dealt with from the American side."

All Common Stock

The company, it was disclosed, is completely capitalized by common stock and has no bonded debt. There are 491,555 shares of the stock outstanding in England.

Under present plans these English shares will be deposited together in England, where they will be canceled and new shares will be issued here for American investors.

The bankers announced details of the actual transfer with the following formal statement:

"The purchase group expects to arrange a resale but no plans have yet been formulated. The resale will probably take the form of a public offering at a later date by a Nation-wide underwriting and distributing group in which participants in the original purchase may participate.

Must Register With CCC

"The plans for such offering cannot be announced for a considerable time. Various preliminaries will have to be arranged. Registration with the SEC will be necessary and the completion of engineers' studies now under way will also take some time. (Officials said the survey probably would take several weeks.)

"The total price to be paid to the British government depends on the amount to be realized on resale by the original purchasers and therefore cannot now be stated.

"The purchase contract requires a payment on account amounting to $40,000,000, less adjustment for minority stock interests of about 10 per cent, including approximately 8 per cent being retained by Courtaulds, Ltd.

"Subsequent additional payments to the British government are provided for as follows: From the ultimate price realized there will be deducted the initial payment, expenses, and certain specified profits of the purchase group and the syndicate managers, after which 90 per cent of the balance will be paid to the British government."

Religion Needed In World Order, Says Fr. Sheen

New York, March 16.—Leaving religion out of the social order is like leaving the heart out of a human body, the Right Rev. Fulton J. Sheen, professor of fundamental theology at the Catholic University, Washington, said today in the third of his series of Lenten sermons at St. Patrick's Cathedral. Western civilization, he said, has been trying for 300 years to develop a new order in which religion was made independent of economics, education and politics and left solely to the individual.

"Let us not be among those who think that once we drive the evil dictators out of the house of Europe we will have a better world," he said. "All the evil is not in these men, it is in society, in every person. It will not be a political, economic, military or social leader who will save the world. It will only be saved by saints, who will deliver us from evil."

night to accommodate marooned farmers and their families. At Moorhead, Minn., more than 2,000 fans remained overnight in the high school after attending a basketball game there.

The Roseau (Minn.) high school basketball team, en route to a district tournament at Stephen, Minn., Saturday night became stalled near Stephen. The 11 players, Coach O. T. Lindberg and Superintendent of Schools C. D. Hollister were traveling in two cars. They kept the motors running. At midnight gasoline ran out in one car and all piled into the other. The 13 sat in the machine until 8 a. m. when a searching party reached them.

The icy blasts were due to strike the Atlantic Coast by tonight, and storm warnings have been ordered up from Maine to Cape Hatteras. Snow flurries will accompany the gale in Delaware, Maryland, and West Virginia.

Like the 10-inch snowstorm of two weeks ago, the cold wave follows an upsurge of mild weather that for the past several days presaged the technical arrival of spring, March 21, three days off.

Lured outdoors yesterday by bracing air and clear skies, Washingtonians gave a preview of their bright Easter toggery. More than 15,000 visited the Zoo, and thousands took to the open road. Crocuses, the Capital's symbol of the spring, poked up on the White House grounds.

Add six sub weather a.. .... le-l'"a

As a matter of fact, the District has enjoyed mild weather all winter. A low of 21, reached twice in January and three times in February, was the coldest of the season. The mercury, however, slid down to 16 in autumn, December 4.

Tomorrow Is Public Tuesday in Leonardtown

Leonardtown, Md., March 16.—Following a custom several hundred years old, the first Tuesday after the opening of the spring term of the circuit court here is known as "Public Tuesday," and this year it falls on March 18. Then it is that every farmer comes to this county seat to meet old friends, view farm machinery on display, look over horses that are exercised on the town green and discuss the affairs of the county in general.

Capt. Perrin Joins U.S. Observers in Near East

Cairo, Egypt, March 16 (AP).—Observer, Capt. Edwin S. Perrin, of the Army Air Corps, has arrived in the Near East from Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, to replace Col. Gerald E. Brower.

After four months here Brower is returning to the United States to become chief of the antiaircraft defenses of the North Atlantic region.

Lawyers Guild Protests Race Discrimination

The National Lawyers Guild protested yesterday against "Jim Crow discrimination and segregation policies of the Army and Navy, sanctioned by White House indorsement."

In a report made public by Martin Popper, secretary, the guild's civil rights committee said the policies were "irreconcilable with the slogan of preserving democracy."

Citing numerous instances of what it called discrimination, the committee expressed particular concern over the use of separate quotas in drafting colored men into the Army.

The committee advocated amendment of the Selective Service Act to prohibit discrimination "against or segregation of any person or groups of persons on account of race, color or creed."

The report also urged "equitable participation of Negroes in employment incident to national defense."

Osmond K. Fraenkel, constitutional lawyer, is chairman of the committee.

The National Negro Council called on President Roosevelt yesterday to provide a training center for colored sailors and aviators at St. Thomas, Virgin Islands.

In convention at the Shiloh Baptist Church, Ninth and P Streets Northwest, the council suggested this as a way to "catapult the tradition which confines Negroes to the positions of messmen and a few petty officers in the Navy."

School Will Give Minstrel Frolics

Students of the East Silver Spring Elementary School are selling tickets for the presentation of the "Minstrel Frolics of 1941" which will be given April 4 and 5 in the auditorium of the Takoma-Silver Spring Junior High School, Chicago and Philadelphia avenues.

The show, with a cast of 30 adults, is being sponsored by the Parent-Teacher Association. R. S. Smerud is directing. James W. Douthat will be interlocutor. R. J. Scofield is general chairman.

Women Argue World Affairs In Air Forum

Four nationally known women covered about all the ground there is to cover in the isolation vs. intervention question—however sketchily—on Theodore Granik's American Forum of the Air broadcast from the Willard Hotel last night.

In favor of the present foreign policy of the United States were Mrs. Rushmore Patterson, chairman of the National Women's Division of the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies, and Mrs. Emma Guffey Miller, Democratic national committeewoman of Pennsylvania.

Against it were Helen Essary, newspaper columnist, and Miss Dorothy Detzer, national secretary of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom.

Subjects covered in the 45-minute broadcast included: The danger of Hitler invading the United States if England falls, the economic outlook for this country if Hitler wins; the proposition that aiding England is aiding democracy, the lend-lease bill; possibility of a dictatorship here; Nazi activities in South America, appeasement of Russia, England's past imperialism and its treatment of India and "the 360,000,000 oppressed," and the question of whether the United States is already in the war.

Finally, Mrs. Patterson asked: "What would you do if a burglar were coming in your door?"

"Whee!" exclaimed Miss Detzer. "The old burglar story."

The gallery will be opened at 10 a. m. tomorrow to the public. Thenceforward it will be open weekdays from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m. and on Sundays from 2 p. m. to 5 p. m. Admission is free.

Chester Dale, of New York, has lent the gallery an important group of seven American paintings from his collection. The earliest is a portrait signed by John Smibert and dated 1731. This was exhibited at the Masterpieces of Art at the New York World's Fair last summer. Next in date is a Portrait of a Lady in a Red Dress, attributed to Jeremiah Theus, Swiss painter.

WHO WILL BE YOUR EXECUTOR?

Wills made today may not go into effect for twenty years or more. If—as many wills do—it creates a trust, that may run for many years after the will has been probated.

How vitally important it is therefore that the executor, and the trustee if any, be one with continuous existence like this trust company.

Give this careful thought when your will is drawn.

THE SMOKE OF SLOWER-BURNING CAMELS GIVES YOU

EXTRA MILDNESS, EXTRA COOLNESS, EXTRA FLAVOR

AND

28% LESS NICOTINE

than the average of the 4 other largest-selling cigarettes tested—less than any of them—according to independent scientific tests of the smoke itself.

THE SMOKE'S THE THING!

YES, when you smoke the slower-burning cigarette...Camel...you have the pleasing assurance of modern laboratory science that you're getting less nicotine in the smoke.

Not only extra freedom from nicotine—but other important extras as well—extra mildness, extra coolness, and extra flavor, too, for Camel's slower way of burning means freedom from flavor-dulling excess heat and the irritating qualities of too-fast burning.

And by the carton, Camels are even more economical.

Try slower-burning Camels. Compare them by smoking them. For, in a cigarette, the smoke's the thing—and Camel's the smoke!

BY BURNING 25% SLOWER than the average of the 4 other largest-selling brands tested—slower than any of them—Camels also give you a smoking plus equal, on the average, to 5 EXTRA SMOKES PER PACK!

THERE ARE NO "RETAKES" in television. Every night is first night. "That's the thrill of it," says Miss Read. "And the thrilling thing about Camels to me is that they always taste so good. I don't get tired of smoking Camels. And they really are so much cooler and milder."

The more you smoke Camels, the more you'll appreciate the freedom from the irritating qualities of excess heat . . . the extra mildness and extra coolness of Camel's slower-burning, costlier tobaccos. And you'll enjoy Camel's full, rich flavor all the more, knowing—by the word of independent laboratory tests—that you're getting less nicotine in the smoke (see above, left).

The Nazi Tune

The paranoic side of Adolf Hitler, which generally peeps through his bombast, was uppermost in the speech which he delivered Sunday in memory of the German fallen. Britain and France alone wanted war! This after the dictators for years had taunted the democracies upon their decadence and their lack of the war spirit, when the facts show that the democracies were relatively disarmed even at the time they sought to call a halt to Hitler aggression, and after it has been demonstrated that only Germany was prepared for war. The Fuehrer cannot find any evidence for his jaundiced view except a remark that Germany must be destroyed which Gen. Robert E. Wood attributed to Winston Churchill in 1936. Mr. Churchill then was in opposition, so much in opposition, in fact, that he was a voice crying out in the wilderness. To give him any responsibility for the views of the British government at that time would be equivalent to attaching a responsibility for the New Deal to Mr. Landon's views about the bankers in 1933. The real Nazi tune is heard in the Nazi marching song "Today we own Germany, tomorrow the whole world," not in the latter-day Hitler speeches.

Illyrian Blues

Now that the Theater Guild production of "Twelfth Night" has moved on to fresh triumphs in Baltimore, but is still alive in the memory of everyone here, it may be worthwhile to raise anew the question of whether Mr. Maurice Evans was well-advised in his interpretation of Malvolio. In view of the box office figures, the question is of course purely an academic one. But since Mr. Evans' interpretation was entirely original and since the whole production was keyed to it by an ingenious system of heightened contrasts, it is permissible to wonder whether he has not carried his genius for antithesis to the point where he and the Bard stand at opposite poles of intention.

By making Malvolio into a Cockney upstart, Mr. Evans made him more pitiful than ridiculous in his downfall. This was heightened by the malevolence with which other characters were played. Indeed, had the performance been carried to the point of perfect illusion, the spectator might have been stirred to profound sympathy with the unhappy steward and to anger with his tormentors. Mr. Evans obviously didn't intend any such reaction, but to prevent the whole thing from turning into tragicomedy, he and his players at times resorted almost to burlesque. In places the traditional music was jazzed, and the clown was given so many overtones of the night club singer, including a tuxedo front to his motley, that one almost missed the microphone. Even his curtain song was turned into a kind of floor show finale. To cap all, Malvolio, forgetting vengeance, came back to croak, "But that's all one, for the play is done."

These, certainly, were interesting innovations, but it is permissible to ask whether they were not made at the expense of even more interesting social and historical implications in the play. The key to "Twelfth Night" appears to lie in Sir Toby Belch's oft-quoted line

> "Dost thou think because thou art virtuous there shall be no more cakes and ale?"

Here in Elizabethan perspective seemed to be the note of protest against a "new order" in England. The ascendancy of the dour, efficient and priggish Malvolio, "a kind of Puritan," in the happy-go-lucky household of Olivia was certainly the harbinger of the "new men" who were coming on top in Merrie England under the Tudors and the Reformation. And Malvolio must have known he was part of the tide. He was no boor.

In the Middle Ages the job of steward to a noble household was a bigger one than the word suggests today. Indeed, the Tudors themselves were descendants of a steward who had come up in the world by the route of judicious marriage. Thus to Malvolio there need have been nothing incongruous or absurd about the idea of greatness thus achieved or thrust upon him. At any rate, his social origins would be reflected more by his ambition than by an accent or dialect.

Of course, it is easier to read more economics and sociology into Shakespeare than he meant to convey. What a great pity he did not anticipate the Shavian practice of putting prefaces to his plays to tell posterity precisely what he meant, instead of leaving us to squabble with the interpretations of such consummate Shakespearean actors as Mr. Maurice Evans!

Kind Of Mediation

President Roosevelt's plan for the creation of a mediation board to settle labor disputes without interruption of defense production is still somewhat confused. The fact that Mr. Roosevelt is now facing this issue in a straightforward manner is gratifying. Yet it cannot be taken for granted that the mere appointment of a special board will solve the problem of strikes in defense industries. Much will depend upon the type of board that is set up and the functions assigned to it.

The necessity for some action is clear enough. Aside from the fact that strikes are now delaying essential defense work, and threatening more serious interruptions, there is increasing evidence that the present set-up is not functioning effectively. In some instances the OPM and the Conciliation Service appear to be working at cross purposes. The least that can be said is that the Conciliation Service doesn't know where its responsibility ends or the OPM where its obligation in this field begins. Increasing confusion would be inevitable without a more clear-cut allocation of authority.

In meeting this problem the President must necessarily take full advantage of the existing machinery for amicable settlement of labor disputes. That means that the great majority of controversies which employers and employes cannot settle for themselves must be ironed out through the Conciliation Service. The problem is to go one step further and bring the influence of Government and of public opinion to bear upon controversies that cannot be settled around the conference table. Obviously that step should be taken with the least possible interference with the conciliation machinery already in operation.

The board to be set up ought to be qualified to investigate disputes turned over to it by the Secretary of Labor acting for the Conciliation Service. It should be an impartial body composed of a small number of outstanding citizens. The chief weakness of the eleven-man board under consideration at the White House is that it would be composed of men representing industry, the two rival labor organizations and the public. That would be a handicap at the outset. If the President has in mind a board to formulate a national labor policy, it should of course be representative of the interests involved. But no such function seems to be envisaged. Indications are that the board's chief duty would be to turn the spotlight of publicity upon unsettled disputes as a final means of bringing the parties to an understanding. Certainly that could be more effectively done by a small body of citizens in whom the disputants and the public would have great confidence.

It is the public interest that such a board would be called upon to serve. That point should be made impressive by appointing all its members to represent the Government and not private groups. The interests of management and labor will be amply represented by the disputants who lay their cases before the proposed board. Obviously, too, the board should function independently of the Office of Production Management. In planning our output for defense and aid to Britain, the OPM has an enormous job that should absorb all its energies. It cannot afford to scatter its fire by taking on another major obligation or to risk being drawn into the maelstrom of industrial disputes. Any mediation board would of necessity cooperate closely with the OPM, but its independence should be assured to provide the clear-cut assignment of responsibility that the emergency demands.

Balkan Kaleidoscope

The situation in the Balkans has undergone a perceptible change for the worse from the standpoint of Hitler's Balkan ambitions. Greece has made it clear that she will not submit to Hitler's Diktat. Her fabulously courageous attitude has been summed up by a Greek journalist in the apothegm that Greece had shown the world how to live, and now she would show the world how to die. Yugoslavia, clinging desperately to her freedom and independence, has stiffened itself against surrender a la Sofia. Russia, though belatedly, has manifested her displeasure at Bulgaria's surrender. The passage by Congress of the lease-lend bill has indicated that American aid would be forthcoming to any additional nation that resists aggression, a pledge underlined by President Roosevelt in his great speech Saturday. Finally, British forces have begun to arrive in Salonika.

It is not yet clear how many British troops have reached the Aegean area or what equipment they possess. But there seems to be little reason to doubt that some of them have arrived in fulfilment of the pledges which Mr. Eden recently gave to the Athens government that Great Britain would stand by her ally unflinchingly. And this circumstance, plus the stiffening of Yugoslav resistance to the Reich and America's complete identification with the British cause are certain to have their bearing on Turkish policy.

These developments may force Hitler to a decision which cannot be welcome to him. His policy with regard to the Balkans has been to achieve his gains bloodlessly, through the strategy of terror alone. To plunge into war in southeastern Europe, even though in such a struggle the odds would be very considerably in Germany's favor, might throw a monkey wrench into the Fuehrer's larger strategy. To him, more than to the British, the Balkans constitute a sideshow, at most. He can win only by knocking out Great Britain on the latter's home front. And any diversion of men and planes and materiel from the western theater to the Balkan area might make it impossible for Germany to exert sufficient force against the British to give them a knock-out blow.

Thus, almost for the first time since he began his career of conquest, Hitler must adjust himself to a situation not of his making or of his choosing. If he is forced to give the order to his legions in Bulgaria to attack Greece or Yugoslavia, that would be a confession of failure, regardless of the duration or the outcome of the hostilities so begun. The skies over the Balkans are still dark with ominous possibilities. But the clouds are beginning to reveal the first faint glimmers of a silver lining.

County Efficiency

The report of the Brookings Institution on Montgomery County shows a governmental confusion worse than that of the District. The simple processes sufficient to govern a rural county of fewer than 20,000 souls in 1776 have been inadequate to administer the needs of a population swollen to nearly 84,000 and divided among country, village, town and metropolitan areas. Conflicting administrative forms have been adopted to meet special necessities as they arose, so that now the county has twelve incorporated towns, eleven village tax areas, six special tax areas, a Montgomery County Suburban District, a Maryland-Washington Metropolitan District, a Maryland-Washington Regional District and a Washington Suburban Sanitary District. These authorities impinge on one another and on the county government in numerous instances, with resultant waste and inefficiency. In addition, many systems, practices and policies need reform to take cognizance of the expert nonpolitical abilities essential in governing a modern community.

To remedy this situation the Brookings Institution has recommended the adoption of a county charter to provide the following structure:

1. An enlarged board of commissioners, to be called the County Council. The council would be the county's legislative, planning and policy-making agency. The administrative functions of the present board would be transferred to
2. A county administrator, chosen for his expert qualifications. He would prepare the budget and control central purchasing.
3. A comptroller, independent of the administrator, to safeguard county funds.
4. A Civil Service Commission.

The system as outlined is competent to provide expert government impossible under purely political appointment and detailed political pressure. The Brookings study goes further to show how powers of the conflicting local authorities may be defined, divided and centralized. Economies attained by transferring and consolidating control over educational, taxing, health, welfare, law enforcement, fire, street, legal and other services would be applied to the payment of expert personnel.

However, it is one thing to analyze and recommend, another to reform. Political action to root out embedded political growths is always painful and difficult. In this case it was found unnecessary to abolish the Board of Commissioners, and, since the commissioners asked for the study, these are two good reasons for expecting the board to follow up the report. Moreover, the county, unlike the District, has the constitutional right to change its governmental forms by vote, or it can work through its delegation in the State Assembly. The way is thus open for the people of Montgomery County to achieve efficient government, if they want it enough to work for it.

THE FISHERMAN

He casts, unhurried and alone,
The bright enchantment of his flies,
Knowing that watching from the water
By some cool-shadowed ledge of stone,
Are the cold gems of eyes.

Each movement shows that he is sure
Of every thing he does and why
He does it, though an impatient watcher,
Seeing no strike, may doubt the lure
And the stream he wanders by.

Often it heartens me to feel
This certainty in things one likes
To do—before the flash of silver
And the sudden singing of the reel
When a hidden beauty strikes . . .

It is a terrible thing to see
People, with neither rods nor flies,
Staring into a sluggish water—
Wherever such sad streams may be—

Letters To The Editor

One National Anthem

If I remember correctly, I was taught in American schools that there is only one National Anthem and that the National Anthem is the only musical composition which should be honored by standing up during its rendition, thus showing due respect for what it represents.

But, recently I was present at a concert given by a small band. At the end of the program "God Bless America" was played. The band leader motioned to the audience to stand up. The crowd obeyed like a flock of sheep. I have been told that standing up for "God Bless America" is a common occurrence in theaters and movie houses. In fact, I saw an item only a short time ago, in one of the papers stating that a prominent citizen was threatened with violence for failing to rise when this piece of music was rendered.

What is the reason for this current hysteria over a tune? Is it because "God Bless America" sounds patriotic. Does not "Stars and Stripes Forever" sound patriotic? Why the excitement over one patriotic note and not over the other? Is "God Bless America" supposed to be a prayer for America (God knows we ought to pray)? Why not learn our prayer from prayer books rather than from sheet music?

Or, does it mean that the venerable "Star-Spangled Banner" is being crowded out of the American stage by a newcomer? Has "God Bless America" been raised to the same rank as the National Anthem? If so, when and by whom? If not, why the unusual dignity accorded it? Would anyone be so foolish as to even suggest that we place a football pennant or a circus banner on the same footing with the National flag? Would not putting any other music theme in the same category with the "Star-Spangled Banner" be showing disrespect for the National Anthem? Is that what is intended?

"A Dog's Life"

To say that Uncle Sam leads a dog's life is to tell the truth without poetry. Before and after the States became a Nation, he was between the "Sea Mistress" and the deep blue sea, and today, he is among the "Sea Mistresses," the sea, and the devil.

Awaiting The Call

I am one of those many people who do not believe in crossing a bridge until I come to it; but now that I have, I should like to express my humble thoughts in regard to this so-called bridge—that of Selective Service.

It has always been my good fortune to be able to do pretty much those things in life that have been at least my second choice if not my first. I have never had to dig ditches, peel onions 'til the tears rolled out of my eyes, nor have I ever been forced to accept military discipline. It isn't that I'm too good to humble myself to do these things, but it is the sacrificing of one of the best years of my life to which I so strongly object.

With dreaded anticipation, I await final word from my draft board. The thought of being regimented, thus losing one's individuality if such ever existed, of learning how to adjust oneself to an environment not to one's desire and of giving up many of the niceties of life in order to help give shape to a mold which I, for one, do not approve, is not a pleasant one. Yes, I am an American to the nth degree.

There are those people who, young as they are, have grown stereotyped and such a change as this would be most beneficial. There are those who would welcome this change if for that reason alone—a change. But for the "rugged individualist," which, incidentally, has been fostered by the New Deal, this form of life would be dull and colorless. Yet there is nothing that we can do about it but sit back and think—maybe of those lines of the poet who said "God's in His Heav'n, all's right with the world."

Hitler And Us

Hitler must be beaten. If he wins this war the German people will dominate the world for centuries to come. We have all marveled at the spectacular rise and spread of Christianity and we know how it has been the guiding influence of the more civilized people for almost 2,000 years. Hitler has instilled in the youth of Germany the same fanatical feeling which made Christian martyrs die with a gleam in their eye. The Fatherland is as sacred to the young German as Christ was to the early Christians, and he fights for it with the same zeal. In his book Hitler wrote, "A nation must build dogmas about its new myths and propagate them as stubbornly as the Church has done." Now the difference between these two movements is that Christianity appealed to all races, holding all men equal, while Nazism appeals only to the German race with all other races being subject to the German in the degree of their purity of blood. Of course any such idea as the Nazi theory conflicts with our way of thinking, and we don't want any part of it, so if 100,000,000 Germans are fighting with the spirit of religious fanatics to make us "culture bearers" for them, we have got to snap out of it.

The German is the creator of culture and everything else of any importance. The rest of us are inferior and must be made to do the will of the superior Aryan. That is the essence of Naziism, that is the German war aim, and that very simply fixes a war aim for us which is, to blow the Nazi bandwagon from the face of the earth. All other considerations are beside the point.

Hitler's theory of developing an even more superior German race is, in short, to breed. Germans as thoroughbred animals are bred, sterilization of the unfit, rigid physical education, etc., and of course, to inculcate, to the point of awe, the love for the Fatherland. Hitler says it is a mathematical certainty that such a program will produce the rulers of the globe. And this we cannot intelligently deny, because biologically, the theory is sound. It is known that Hitler has already begun to propagate Germans in this fashion. If this breeding idea was being carried out as a scientific experiment, and the results used to benefit mankind in general, we might call it a good idea, but it is not that kind of an experiment. Germans will be made superior only to more easily subject us no-accounts to do their manual labor while they create culture. Again, this is the German war aim.

All conquerors have pulled a boner which undid them. Hitler made his mistake when he started this war. If he had waited until a generation of his expertly bred men had come of age, we would have been in a tough spot. However, he can still win this war unless we get together and lay him by the ears.

To conclude I quote Hitler from "Mein Kampf:" "A man who knows a thing, who realizes a given danger, and who sees with his eyes the possibility of a remedy, has the duty and obligation to work, not in silence but to stand up publicly against the evil and for its remedy. If he does not do so, then he is a disloyal, miserable weakling who fails either because of cowardice or because of laziness and inability."

Debate Over Sending Food to France

My, but that was a tough editorial you gave us in connection with the refusal of the British to allow the starving French to be fed. So that's your answer, is it—"Let 'em die!" Ask your conscience again, won't you, if that can possibly be right.

Now, don't get us wrong. We want to see England saved. But when she comes along and you come along, proposing that we save her by letting a lot of innocent women and children starve, we get all stirred up on the inside. Somehow I think we would all love England a lot more, and would help her far more generously, if we saw her trying to act more generously herself. But when England insists on being saved no matter who else is called on to die, then I begin to wonder if she herself is worth saving. After all, if the worst is to happen and if England is to go down to defeat and death and oblivion, would it not be far more to England's credit to go down—trying to be generous and magnanimous—than to go down with the stigma attached to her record that, before she let herself slip over the precipice, she sacrificed many innocent ones in a vain effort to save herself?

Mr. Editor, please read the Hoover suggestions through again. Please think of what you would want if you were a parent living in France at this time with hungry children looking to you for bread.

A FRIEND TO SOME WHO ARE HUNGRY.
Washington, March 11.

Now haven't we praised Hitler enough for his part in this big starvation problem? If so, can't we see if Britain has any points at all? In the first place, who started this unprovoked devastation and plunder of countries? Who reduced these peoples to starvation—and holds them there? Who has just now sworn to Nazify these peoples by force? Whose war machine are they compelled to build up? Who possesses their ports, bases, factories? Who holds them in the darkness of hate-brewing lies? Who infests their lands with secret murderers? Who turns their labors into their own bondage?

Then, in God's name, if not for plain common sense, let's pull Hitler from his Vestal Virgin pose. Let him free these peoples and take his murderers from their land if he expects no real war aid through them—then we could succor them without disgracing the human species with our deadening stupidity. As they stand they are a part of Germany—a definite segment of his war mill. Let's beware of Hitler's traps.

The Post Impressionist

Cream-Ice, Please!

"Your American cream-ice is the coldest in the world," I could hear my British friend saying with quite un-British enthusiasm.

"Every evening when we were in America we would go to the pharmacy on the corner for a spot of cream-ice. Simply marvelous, your cream-ice!"

Her words came back to me as I listened to the radio announcing the shortage of ice cream overseas. And it struck me that while ice cream isn't exactly the staff of life, a diet without it would be a pretty gummy business indeed.

I remember painfully the chocolate ice cream soda without any ice cream that I once had in Scotland. I was very thirsty and, not thinking, rashly ordered just what I would have ordered over here. Nothing daunted, the manager produced what was certainly a thirst-destroying drink. It consisted of bitter chocolate, grated into small flakes, making a sort of chocolate snowstorm in a glass of charged water to which no syrup or sugar of any sort had been added. Let it be said, however, that full of the spirit of international friendliness, I downed the mixture to the last bitter flake!

Almost as unthinkable as an ice cream soda without ice cream would be a child's birthday party without it. For, to most children, ice cream is the party. Not the presents, not the games, not the pinning-the-tail-on-the-donkey—all these are just preliminaries patiently to be endured before the main event—the ice cream.

An amusing example of this happened here in Washington recently when a certain young mother thought it would be better for the children to have the games afterwards, and the ice cream first, so as not to interfere with their appetites for supper. So, when the little guests arrived at the birthday party they were immediately served with ice cream. But when they had spooned up the last delicious drop the children rose in a body, departed from the dining room, and went out the front door. The party, so far as they were concerned, was over!

One of the happy memories from my own childhood is of a birthday saved from utter tragedy by ice cream. We were on a small, storm-battered ship, long overdue. Life looked pretty bleak at the prospect of a birthday at sea without presents or party. But when the cook learned about it, all the fury of the gale didn't prevent him from making ice cream in my honor. It was pink, and made me very seasick, but was one of the most heartening and beautiful sights I have ever seen.

Then there was the great experience, so seldom known in this electrically refrigerated age, of licking the dasher. On Sundays up at the farm we used to gather round the big freezer on the back porch and take turns "cranking" until that marvelous moment came when the dasher with its great slathers of yellow ice cream (made of almost solid cream) was taken out and put into our grasping hands.

Ice cream hasn't been just the children's joy alone, but has delighted the palate of many a famous personage, ever since the days when slaves in summer brought snow from mountain caves for freezing. Alexander the Great and Julius Caesar had supplies of ice cream on their campaigns. The Ptolemy's were lovers of it and Marco Polo found it among China's wonders. Louis XIV served, in silver cups, what his guests thought were newly-laid eggs, but which turned out to be ice cream eggs, "a frozen sweetmeat cold and compact as marble."

On through the years ice cream pursued its cool, sweet course, and then—the sundae was born! It is said that about 60 years ago into the ice cream parlor of a Mr. Berners, at Two Rivers, Wis., came a boy customer, George Hallauer, who asked for some chocolate soda syrup on his dish of ice cream. By this simple act George made ice-cream history. For soon customers came running, demanding the new dish. But the added sauce increased the expense, and a certain confectioner, Mr. Giffy, declared that he would sell the new creation for a nickel on Sundays only. It is told how a little girl came into his store (at Manitowoc, Wis.) and asked for ice cream with "stuff" on it, whereupon Mr. Giffy told her that he had it only on Sunday. Then the little girl declared firmly that it certainly must be Sunday because she wanted that kind. So the amused Mr. Giffy decided to call the new concoction a sundae.

Who can ever forget that era of stupendous, not to say supercolossal sundaes, submerged in sauces and buried under avalanches of crushed nuts and fruits? The sundaes bore all sorts of names; "Goldfish Sundae" and "Lover's Delight," and the life of soda clerks was made miserable by youngsters who would think up sundaes not on the menu and ask for them: "A Queen of Sheba Sundae, please. What, you don't have it? (A tone of shocked surprise). Well, bring me a King Tut, then." And so on, far into the night.

You'd think inventions would have stopped forever with that sundae of sundaes, the Banana Split and its three hills of ice cream perched on a double causeway of banana in a sea of sauces! But no. After sundae has come mondae, that tall sky-scraper of the ice cream world.

Sundae and mondae. Can tuesdae, then, be far behind? Cream-ice, it's wonderful!

Capital Parade

By Joseph Alsop and Robert Kintner

Roosevelt, Hopkins and Churchill

THE PRESIDENT is going for a cruise not because he wants a vacation, but because he badly needs one. After eight grueling years in office, he is still in magnificent health, but his reserves of energy are no longer completely inexhaustible. They tend to run down periodically, as they did after the campaign.

ALSOP

When this occurs, the President not only falls victim to nagging minor illnesses, such as colds and sinus attacks. He is also forced to cut down his work, which means that all sorts of problems, some of them extremely serious and pressing, pile up on his desk to await his decisions. His cruises are certain restoratives, since at sea he sleeps endlessly and forgets all his worries. Then, too, at sea he is away from the perpetual, inescapably preoccupying routine of White House business, and has time to reach his decisions on big problems without petty distraction. That is why he always seems to return from his cruises with his sleeves rolled up, ready to make the governmental dust fly in every direction.

IN THE LAST few weeks he has been going through one of his periods of run-down, seeing very few people, and those only the most important, doing much of his work in his study or bedroom, and in general saving himself for the important occasions, such as the recent Cabinet meeting when he led a three-hour discussion without allowing himself to flag for a moment. Partly as a consequence of this situation, the role allotted to Harry L. Hopkins has vastly increased in importance. Hopkins is now carrying responsibilities far greater than he had before his trip to England or just after his return, and far greater even than his position as informal secretary of the Cabinet committee administering the lease-lend bill would indicate.

Hopkins, of course, is infinitely less well than the President. Where the President is generally able to work almost without interruption from the moment when his valet brings his breakfast to the moment when he prepares for sleep again, Hopkins can only manage a few hours work a day. But he has no routine. He tackles only the big problems. And by confining himself to these, even in his few hours he is able to predigest them for his chief. If he were not the first man on whom the President has ever placed this kind of reliance, he could not do the job. The best proof that he is doing it is the fact that although the President was out of sorts and unready for business, an over-all schedule of British and American defense needs has been drawn up and approved in the last fortnight, and the required appropriations have been requested of Congress.

Hopkins, moreover, is a completely changed man. Before he went to London he was only just beginning to grasp the war picture, and was still an advocate of compromise and slow-motion action. As all major policy must be passed on at the White House, the White House is inevitably the major bottleneck in the Government. Hopkins, living in the White House, always telling the President to go slow, was a major obstruction in the bottleneck. His only trouble was, however, that he had not come into sufficiently direct contact with the facts.

His trip to Britain was widely represented as political in purpose, and part of a grand international plot between British and American left-wingers. Actually, of his less than a month on British soil, he passed nearly three weeks living in the same house with Winston Chuchill, who is hardly a leading left-winger. On many days, he started with Churchill at breakfast, and stayed with him until it was time for a last Churchillian cigar, a nightcap and a final chat about the day's events. Thus he formed an intense admiration for Churchill, the man. Thus also, he acquired a grasp of the war picture far more direct and complete than that of any other man in the President's entourage. Since his return to this country, far from being an obstruction in the White House bottleneck, he has shown a fuller sense of urgency, and has pushed affairs forward faster than most of his coworkers.

SEEING THE NEW sense of urgency in his friend, the President apparently decided to use him to instill the same feeling in the numerous key men in the defense effort. Shortly after his return, Hopkins began a series of meetings with the chief personages in the OPM, the Army and the Navy.

KINTNER

At the OPM, even William S. Knudsen then tended to believe that once the orders for the original program had been placed and production was in progress, everything needful had been done. At the Army and Navy most officers tended to regard every gun and plane and ship sent to Britain as being cruelly snatched from their hands. Hopkins talked to them, sometimes calling conferences in his White House bedroom, sometimes lunching quietly with two or three men, sometimes foregathering with a big group after hours. He is a fervent man, with a touch of evangelist about him, and he carried a remarkable amount of conviction.

Such was the first phase. Now a second phase is beginning. A close liaison between the President and Churchill has been established. A proper sense of urgency has been spread with Hopkins playing a large part; the fact that Britain and America are making a joint effort will at last be faced, and joint policy-making committees, composed of both British and Americans, are likely to appear on the Washington scene.

Bishop Freeman Says President's Speech Is Best Yet

Declaring that the President's address Saturday night was "the best speech he ever made in his life" the Bishop of Washington, the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, from his pulpit in Washington Cathedral yesterday afternoon called for the full weight of the Christian forces of America "to get behind the President with all their militancy."

Bishop Freeman told the congregation of more than 500 that "the rediscovery of Christ in this age is the most important single thing in the world today," if America is to stand before the world a Christian nation. He stressed the importance now of a living personal Christ—not a Christ bound up in the words of creeds and dogmas.

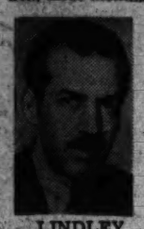
Strikes And Defense

By Ernest Lindley

"Cracking Down"

LAST FRIDAY the Army's new smokeless powder plant at Radford, Va., was opened for production, three months ahead of schedule. This is a big event in national defense. A shortage of smokeless powder has been one of the Army's greatest worries. Two other huge new smokeless powder plants, in addition to Radford, have been authorized. One of them, at Charlestown, Ind., is expected to begin production by mid-June.



LINDLEY

But the Radford plant can operate for the present at only one-fourth capacity because only one of its turbo-generators has been installed. The others are still in the Allis-Chalmers factory at Milwaukee. Allis-Chalmers has been tied up with a strike since January 22.

All over the country strikes at key points are holding up national defense. The Army counts 30 which directly affect its work. At least a dozen others, some of them big, are pending.

The soothing figures recently given by Sidney Hillman do not reveal the effect of labor troubles on national defense. There were fewer man-hours lost by strikes during the latter part of 1940 than during the latter part of 1939. The percentage of defense workers out on strike now is tiny—although it has gone up in the last few weeks. But a strike involving relatively few workers at bottlenecks may hold up the whole defense program.

The danger in the situation stirred the White House to action last week. A national mediation board, manned by persons of prestige, probably can do much to avert and shorten strikes. But a growing number of responsible officials are moving toward the conclusion that it may be necessary to "get tough."

THE QUESTION is where and with whom to "get tough" first. Administration officials have been reluctant to take organized labor to task while powerful employers are still openly or quietly resisting the plain law of the land. The National Labor Relations Act was passed in 1935, and upheld by the Supreme Court in 1937. But now, almost four years later, the right to bargain collectively has not yet been established in some large concerns and many smaller ones.

Whatever their technical standing under the law, Ford and Bethlehem Steel are regarded by labor leaders as conspicuous violators. Both are important to defense production; Bethlehem is indispensable. For months labor leaders and labor advisers in the Administration have been giving warnings that unless these big sore spots were cleaned up there would be trouble. Not only in Ford and Bethlehem factories, but all over the country. These, it has been emphasized, are the big symbols of opposition to collective bargaining.

Most of the business men who poured into Washington to supervise defense production were ignorant or contemptuous of the labor viewpoint. In collaboration with the Army and Navy they succeeded pretty well in getting around Sidney Hillman, a wise and moderate man. The President was compelled to intervene on several occasions to prevent the businessmen-Army combination from running away with the show.

The labor people say some of the trouble now occurring or looming in defense industries can be traced to the bad psychological effects of the failure to crack down on such employers as Ford and Bethlehem. They assert that if such concerns can be brought into line on the question of collective bargaining, the general attitude of organized labor, especially in the heavy industries, will be improved.

THIS EXPLANATION obviously has its limits. Many of the strikes now impending are not for the purpose of establishing collective bargaining, but to win higher wages and other specific concessions. To this comes the answer that defense industries are making a "killing;" that as long as they are allowed to make plenty of money, labor should get its share.

No formula can determine where, as a matter of justice, wages should be increased and by how much. The argument becomes interminable. The primary interest of the Government is that work shall not stop while bargaining goes on. Yet the right and power to strike are, in the last analysis, the basis of collective bargaining power on the side of labor.

There is no practicable way of preventing all strikes affecting defense production. Conciliation, mediation and appeals to the patriotism of both sides can only minimize the number and duration of stoppages. But the feeling is growing in official circles that the usefulness of these implements might be increased by "cracking down" in a few cases where either management or labor is acting with clearcut unreasonableness. The power of the Government to take over a private plant has not been employed. The Administration has been reluctant to use it. But the time is near when it may resort to it in at least one notorious case.

One crack-down on a manufacturer would strengthen the hand of the Administration in cracking down also on extremist labor groups, and perhaps enable it to mobilize more effectively, by appeals to reason and patriotism, the cooperation of the great majority of both sides in keeping defense production going at full speed.

As long as the chiselers on both sides are treated with benevolence, there is bound to be a certain lack of enthusiasm among others in responding to the appeal for putting continuous production above all other interests.

Text Of Hitler's Talk

Aid To Britain Too Late, He Says

By the Associated Press

Berlin, March 16.—The text of Adolf Hitler's memorial address today follows:

For the second time we enter this room for a memorial service to our people. Even more than a year ago we appreciate how inadequate are words to express the nation's thankfulness to its heroes. In times of long peace, the memory of the terrible experiences of war, out of which rise heroism, gradually grows dim. It even happens that a whole generation knows nothing of war as such and honors its heroes without being in the least worthy of them.

In such a circumstance the greatest sacrifice of man is acknowledged with superficial phrases. There is even danger that while remembering heroes of times past the men of the present regard themselves as free of the obligation to conduct themselves with a similar spirit of heroism.

But if the German people in the year 1941 honors its heroes it does so at a time and under circumstances which give it a right to hold up its head with pride as it pays tribute to men of the near and distant past who sacrificed their lives for the state.

As 12 months ago in this consecrated hall we turned our thoughts to our heroes there lay behind us the thoroughly successful beginning of a war which Germany did not want, but which was forced on us by the same forces which were responsible before in history for the great war of the peoples in 1914 and 1918.

THEY WERE the elements whose goal that time was to rob the German nation of the most primitive right of life, who in the years of the Versailles dictate, raised as the dogma of the new world order political enslavement and economic impotence, and now are opposed to the revival of our people with the same hatred with which they once pursued the Second Reich.

In complete misjudgment of the situation, in a sadly false estimate of their own and Germany's power, and in complete ignorance of the will and determination of the new German nation, of the new German leadership, they expected a second crushing of our people would be as easy as the first attempt.

The fact that the American Gen. Wood before the investigation committee of the American Senate testified that as early as 1936 Churchill told him Germany was getting too strong again and must be destroyed in a new war, established firmly in history the real responsibility for present developments.

England and France alone wanted war—not so much the people as a thin stratum of political and financial leadership behind which, wielding its last power, stood international Jewry and its world conspiracies of democracy and Free Masonry.

But it was the hope of these responsible war-makers which thrust Poland forward not only to attain outward justification for war but also to make sure in advance that Poland would play its World War role of dividing German strength.

THE 18-DAY campaign in Poland was but the precipitous end of these hopes. Under these circumstances the German people were able to enter the year 1940 with proud confidence. But our people did not deceive themselves as to the year lying ahead. The battle in the west, which remains in the memory of every living German World War soldier as an episode of suffering without end, had to be decided. In exact knowledge of our preparations and plans, in boundless confidence in the German soldier, his armament and leadership and ability and before all in this attitude, I dared on Memorial Day, 1940, to predict the battle before us would end in the most glorious victory in our history.

Eight weeks later this battle started.

But before the defense forces struck in the west what was probably the most important decision of the war was taken. On April 9, with just a few hours to spare, a dangerous British attempt to strike German defense powers in the heart from the north was anticipated. At dawn on May 10 this perhaps most dangerous threat to our military and political position had been swept aside. So the battle to a decision in the west could begin. It followed a course previously mapped out.

That which could not be done in four years of indescribable sacrifice in the World War was accomplished in a few weeks: the crushing of the British-French front.

Despite the conclusion of the guilty British prime minister of that time, the year 1940 will go down in history as one of the most decisive and significant. Because in this year there was a shift of power of truly historic importance. If in the year 1918 we could have had only a portion of this success the World War would have been won.

TODAY GERMAN forces stand throughout the world, men and material strengthened to an inconceivable degree, ready to complete joyfully and confidently, that which was begun in the epochal year of 1940.

So we approach with still greater right than in 1940 the German heroes of the past. All of us remember what they accomplished and endured in the World War. But we bow before their sacrifice, ourselves no longer unworthy. As the German divisions started the advance in the west today's memorial services has its most fitting beginning, because in countless soldiers' cemeteries in the west victorious sons stood for a moment of tribute at the graves of their heroic fathers.

The German people have recovered everything which once was sacrificed in a foolish delusion. So today we can recall with lightened hearts the sacrifice of life in the World War. But in the illustrious events of the present we must not overlook the vast spiritual powers for which the German people and its soldiers must thank the heroism of their ancestors.

The soldiers of the World War did not fall in vain. If at that time the sacrifice was not immediately crowned by success their heroic conduct left a heritage which an ever worthy German generation will prize with deepest emotion and which paralyzes the memories of our enemies.

It is perhaps this consciousness of strength which enabled the German people today to achieve such greatness. The people feel they are carrying out the will of heroic ancestors.

BESIDE THE dead of the World War lie now the fallen in continuation of this battle. And again as then the sons of our people lie in distant places, in the sea, everywhere as courageous fighters for their great German home. It is the same German man—be it in World War work or in the present fight which had been thrust upon us—who risks and gives his life to win for his people a greater future, a surer peace, a better organization and human comradeship than that given us by the dictators of Versailles.

But we think also of the Italian soldiers, who as allies also must give up their lives in distant parts of the world. Their ideals and objectives are the same as ours: The world is not here for a few people and an order based eternally on the distinction between the haves and the have-nots does not exist any more because the have-nots have determined to lay claim to their portion of God's earth.

The home front, too, in this war must make a greater sacrifice than formerly. The heroism of the home front contributes its bit to the most decisive battle in German history. And here it is not only the man who must show the power of his resistance but the woman, too. The nation has become a battling unity. And not because they sought this fight but because it was forced on them.

Behind us lies a winter of work. What remained to be improved has been done. The German army is now the strongest military instrument in our history. In the months of this winter our allies bore the brunt of the whole power of the British attack, but from now German forces again will resume their share of this load.

No power and no support coming from any part of the world can change the outcome of this battle in any respect. England will fall. The everlasting Providence will not give victory to him who, merely with the object of ruling through its gold, is willing to spill the blood of men. Germany demanded nothing of England and France. All of the Reich's renunciations, its disarmament and peace suggestions, were vain. The international finance plutocracy wants to fight this war to the finish. So the end of this war will and must be its destruction. Then may Providence find a way to lead their people, from whom the chains will be struck, into a better order.

WHEN ENGLAND and France declared this war England immediately began a fight against civil life. To the blockade of the World War, that war against women and children, it added this time air and fire war against peaceful villages and cities. In both these modes of war England will be defeated. The air war which Churchill started will destroy not Germany but England itself. Just so the blockade will not strike Germany but its inventor.

While the coming of winter limited battle actions on land, the fight in the air and on the sea continued. The heroism of submarine and ship crews goes hand in hand with that of our fliers.

We cannot crown observance of Memorial Day more worthily than to make a renewed determination to change the battle which our international enemies started as a war to our destruction into a final German victory.

So we enter the year 1941, cool and determined to end that which started the year before. It is quite immaterial what part of the earth or in which sea or in what airspace our German soldiers fight. They will know they battle for fate and freedom and the future of our people forever.

But while we end this battle victoriously we thank our heroes of the past, for we are saving that for which they fell: Germany, our people and its great German Empire.

Controlled Hot Dogs

Well, the hot dog is no better than "anybody else." The frankfurter and roll have lost their rugged individualism and become subject to federal regulation.

It is announced by the Department of Agriculture that hereafter "franks" must be tagged so that the consumer may know their complete record, character, background, etc. The all-hot now joins the growing cry, "Life ain't what it used to be!"

The idea is not to assure the "dog" a more abundant life, protect it from the hazards of a cruel world or give it more leisure. The Government is not trying to eliminate class lines between hot dogs or open up wider vistas to the bratwurst. The tagging is to be done so the public will know just what a hot dog is composed of. Fancy that!

No greater blow has ever been struck at the peace and happiness of the hot dog consuming public. The whole charm of the weenie has rested in the element of mystery surrounding it. No consumer knew what had gone into a hot dog. And no one cared.

No two frankfurters ever tasted alike. Some were worse than others. There were "dogs" that tasted as if they were meant for human consumption and there were "dogs" that seemed to be composed of minced inner tubes and red peppers.

There were "franks" that tasted as if made largely of choice cuts of pork and beef and there were those that tasted as if cat and horse meat had not been foreign to them.

Elmer Twitchell, one of the country's foremost hot-dog fanciers and a recognized authority on sausages, baloneys and liverwursts, is among those depressed by seeing the hot dog in the cold hand of Federal regulation. "When you bought a hot dog you knew you were gambling," he declared today. "The amazing popularity of the frank and roll was due almost wholly to the American love of adventure."

"No single item of food ever rose to the heights of popularity that the hot dog did," continued Elmer. "It had become an emblem of freedom, of unrestraint, of liberty, of outdoor fun. You associated it instinctively with the ball game, the horse race, the grid epic, the summer afternoon at the beach, and the weekend auto trip.

"It was the one thing the Government kept its hand off. And now that, too, has got to reform, obey orders, live right, go straight and be all that the Democratic Party thinks it should be."

Elmer was quite broken up. "You might as well try to put the carnival spirit under Federal control or try to control the mood of gypsies. It's all pretty terrible. I expect any day to hear that Washington has decided to have a Federal commissioner of peanuts and a National Chowder Consumers Protective Corporation."

Mayor LaGuardia says he thinks candidates for auto drivers' licenses should have the same strict tests given to people who want to operates planes. Why not? It's only a question of which tries to fly the higher.

The best crack of the year: Clare Boothe's "When bigger bags are made America will hold 'em."

Parisian Shops Continue Gibes At Nazi Rationing

Paris (via Berlin), March 11 (delayed) (AP).—Paris shopkeepers continue their funmaking at the expense of German food and clothing ration regulations. Here is the latest.

A prominent store on the Boulevard des Italiens put two manikins in the window clad only in odds and ends.

One was adorned in collar, tie, waiter's dickey, suspenders and other inconsequential items.

The other was completely wrapped in lace in lieu of other male attire.

A placard said, "This is all we can sell you without permits."

Call To Action

By Barnet Nover

A Speech And Its Setting

AS THE PRESIDENT addressed the White House Correspondents Association Saturday night his voice reached out to every corner of the continent and to the outermost ends of the earth. Many millions heard and were thrilled by his stirring words. Millions of others will learn of what he said only through surreptitious channels or as distorted by censorship and propaganda. But even they will not be long in doubt as to its meaning. For when the President spoke it was America speaking and when America speaks the whole world listens.

NOVER

The speach was a great and solemn turning point in this Nation's history. Behind it were years of doubt and confusion and indecision, resolved finally, during these last months into a floodtide of determination. Mr. Roosevelt's speech dedicated the United States to a forthright course from which there can be no retreat. The die has been cast. The decision to devote all our energies to the overthrow of totalitarianism in the world is irrevocable. That is why the President called for increasing sacrifices on the part of the American people, for renewed loyalty to the principles of democracy, for unstinted devotion from every man and every woman to the task at hand.

There can be not the slightest doubt as to the response the President will receive. For the decision as to the course the United States is henceforth to pursue in the present critical hour has the undoubted support of the great majority.

THE PRESIDENT'S words reached out beyond the seas. They reached out to the embattled peoples of Britain, Greece and China. To them his speech was a light held up 'mid the encircling gloom. "Give us the tools," Winston Churchill had said, "and we will do the job." We shall give you the tools, said Mr. Roosevelt. We shall give you the ships and the planes you need to enable you to fight on to victory, the food and the tanks and guns, the ammunition and other supplies.

There were others who listened. There was Yugoslavia, all but surrounded by German armies, but striving manfully to preserve her independence. There was Turkey, whom Hitler had sought to cajole into a policy of acquiescent indifference to a German march down to the Aegean when he has not tried to frighten her by grim reminders of German strength. There was the government at Vichy, which during recent weeks has been subjected to increasing pressure to take a place in that "new order" which Mr. Roosevelt rightly declared was neither new or order. And Spain, broken and starving, but linked to the Axis by ideological sympathies and unpaid debts of gratitude.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT was speaking to those nations and governments and to their people, though he did not mention their names, promising assistance to those prepared to resist the pressures of the Axis, tacitly warning those who may be tempted by Hitler's siren voice that the tremendous power of the United States is now aligned on the side of Hitler's enemies.

He was also speaking to the captive peoples of Europe—to the Czechs and Poles and Danes, to the Norwegians and Netherlanders and Belgians, to the inhabitants of occupied France, to Magyars and Rumanians and Bulgars and others now living under an alien yoke which they undoubtedly hate but which they are at the moment impotent to overthrow. The radio broadcasts of the President's speech may never reach those peoples. Their newspapers may not publish a line of its text. They will learn of it somehow. For news gets around in that jungle which is German Europe even as it does in the jungles of Africa. And when they hear of it they will discount the statement made by Hitler on Sunday in obvious reply to Mr. Roosevelt that "no power and no support coming from any part of the world can change the outcome of this battle in any respect." Having felt its impact at first hand they do not underestimate the power which the Third Reich wields. But they also know that power has thus far proved insufficient to bring the British to their knees. And they know the power which the United States is able to exercise once it has organized itself to do so.

HITLER'S speech is further evidence, if any more were needed that we are on the eve of great and terrible events. The Balkan pot is beginning to reach the boiling point. The Battle of the Atlantic is under way and with present results which neither the British nor we can afford to view with the slightest equanimity. The aerial war of attrition against British centers has been intensified. The next two or three months may be the decisive months of the war.

The British, the Greeks, the Chinese are doing all they can to stem the tide of aggression. To help them is to help ourselves. They are "in the front line of civilization" as the President said. But modern wars are not won in the front line alone. The apparatus of victory must be forged behind the lines. That is why the Battle of Production in which President Roosevelt has enlisted every American may prove so crucial in determining the ultimate outcome. That is why speed is of the very essence.

Embassy in Dark on Reporter's Arrest

By the Associated Press

The American Embassy in Berlin reported to the State Department yesterday that it had been unable to learn any details of the arrest of Richard C. Hottelett, 23-year-old American newspaperman, in the German capital.

DNB, German news agency, announced Saturday that Hottelet, an employe of the United Press, had been arrested "on strong suspicions of espionage" not connected with his newspaper work. The State Department immediately cabled the embasssy asking full details.

The embassy replied yesterday, saying a member of its staff went to see the German secret police and was told that after a period of inquiry, during which Hottelet could not be interviewed, he would be given opportunity to have legal counsel and to speak with an embassy representative.

The police promised, the dispatch said, that the case would have early attention from the prosecuting authorities, and the German foreign office promised that information concerning the cause of the arrest would be given the embassy as soon as possible.

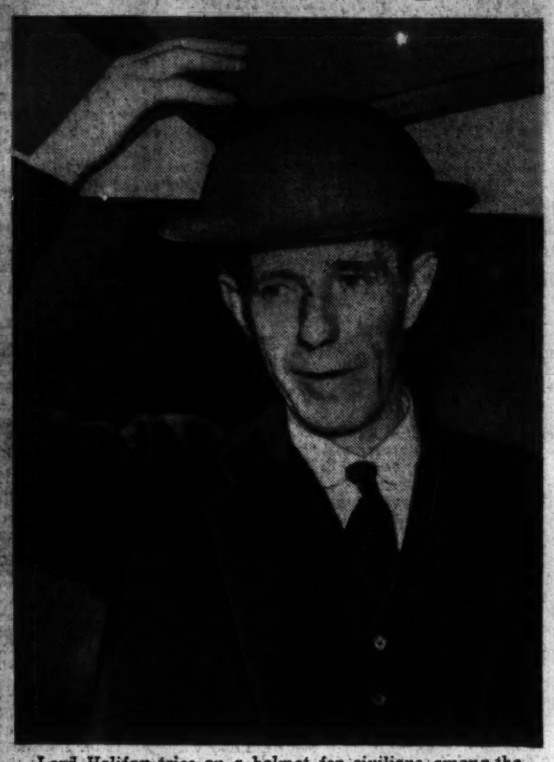
Lord Halifax Inspects Mobile Tea Kitchen From Britain



Lord Halifax tries on a helmet for civilians, among the souvenirs the kitchen carries.

By Scott Hart

THE fire-scorched, bomb-scarred "Iron Duke," mobile tea kitchen from England, yesterday visited the British Embassy, where Lord Halifax spoke favorably of the tea it serves and more feelingly of the service it performed for his countrymen.

"I am glad to inspect this mobile tea kitchen which has been brought to the United States from England by the British War Relief Society," the Ambassador said.

"Those of us who have seen these tea kitchens in operation fully realize the valuable service they perform in modern warfare. Their work, particularly in rushing hot tea and food to those who have been suddenly made homeless by bombs, has played a great part in keeping our people cheerful and enabling them to carry on."

LORD HALIFAX, accepting a cup of tea from Mrs. F. Hugh Treherne-Thomas, former officer of the British Women's Voluntary Service, who is accompanying the "Iron Duke" on its 5,000-mile American tour, continued:

"The service rendered by this particular mobile tea kitchen is evidenced by its war scars—the holes torn in its sides and the honorable scorch marks it has earned during the great fire in the city of London. It is a fine example of the valiant service that the many tea kitchens, provided by funds of the British War Relief Society, are rendering the people of Britain."

MANY of the embassy's staff joined the Ambassador in inspecting the vehicle. Earlier it had stopped at Chevy Chase Circle and after the Embassy visit went to Massachusetts and Wisconsin Avenues Northwest, for another exhibition. Everywhere it attracted crowds. In the late afternoon it was driven to 6326 Sixteenth Street Northwest, home of Mr. and Mrs. William Park, where the Daughters of Scotia gave a tea.

Yesterday's activities concluded the two-day Washington visit, made under auspices of the British War Relief Society, of which Mrs. Robert Low Bacon is the chairman.

THE vehicle was on constant duty for a six-month period in the Battle of Britain. It was one of the many tea kitchens serving civilians during the intensive air raids on London December 29. It was brought here "to demonstrate Britain's vital need for mobile tea kitchens," its sponsors have pointed out.

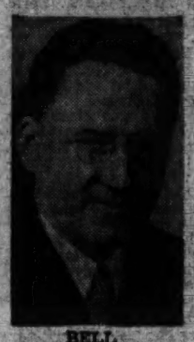
Hope for a Hit Inspired By 'Hope for a Harvest'

Cast Completed for March-Eldridge Starrer; Tallulah Bankhead Holds Cocktail Court; This, That and the Other About the Theater

THINGS ARE MOVING ALONG in the matter of the Theater Guild's sixth and last subscription play of the season at the National.

Alan Reed, Edith King, Judy Parfish, Helen Carewe, Doro Merande, Arthur Franz and Shelly Hull have been added to the cast of the Guild's production of Sophie Treadwell's new comedy, "Hope for a Harvest," which will open a week's engagement on E Street, April 21, with Fredric March and Florence Eldridge in the costellar roles—except that by its persistent perversity the Guild never stars or costars anybody. Watson Barratt is curled over his blueprints of the settings while the cast rehearses in the Guild Theater, New York.



BELL

Half of the spring tour of "Hope for a Harvest" already has been booked. The play will open on Friday night, April 4, in the Shubert Theater, New Haven. Beginning Monday night, April 7, it will tenant the Colonial Theater, Boston, for two weeks. After that, Washington for one week only. The piece will not be seen on Broadway until next season.

I can think of no happier anticipation than greeting Freddie March and his charming wife, Florence Eldridge, again. Our last association here, back in 1939, was a peculiarly pleasant and propitious one. So I am still wavering about that balm in Gilead business. There may be some, after all.

Tallulah Bankhead, the dynamic and devastating delineator of the Borgian Regina Giddens in Lillian Hellman's "The Little Foxes," which opens a return engagement in the National tonight, held moderately high revels for the press yesterday afternoon at 5. Miss Bankhead is just up from a triumphant tour of her native South. Lily May Caldwell, who seems to be a combination art-and-drama columnist for the Birmingham News—Age-Herald, writes to inform me that "Taloo" broke all records in Birmingham by playing to something like 18,000 patrons in three performances. "No star," says Miss Caldwell, "ever received such an ovation." But what Miss Caldwell seems particularly worried about is that Miss Bankhead seems destined not to play the role of Regina Giddens on the screen. She feels that the role is inalienably and inseparably Miss Bankhead's. It is not difficult to agree with her. How Tallulah feels about it I wouldn't know, because yesterday's levee fell at an hour when this department is lashed to the masthead, in a manner of speaking. But I'll find out later—I hope.

So many Washingtonians were unable to secure seats for last week's engagement of Helen Hayes and Maurice Evans in "Twelfth Night," at the National, that it seems expedient to break our general rule of not "playing one city against another" by saying that seats are available for the current week's run of the Shakespeare skylark in Baltimore. Bess Davis Schreiner, sales manager for the Theater Guild-American Theater Society subscription season in both cities, with offices in the National, would be the most helpful person to contact.

By a recent slight temblor in the executive organization of the Kogod-Burka amusement enterprises, Corbin Sheilds, veteran Washington showman, once more ascends to a position of importance in the Capital's theatrical scheme. Mr. Sheilds, formerly manager of the Rialto, Garden, RKO-Keith's and other distinguished temples of the arts, now is manager of the Apex Theater, one of the handsomest residential picture houses in or about the District. Congratulations.

It was part of last week's ill luck that we were playing truant from the desk when Elinor Lane, of the Civic Theater, brought Wallace Acton, the Sir Andrew Aguecheek in "Twelfth Night," into the tesselated elegance of the drayma department to pass the time of day. Mr. Acton, I am led to believe, was especially disturbed by a letter he had received from an unidentifiable "Mrs. M. V. Thompson." The letter, it seems, began as a deserved "rave" over his miming of Sir Andrew and then sloughed off into a ruthless rebuke for his ungentlemanly conduct on the dance floor of a midcity hotel later in the same evening. Never having been any nearer the hotel in question than the National Theater, Mr. Acton was a little bewildered by it all. One suspects that the boors of the ballroom must have been a couple of other fellows—probably named Joe.

So it is that admirable young actor, Glenn Ford, who takes time out in Hollywood to drop a cordial note of appreciation of something or other we printed about his exceptional performance with Fredric March and Margaret Sullavan in "So Ends Our Night." We have said ever since we met him that the youthful Mr. Ford is a fellow to be watched. Our good eye still is practically glued on him.

Turmoil-in-the-Umbrella-Tree Note

They didn't fool me this time. Those were blackbirds, not robins, raising all that tumult under the bedroom window in the middle of the night yesterday noon!

No Wonder the Little Fellow Decided to Come Back!

JOAN BLONDELL

in one of her more enticing moments in United Artists' production of "Topper Returns," scheduled to open its first Washington engagement Thursday on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater. Roland Young continues in the title role. And if you think Topper hasn't returned, there he is right down there in the lower left-hand corner

Great Variety Marks Bill At Trans-Lux

There is plenty of action, zip and go in the new program at the Trans-Lux Theater. The outstanding pictures in the news are those taken as the Australians capture Eritrea and mop up the Italians along the Libyan frontier. While the Italians have bombed Salonika, the Greeks push forward through blizzards of untold ferocity, taking thousands of prisoners and capturing great quantities of ammunition and supplies.

From England come interesting shots of the British officers battle school in preparation against Nazi invasion; London firemen with 200 hose pumps in action; Queen Elizabeth holding court for youthful cotton-dress models, and King George and the Duke of Kent greeting America's new Ambassador, John G. Winant. Wounded French soldiers are decorated, while in Greece there are details of the funeral of the late Premier Metaxes.

America Also Present

In the United States, we find Congress passing the lend-lease bill and pictures of President Roosevelt as he approves; United States troops in daily routine at the newly created Newfoundland base; plans for the new huge Martin bomber plant and United States Artillery in a gas drill, with the horses as well as men equipped with masks.

Sarazen and Hogan win a nice golf match at Coral Gables, and the handicap is run at Santa Anita.

The travelog of the week takes you to Panama. Here is a timely study of this great canal, the truly "seventh wonder" of the world. "Screen Snapshots" gives Bob Hope, Brenda and Cobina and other Hollywood lights a chance to do their stuff. "Feathers" is a beautiful saga in colors of the bird colony at Santa Catalina Park. The cartoon of the week is the motion-picture-award winner, M. G. M.'s "The Milky Way."

Leonard Lyons:

New York, March 16.

FINANCE DEPT.: Sam Goldwyn has been anxious to secure the movie rights to "Life With Father." He came to New York, had conferences with Mrs. Clarence Day, then with the authors, Crouse & Lindsay, and finally with the producer, Oscar Serlin. Goldwyn expressed his admiration for the play, and told Serlin just how the movie adaptation would be made. But he spoke hazily about the matter of purchase price . . . "What is your offer?" Serlin asked . . . Goldwyn's answer was complimentary, but not direct. Serlin repeated the question—and again Goldwyn's reply was uninformative . . . "Now, please," the producer finally protested, "please be specific. What is your offer?" . . . "I'll be very specific," replied Goldwyn with finality, "I'll give you—half of Hollywood."

SOCIAL NOTES: Goldwyn also came to New York to discuss with Mayor LaGuardia the question of Fiorello's publicity campaign to bring the motion picture industry to this city. He phoned the mayor's office. "Mr. Goldwyn calling." Fiorello's secretary announced . . . "I'm busy now," said the mayor, "so you talk to him" . . . The secretary insisted that Fiorello speak, but the mayor was adamant . . . "Look, Mr. Mayor," his secretary finally persuaded, "if you talk to Sam Goldwyn, he's liable to pull one of those cracks for which he's famous" . . . And so the mayor answered the call.

SPORTS DEPT.: Jack Dempsey, whose 'two fists once brought him to the heavyweight championship—a title which indicated that he could lick any man in the world—at last has discovered that his fists no longer suffice . . . Dempsey just has applied for a pistol-permit.

BOOK DEPT.: Every author who ever mailed an autographed copy of his book, always has placed on the package the usual number of stamps covering fourth-class postage rates. No author considers that the writing of a personal inscription on the inside cover brings it, technically, into the first-class mail rate. . . . Only one author ever has deviated from this practice. All the autographed copies of "Behind the Ballots" were mailed at first-class rates, by the author, James A. Farley, who insisted upon this strict adherence because he was the Postmaster General of the United States.

POLITICS DEPT.: The refugee President of Lithuania, Smetona, was given a reception at the Hotel Pierre, on East Sixty-first Street. While the flags of Lithuania, the nation which was swallowed by the Soviet Union, were spread in his honor across the hotel's windows, Smetona pointed directly across the street—at the Russian Consulate building. "This is a great democracy," he said, "where I can look down on the Red flag, and yet find a haven."

ILLUSTRATED SECTION: Some weeks ago, at Ciro's in Hollywood, a stranger approached Jack Albin, the photographer for Screen Guide magazine. "What does one have to do to have his picture taken with a movie star?" he asked . . . He explained that he was with his daughters, who wanted a photo of their dad with a famous screen star . . . And so in the current issue of Screen Guide is a photo of John R. Montgomery, the Manhattan banker, with Dorothy Lamour, at Ciro's.

DRAMA DEPT.: Once, in El Morocco, William Saroyan and Elia Kazan sat at the same table and heaped praise upon each other. "I know the secret of Kazan's success as an actor," Saroyan told me. "He moves at an angle. Watch me do it—I can play him perfectly." And so we watched—while Saroyan played Kazan . . . The actor smiled and applauded, but never revealed that he was planning to play Saroyan—which he did so well in the new play, "Five Alarm Waltz."

ART DEPT.: Billy Rose attended the Leonardo da Vinci exhibit in New York, where the models for the amazing and prophetic inventions of Da Vinci were shown . . . Rose became enthusiastic and telephoned a friend. "I just saw this wonderful exhibit," he stated. "It isn't being presented well. No showmanship. I'm going to try and take it over, and do it right. I can visualize the whole thing right now—first, the sign: 'Billy Rose presents Leonardo da Vinci.'"

MUSIC DEPT.: Aaron Copland, the music critic, visited at the home of Oscar Levant. After a few hours, Copland decided it was time to leave, and the reluctant Levant saw him to the door . . . "Aaron," was his parting word, "you're developing into an egomaniac. You used to be able to sit here and listen to me talk all night."

THEATER DEPT.: Dr. Karl Menninger, the eminent psychiatrist, saw "Lady in the Dark" and then went to Lindy's, where he was introduced to Artie Shaw and to the author of that play about psychoanalysis, Moss Hart . . . Hart discussed the effect of psychoanalysis upon his playwriting . . . "What do you think would have happened," Dr. Menninger was asked, "if Strindberg had been psychoanalyzed?" . . . "The answer is obvious," Shaw interrupted. "Then Strindberg would have written 'Lady in the Dark.'"

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, March 16 (INS). The first serial queen since the lush days when Pearl White, Ruth Roland and Helen Holmes hung by their eyebrows to railroad trestles, will be Frances Gifford. Republic has just signed her for Edgar Rice Burroughs "Jungle Girl," a $1,000,000 serial. For eight months scouts have been trying to find a serial queen, 18,000 photographs have come in, 800 girls have been interviewed and 50 tested. Interestingly enough, Republic read my story about Frances, who came to see me about her matrimonial troubles with Jimmie Dunn. Now they would like to buy her contract from Paramount.

PARSONS

You can take my word that Frances is one of the prettiest girls I have ever seen—so pretty that when she came into the room the four men present voted her the most beautiful girl in Hollywood.

If blase audiences in New York laughed themselves sick over "Charley's Aunt" on the stage, Darryl Zanuck figured when he paid $100,000 for the stage hit produced in 1890, that movie audiences would have the same reaction. Otherwise, he wouldn't have planked down that amount of money. The important thing is to get all the comedy possible, and with Jack Benny in the lead, the next step was to get a good director. Today Archie Mayo was signed to direct "Charley's Aunt," Jack's first Twentieth Century-Fox movie.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Alan Curtis expects to get his final divorce papers tomorrow and he and Ilona Massey will wed next week; Bill Blowitz of the Warner publicity department was married today to Nina Stihi; Noel Coward, just a week later than he was expected, arrived on the American clipper today; Keye Luke, who plays Charlie Chan's son in the movies, has just sold a set of his black and white drawings for a de luxe edition of Donn Byrne's "Messer Marco Polo."

Garson Kanin lunching with Frances Neal. He'd better wire Katharine Hepburn quickly that it doesn't mean a thing; the Lloyd Nolans drove in from New York today with a new car; Florine McKinney and her former husband, Barry Trivers, at Ciro's. Ann Sheridan and George Brent also celebrating the end of Annie's contract troubles at the same place. The James Cagneys, the George Murphys, Roger Pryor and Ann Southern, The Ralph Bellamys, the Sonny Chaliffs and Cesar Romero were those who made merry with Annie and George.

The Buster Colliers leave on the Chief for New York tomorrow with Joan Blondell and Dick Powell; the shower given for Deanna Durbin today by her future mother-in-law, Mrs. Val Paul, was very nice indeed. All the Universal stars and the executives wives were there with gifts for Universal's favorite star. With less than a month to get ready for her wedding, Deanna is a very busy girl; Buddy Westmore suffering with an abscessed dear; N. T. G., the dynamic Nils Granlund, celebrates one year in Hollywood Sunday night with special festivities at the Florentine Gardens.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Gayety

Burlesque's No. 1 star and one of the most lovely girls in show business—Ann Corio—is the featured performer at the Gayety this week.

Miss Corio, who has recently finished a book and has just been voted the favorite of the lads at Camp Dix, N. J., seems to grow lovelier with each succeeding visit. In her current appearance, Ann sings (?) several catchy tunes and presents some of her own colorful beauty parades. We might add that the pride of Hartford, Conn., is also wearing some lovely gowns which add much to her musical specialties.

Headlining in the comedy sector are George Lewis and Billy Foster. Both lads are using some very witty and original "bits," and with the assistance of clever Danny Jacobs make the lighter moments of the production most jolly.

Dark-eyed Ann Smith, stunning Conchita and cute Leona Lewis for a trio of sirens who offer much in the song and dance line, while the "ladies of the ensemble" are youthful and easy on the eyes.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, March 16.

"Who says vaudeville is dead?" exclaimed that blonde giant, Stirling Hayden, who's just back from the first personal appearance tour he ever made in connection with his first picture, "Virginia."

HOPPER

From the White House to the hard road of one-night stands was some jump. He did 11 shows a day in Boston. Left here a novice, has returned with the greatest fund of experience any young man could ever get. Even the great Will Rogers used to be scared stiff making speeches. When he first came here, he spoke at women's clubs, theaters, tents, churches, collseum—did as many as three talks a night, just to get the feel of an audience. And after proving himself before every kind of persons, he was ready to tackle his weight in wildcats.

That's just what Stirling Hayden has been doing, and he said to me, "Gee, it was tough going, Hedda, but I've learned more in a few weeks than I could in years of just making pictures. I'd advise any young player to grab at the chance if they ever get it—to do just what I did."

"That Night in Rio"—and what a night!—has got what it takes, and what you want—gorgeous color, thrilling tunes, and a plot with comedy situations rarely equaled. Add to all that Carmen Miranda, and you can forget the world for an hour and a quarter. The stars, in order of performance, are the miraculous Miranda, Don Ameche, hitting a new high in a difficult dual role (in some shots he's a dead ringer for Ronnie Colman), and Travis Banton, costume designer. Curt Bois is outstanding among the featured players.

I love Alice Faye, but she's miscast as a countess. But if Miranda doesn't shake you out of your seats, you'd better run to the nearest doctor.

Patricia Morison and Paramount are having some trouble. Patricia's burned up because with eight pictures coming up on her home lot, they've loaned her to Republic for the lead opposite Gene Autry.

Now if Pat's half as smart as I think she is, she'll clap her hands and run into Gene Autry's arms. And if, when she rides back over Cahuenga Pass to her home lot, even a fraction of Autry's fans are following her, Paramount will never loan her out again. It's a great opportunity, sez I.

With the Mesh Younger Generation: Freddie Bartholomew escorted Jane Withers to the Motion Picture Mothers dance the other night. Janet claims Freddie is the best waltzer among the teen-agers. Her other nominations: Joe Brown, jr., best jitterbug; Buddy Pepper, rhumba; Dick Clayton, La Conga; Jackie Cooper, best all-around dancer . . .

Gals, if you want the b. f. to propose, you should wear red, orange, yellow, or purple, according to Director Rouben Mamoulian, who uses them in love scenes for "Blood and Sand," which is in technicolor. Rouben says the old masters used these colors to suggest love. He stresses innocence and purity in Linda Darnell's character by the use of whites and blues. Next he'll be sending down to casting for a green-and-red personality with just a touch of yellow!

"To impress Jack Oakie, Director Archie Mayo connected an electric wire to a small battery and gave the comedian an unexpected jolt. Then yesterday Jack wired the director's chair, and Mayo howled as if he'd been stung by a bee. Now they're even.

Art World Moves In For Gallery Opening

By Dudley Harmon

A good part of Pittsburgh—the cream of the art and social world in New York—museum directors from as far West as St. Louis—and even a smattering of South Americans—will mingle in the brilliant throng at the opening of the National Art Gallery tonight.

A "Good Neighbor" touch will be imparted when Nelson Rockefeller shepherds a group of distinguished South American leaders in the arts and sciences. Mr. Rockefeller, who is cultural and economic coordinator with Latin America, will entertain at a dinner before hand. His guests are men from below the Rio Grande who are here for a period of travel and observation.

They include Dr. Enrique Martinez Paz, of Argentina, historian and lawyer, who has taught for many years in the University of Cordoba. Another, from Chile, is Dr. Domingo Amunatagui y Solar. One of the most eminent historians of South America, Dr. Solar has also served as minister of justice and public instruction and as minister of the interior.

Luncheon Held At Gallery

The enormous kitchen in the basement of the gallery was inaugurated yesterday when Mr. and Mrs. David Finley gave a large luncheon in honor of the visiting museum directors and their wives. About 150 were present, seated at small tables centered with yellow flowers. Piece de resistance of the meal was chicken pot pie.

Samuel Kress, of New York, who took his famous collection of Italian paintings off the walls of his home and presented them to the gallery, was among the guests. Others included Francis Henry Taylor, director of the Metropolitan Museum in New York; Russell Plimpton, of the Minneapolis Art Institute; the director of the Baltimore Municipal Museum and Mrs. Richard C. Medford, Hardinge Scholle, of the Museum of the City of New York, and Mrs. Scholle; the director of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts and Mrs. G. H. Edgell, and the director of the Museum of Modern Art in New York and Mrs. Alfred H. Barr, jr.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence V. Coleman of the American Association of Museums, and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas C. Parker, of the American Federation of Arts, were others present. Also at the luncheon were Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hitchcock, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. David Bruce, Gist Finley, brother of the host, and his father, David Finley, sr.

Many Here From Pittsburgh

A little bit of Pittsburgh will be the room at the Carlton, where Mr. and Mrs. Paul Mellon will entertain at a large buffet supper tonight. Mr. Mellon is, of course, the son of the late Andrew Mellon, who made the new gallery possible. He recently made the headlines when he enrolled for courses at St. John's College in Annapolis. Among his guests tonight will be the president of St. John's, Dr. Stringfellow Barr.

A great many of his other guests read like a "Who's Who in Pittsburgh." They include Dr. Andrew Avinoff, director of the Carnegie Museum, and Dr. E. R. Weidlein, director of the Mellon Institute.

Col. Samuel Harden Church, president of Carnegie Institute, will attend the Mellon dinner with Mrs. Church. Dr. and Mrs. John G. Bowman, the former is chancellor of the University of Pittsburgh, and Mr. and Mrs. Allen M. Seaife—she is a Mellon—also will be guests of the Paul Mellons.

Assisting the hosts at the party will be Mr. and Mrs. Donald Shephard, of Washington. Mr. Shephard was attorney for the late Andrew Mellon and is one of the trustees of the gallery.

Every room in the larger Washington hotels has been taken since early in the week by out-of-towners here for the opening of the gallery. Lady Decies, who recently returned to this country from Paris, where she still owns a home, is at the Mayflower. Others stopping there are Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Cartier, of New York—they've been vacationing in Florida; Mr. and Mrs. George Wharton Pepper, of Philadelphia, Mrs. George Blumenthal, wife of the president of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and Mr. and Mrs. George Harrison Phelps, of New York.

Mrs. Woods To Give Tea

From St. Louis will come Perry Rathbone, director of the Museum there, and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Pulitzer.

Parties continue to pile up for the visitors. Mrs. Arthur Woods will be hostess at tea today for some of the out-of-towners, and there is Mrs. Robert Low Bacon's dinner tonight. Many New Yorkers are putting up with Mrs. Bacon over the weekend.

With Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Phillips at their home on Foxhall road, which is filled with beautiful paintings, are several persons prominent in the art world. They include F. M. Clapp, of the Frick Gallery; Mrs. Clapp, W. G. Constable, curator of painting at the Boston Museum, and Mrs. Constable, and Miss Elizabeth Hudson, of New York, a trustee of the Syracuse Museum. Mr. and Mrs. Phillips will be among the many hosts at dinner tonight.

Tea Is Given For Rep. Smith

Representative Margaret Chase Smith, of Maine, was honor guest at a tea given yesterday by Miss Marion E. Martin. The latter is head of women's activities for the Republican National Committee and comes from Bangor in Mrs. Smith's home State.

The party took place at the clubhouse of the League of Republican Women. At the tea table were Mrs. Wallace H. White and Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, wives of the Maine Senators; Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, Representative Jessie Sumner, Representative Jeannette Rankin, Mrs. James C. Oliver, Mrs. Charles R. Clason, Mrs. Edward Everett Gann and Mrs. Elizabeth Mae Craig.

Among the guests were many of the Republican members of Congress. Miss Martin will entertain again at tea next Sunday for members of the Republican National Committee.

A. A. U. W. to Hear Irish Music Today

Mrs. Richard R. Hutcheson, a former pupil of Sigmund Stojowski, will play Irish music in honor of St. Patrick's Day at the tea of the Washington Branch of the A. A. U. W. today. The hostess will be Dr. Mildred Dickerson.

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney will be the guest speaker at the club dinner on Wednesday evening, on the subject "What Makes Big Government Big."

Senator O'Mahoney is chairman of the TNEC and is presented by the committee on the legal and economic status of women, of which Miss Nelle L. Ingels is chairman. A reception will precede the dinner, at which Mrs. Ena Thompson will serve as hostess.

Miss Ruth Henderson will present a study and reading illustrating "Moods in Poetry" at the morning poetry group on Thursday; and Miss Edythe Rose will be hostess at the junior group dinner bridge party.

Mrs. James Sheara Montgomery will show her moving pictures, "Mediterranean Mosaics," on Friday morning. These pictures are in color and include many places in the news recently. Dr. and Mrs. Montgomery toured southern Europe in 1939, and were in Italy when war was declared. Mrs. Montgomery describes the pictures as they are shown and relates experiences while taking them.

Officials to Be At Concert

Mrs. Roosevelt has turned the White House box at Constitution Hall over to Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed for the performance of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra tomorrow night. With Justice and Mrs. Reed will be the Vice President and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace.

Many other important officials have made reservations for the concert, at which Frances Nash Watson, gifted wife of Maj. Gen. Edwin Watson, will play a piano concert by the famous American composer, Edward MacDowell. Gen. Watson has taken a second box for the event, in addition to the one which he and Mrs. Watson share with Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Woodward for the season.

Reservations also have been made by Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, Mrs. Patrick Hurley, Mrs. Thomas Cowell, Mrs. Mae Hamilton, E. K. Finkenstaedt, Mrs. C. C. Chauncey, Mrs. Robert Dougan, James B. C. Howe, Mrs. Robert S. Brookings and Fernando de Medeiros, Second Secretary of the Brazilian Embassy.

Congressional Club To Hear Lecture By Jose L. Colom

The Congressional Club group which has been making educational tours of the embassies and legations of the Latin-American republics, will go to the Pan American Building this afternoon at 2:30. The members, of whom there are 90, will be addressed by the chief of the division of Agriculture Cooperation of the Pan American Union, Jose L. Colom, a Puerto Rican.

Mr. Colom will speak on "Agriculture Cooperation in the Western Hemisphere," in the Hall of the Americas.

The trip to the Pan American Union will be substituted for that which was scheduled to the Colombian Embassy today but postponed because of the absence from the city of the Ambassador, Dr. Gabriel Turbay.

Mrs. Owens Has Guests for Dinner

Mrs. Junior Owens entertained at dinner Saturday night in her apartment at 1945 Calvert Street.

Her guests, all from the Congressional contingent, included Representative and Mrs. Luther Johnson, of Texas; Representative and Mrs. Dow Harter, of Ohio; Representative John J. Cochran, of Missouri, and Representative and Mrs. Thomas Rolph, of California.

Mrs. Lionel Atwill Entertains 30 In Her New Home

Entertainment at a pre-moving day housewarming, Mrs. Lionel Atwill was hostess to about 30 friends yesterday in the home she recently bought at 1400 Thirty-fourth Street in Georgetown. Mrs. Atwill has purchased two homes in that district "as an investment," but hasn't moved into either yet. She warned her friends "there probably won't be enough china and chairs to go 'round," but so many had asked to see the houses that she decided to show one, anyway.

Mrs. Atwill was hostess at a dinner at the F Street club on Saturday in honor of Robert Olsen, son of California's Governor. Among the guests were former Senator Henry Ashurst, Mr. and Mrs. Julian Chetwynd of the British Embassy and Dr. Anthony Sindoni, of Philadelphia.

Lecture Series Will Open Today

A series of lectures being sponsored by the Woman's Guild of Grace Episcopal Church will open this morning at 11 o'clock at the parish house, with a talk by Mrs. Hester B. Provenson, assistant professor of speech at the University of Maryland, on "Making the Most of One's Personality." Mrs. Ronald McDonald is in charge of the series.

The next in the series will be Miss Harriet Elliott, head of the consumer division of the National Defense Advisory Commission, who will discuss "The Consumer in Defense," on March 31. The subject for April 1 has been announced as "Britain at Home in 1941," but no speaker has been named. May 5 there will be a trip to the National Gallery of Art and on May 19 at 8 p. m., a talk by Ray Tucker, newspaper correspondent, on "The News Behind the News."

Barbara Kibbey To Wed April 19

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Worthington Kibbey announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Barbara Clarkson Kibbey, to George William Woltz, son of Mrs. Edna Woltz.

The wedding will take place April 19, in St. Paul's Lutheran Church. Miss Kibbey is a graduate of Central High School and the Mount Pleasant School for Secretaries. Mr. Woltz is with the Maryland Electric Appliance Co., of Hyattsville.

Countess Korzybska Here for Two Weeks

Countess Mira Edgerly Korzybska has arrived in Washington to spend two weeks and is at the Grafton Hotel.

The Countess is a well known portrait painter, and is represented in many famous museums. Among her Washington subjects have been Mrs. Joseph Leiter, Mr. and Mrs. Breckinridge Long, Mrs. Edward Beale McLean and Miss Stellita Stapleton.

Mrs. Zadae Daniels and Miss Marie Marvel will be joint hosts at a St. Patrick's Day dinner tonight at the Silver Bowl. Invited guests include members of the War Department Breakfast Club, a social organization which was founded by Miss Marvel. Among those who will attend are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Sullivan, Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Matthews, Mr. and Mrs. William Belt, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Vaden, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Baty, Mrs. Ruby Aldrich, Miss Signe Holter, Miss Florence Clark, Stuart Burch, Frank Freer, Henry Beck and Robert L. Sheridan.

Capital Whirl

By Sally Swift

IN A WEEKEND largely given over to out-of-town guests, Mrs. Kent Legare struck a different note by entertaining some of her old friends in honor of Jack Newbold's birthday. The party really was more in honor of the birthday than of Maj. Newbold, himself, as the guest of honor had to stay away from the celebration with only the flu for company. Pretty Mrs. Newbold represented the family with her usual grace and the birthday was voted a success for everyone but Maj. Newbold.

Mrs. Legare is one of the most distinguished hostesses in Washington, as well as being one of the most decorative. Each course at her dinners is perfect, rather than elaborate, and her wines are said by connoisseurs to be among the best in Washington. Among her guests the other night were the Counselor of the Belgian Embassy and Baroness de Gruben, Mrs. Anthony Coleby, Mr. and Mrs. Jasper Du Bose and Mme. Andor de Hertelendy. Also present were Count and Countess van Rechteren, both interested in preparations for Willem's forthcoming trip to the Dutch East Indies. William van Rechteren, who is junior Counselor of the Netherlands Legation in Washington, will accompany the Dutch Minister of Foreign Affairs, Eelco van Kleffens, and Charles Welters, Dutch Minister of Colonies. These two dignitaries will arrive from London and be joined by Count van Rechteren before continuing on their mission. Mme. van Kleffens will accompany her husband on the trip but Countess van Rechteren will remain in Washington with her young son.

Extra men at Mrs. Legare's dinner included Commander William D. Thomas, Eric Taff and the First Secretary of the British Embassy, Derek Hoyer Millar. The latter was an extra man because his charming wife is away on a cruise with her mother, Mme. van Swinderen. Their trip will take them to Cuba and will also give them a stay in Mexico City.

IN A drawing-room in Alexandria hangs the only known existing portrait of the late British Ambassador to the United States, Lord Lothian. The drawing-room belongs to the Chairman of the Red Cross and Mrs. Norman Davis and the portrait is the work of one of their sons, Goode Davis. His friends, the Davises among them, are very grateful to Lord Lothian for the few moments he was able to snatch from time to time to pose for this splendid likeness. He disliked portraits of himself and, I'm told, didn't even pose for photographers except for the news shots with which he obliged the press.

Perhaps it was Goode Davis' story-telling that won Lord Lothian's interest and made the sittings less tedious. Mr. Davis has a way of telling a story with such a depressed air that you don't know it's going to be funny until you collapse in a heap with laughter. Another of the Capital's well-known who has sat for Mr. Davis is Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles. Mrs. Welles has given the portrait a place of honor at their house at Oxon Hill.

Goode Davis and his attractive wife are spending a few days with his father and mother in Alexandria and will attend the opening of the National Gallery tonight as guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Walker.

MRS. ARTHUR KROCK is off to Pinehurst this week for a spring vacation with her sons, Bobby and Billy Blair. But before departing she has added new life to the members of her committee for the Picadilly Arcade by presenting them with a beautiful R. A. F. emblem, done in diamonds, to be disposed of for the benefit fund. The brooch is the gift of a patriotic jeweler who has made it especially for the occasion. It is valued at $2,000.

Mrs. Krock has had staying with her, her former sister-in-law, the Marquise d'Ivan Rey, who was Italia Blair, of Chicago. This dignified lady answers to the amusing name of "Aunt Itty" when called by Bobby and Billy Blair.

Mrs. Merryman At Palm Beach After Visiting Windsors

After a visit with her famous niece, the Duchess of Windsor, Mrs. D. Buchanan Merryman, of Washington, has moved on to Palm Beach. There she is the guest of Mrs. Irving Hall Chase. Mrs. Chase gave a luncheon at the Bath and Tennis Club for Mrs. Merryman recently. The other guests included Capt. and Mrs. John H. Gibbons, of Washington.

At nearby Hobe Sound, Mrs. Harvey Cushing and her daughter, Mrs. Cushing Roosevelt, have joined the house party of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Barry, Mrs. James Forrestal, wife of the Undersecretary of the Navy, is also a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Barry.

North Carolinians To Dance Wednesday

The North Carolina Society of Washington will hold a dance at the Shoreham Hotel Wednesday night, from 10 p. m. until 1 a. m. Music will be furnished by Veo and his Shoreham orchestra.

Next month the society will hold its annual reception and dance in honor of North Carolina women attending the D. A. R. convention here.

U. S. Notables Entertained By Pinchots

The Vice President and Mrs. Wallace were the ranking guests at a luncheon given yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. Gifford Pinchot at their residence here.

Others in the company were Justice and Mrs. Felix Frankfurter, Justice Frank Murphy, Senator and Mrs. Alben K. Barkley, the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Adolf A. Berle, the Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Thurman Arnold, the Federal Security Administrator and Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Hurley and Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Clapper.

The luncheon was planned in honor of Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, former Minister to Norway, who was to have spent the weekend here with Mr. and Mrs. Hurley. But at the last moment Mrs. Harriman was called to the West and had to cancel her trip. The Hurleys had planned a tea for her on Saturday and a dinner last night, which went on despite her absence.

McAfee-Preston Wedding Today

Sudden changes in military orders are playing havoc with the plans of brides and bridegrooms these days. Miss Julia Jackson Christian Preston and Lieut. James Byington McAfee had planned a May wedding, but as the latter, a member of the Army Air Corps, has just been named a flying instructor at Maxwell Field, the ceremony was at the last minute advanced to this afternoon.

The couple will exchange vows at 4 o'clock in the Bethlehem Chapel of the National Cathedral. Both will dispense with attendants. Later a reception for members of the two families and out of town guests will follow at the Woman's National Democratic Club.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Randolph Preston, of Washington. Lieut. McAfee's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Stanley K. McAfee, of Charlotte, N. C. He was graduated on Friday from the Maxwell Field Flying School.

Ill With Flu, Wife Sends Husband Alone to Party; He Reels in at 2 A. M., Smeared With Lipstick; Should Wife Ask Lipstick's Owner to Her Next Party?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband and I are in our forties. We have a son in college. Recently, we were invited to an informal party, from 8 to 10 p. m. Earlier that day I took to my bed with a bad case of flu, a high fever and a racking cough. However, I suggested that my husband go to the party. He went; and I was alone, of course, during his absence. I had to get up several times to answer the telephone and door bell, fix medicine, etc.

At 2 a. m., he reeled in, with lipstick and powder on his clothes. He was in no condition to explain, so I undressed him and put him to bed. The next day, he said he had taken "the widow" home,—she being a casual friend of ours. I said, "How nice of you. But why didn't she go home with the people who brought her?" He had no answer for that. But finally, when I curiously asked what they had done between 10 and 2 a. m., he admitted he had taken her to an expensive night club—to which I have been asking him, for four years, to take me. He had always said it was "too expensive."

Two days later (I was still in bed), "the widow" called to invite us to Sunday breakfast. My husband answered the telephone, and after violently signaling silent "negatives" across the room to me, told her I was unable to be up; and he declined the invitation. Now, we are planning a party soon, and when I showed him the list, he asked (to my amazement) "Who is that? Why should we invite her?"—pointing to "the widow's" name.

I told him we owed her a party, even though we had declined her invitation. He said he didn't think it necessary to include her. I don't want to be rude. But would it be adding "fuel to the flame" to bring them together again? Is my husband afraid for me to see her? Or is he "fed up" with her and wanting to end it? I don't know what to do in this case. Every time he has ever gone alone to a party an incident of this sort has developed. Please advise me. J. T.

Don't Put Husband Out on a Limb

DEAR J. T.: No doubt your husband has a sheepish (or guilty) conviction of having made something of a fool of himself with "the widow" on the night of the party—and therefore would infinitely prefer letting the incident fade (if possible) into the limbo of forgotten mistakes, before coming face to face with her again in your presence, under your sardonic and searching gaze.

And maybe his explanation of where they spent their time, between the hours of 10 and 2 a. m., was a spur-of-the-moment invention, which he now fears she might witlessly contradict, if you two should meet while the episode is still fresh in the memories of both. Maybe he took her straight home and stopped in for a drink, which extended into several drinks before he took himself off;—yet dreads to tell you the actual truth, lest you find even more quarrel with it than with the story of his night club extravagance.

In any event, I think you should follow his lead in socially sidestepping "the widow" as much as you plausibly can. You very well know—whether or not you choose to admit it—that you wouldn't be entirely comfortable having her at your forthcoming party. And, all things considered, I cannot see that you owe her a place on the guest list. It seems to me, indeed, that her invitation to Sunday breakfast—following close on the heels of the earlier incident—was less a sincere civility than a scheming, hypocritical or impudent overture. And I should guess it was directed more at your husband than yourself.

Since he chose to decline that invitation for both of you, and now takes the initiative in voting to strike her name off your party list, it is plain he considers her a person to avoid,—whether for his own peace of mind or in the interests of domestic unity is a question into which you need not inquire too closely. Supposing he does feel that he has something of a problem on his hands, as a result of his actions the other evening,—at least he gives evidence of trying to nip the adventure in the bud, rather than let it assume the proportions of a snowball rolling downhill. And in that determination he should be encouraged, rather than resisted by his wife, it seems to me.

So my advice to you is to help him block the door on "the widow's" advances—for the reason that you would never forgive yourself if you obstinately gave her the run of the premises, against his wishes, and thereafter saw an infatuation develop. Better play safe than be sorry; better say to him, in effect, "Very well, sweetie-pie, if you don't want Mrs. So-and-so here at the party, we just won't have her. I'll have her for lunch or tea one day; that ought to repay her for her breakfast invitation. Okay?" M. H.

A Print Anyone Can Wear

Spring to most women means a new print dress. A jump ahead of the season, tulips bloom on the dark ground of this silk print for town and travel wear. They are arranged in the dramatic wider spacing, appropriate whether the wearer is petite or tall and stately. The collarless neckline is draped to form the new deep "V" neck. Fullness is introduced through the bust by gathers and tucks. An unpressed panel pleat at the front of the skirt emphasizes the wearability of the dress. The black straw hat, by Lilly Dache, has the new front movement. The veil is attached to a ribbon band under the chin.

Paint Pictures On Glass

"MOTHER DOG and Puppy," this charming picture is called. You can easily paint it yourself on glass by a simple method. Full size, 9 by 12 inches, it makes a delightful wall decoration for a playroom or boy's bedrooom.

What fun you have, too, indulging your artistic talents with a printed pattern to help you out! You just lay the pattern under your sheet of glass and follow the lines with your brush.

Among the other fascinating subjects you can paint this easy way are "Old-Fashioned Bouquet," "Gay-Feathered Parrots" and "Old Oaken Bucket."

No need for elaborate equipment. From three inexpensive tubes of paint—red, yellow and blue—you can mix any shade you want with a color chart to guide you. A touch of black or white household enamell will darken or lighten a color. Pink, for instance, is just a light red. To get it you mix red and white. Green you make by combining blue and yellow.

For the picture "Mother Dog and Puppy" you'll need light greens shading into deeper greens for the grass, dark brown for the fence and light blue shading into darker blue for the sky. The dogs you paint white with gray and black markings. Make the noses and eyes black and give the puppy a pink tongue.

After your painting has dried slip a sheet of silver paper behind the glass for a touch of life and sparkle. Then frame and hang and watch the compliments pour in!

Our set, SIX PICTURES TO PAINT ON GLASS—SECOND SET, includes "Mother Dog and Puppy," "A Child's Prayer," "Old-Fashioned Bouquet," Gay-Feathered Parrots," "A Cat Twosome" and "Old Oaken Bucket," each 9 by 12 inches. Gives chart for mixing colors, tells what colors to use for each picture.

Send 15c in coins for our set of SIX PICTURES TO PAINT ON GLASS—SECOND SET to THE NEW YORK OFFICE of The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West 19th Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS and the NAME of picture set.

Overweight Is a Factor In Diabetes

By Ida Jean Kain

IF THERE is any history of heredity diabetes in your family it is up to you to keep your weight down. The exact cause of diabetes is not known, but both heredity and overweight are outstanding factors, and while you can't do a thing about your ancestors, you can control your weight.

Medical science has proven conclusively that overweight due to an excess of food is one cause of the disease. Dr. E. P. Joslin, who is probably the greatest authority on this subject, classes overweight as one of the chief causes. In 1,000 cases of the disease he found that only 10 per cent were underweight compared with 75 per cent who were considerably overweight, and also that persons 21 per cent or more overweight developed diabetes 79 times as frequently as those underweight or normal weight.

Avoid Rich Desserts

With a tendency toward either diabetes or obesity, the first step in the right direction is to avoid rich desserts, and the next is to cut down on the amount of fats in the menus. Sugars and fats are the foods most likely to cause excess weight and it seems to be more than a coincidence that the increased consumption of these foods is paralleled by a rise in diabetes.

Carbohydrates, the term for both sugars and starches, are stored in the liver as glycogen, or, as there is a demand for energy, passed into the blood stream in the form of glucose. The pancreas secretes insulin, which plays a regulatory role in controlling the percentage of glucose in the blood. In overweight there is a constant overburdening of all the metabolic processes. How long the liver, kidneys and pancreas can hold out when they have an additional burden to carry depends on their inherited endurance. So if you did not inherit endurance in this respect you had better lighten the load by keeping your weight normal—or even slightly below normal. As has been pointed out, a pancreas perfectly able to take care of a person normally weighing 150 pounds is not guaranteed to take equally good care of that person when she weighs over 200 pounds.

Life Expectancy Stretched

Great progress has been made in the treatment of diabetes. The life expectancy of the diabetic used to be about 5 years and it is now 25 years. In fact, many of them live to die of old age. But you still don't want diabetes if you can avoid it and the surest way is not to overeat, and, if you are overweight, to reduce.

Finns Brought Pottery to U. S. By Arctic Route

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

ALL THE war hazards in Europe aren't those caused by bombs bursting in air. Finland has gone to heroic lengths to land two cargoes of pottery and glass on American shores, and the safe arrival of the little Finnish boats brought the story along with the wares. The Baltic route is now too dangerous for commercial shipping, but the Finns, feeling a desperate need to keep their industries alive, routed their ships from the Port of Petsamo within the Arctic Circle, 750 miles north of Helsinki. To reach this far northern port required a long journey by truck from the last railroad point, but the Finns have kept 2,000 men at work keeping the road open for a daily train of 2,500 trucks and buses to the only Scandinavian sea outlet to the western world.

When the first two ships came through, they brought 1,200 cases, or 720 tons, of pottery, china and glass, thought to be the largest of the sort ever to be received from Scandinavia. Included are delightfully fresh buoyant designs with all that clear-eyed rhythmic quality we always like about the wares from this far northland. The shapes and compositions have been made especially for the American market, and so on the practical side, they are all very usable.

There is fine flawless crystal, including cut crystal, engraved crystal and blown glass, along with glass in delicate tints of azure, smoke and sea-green. There is pottery of simple and lavish decoration, of austere and imaginative spirit; besides plates and other utilitarian pieces, there are wall plaques, tiles, coasters and ash trays, all decorated by hand by skilled Finnish craftsmen.

'I'll Give You a Lift'

"Are you going my way? . . . Where? . . . Oh, out on Cranberry Avenue? . . . Well, I think that's somewhere in my part of town. Anyway, I can find it . . . What? . . . Oh, no, no, don't think of taking a bus! I'll be glad to give you a lift.

"Say, now, before we start, I have to run into the drug store for a minute. I promised to get some things for George. And then I have to run by that little kodak shop up the street to get some films I left. But it won't take a minute. What? . . . No, no, it won't take long . . . Well, what time do you have to be out there? . . . Four o'clock? . . . Oh, we have plenty of time, and besides you'll make lots better time in a car than you could on a bus . . . No, now it's no trouble at all. Just as soon as I finish these errands we'll get started. I'm only parked down the street three or four blocks.

"Well, now I guess we're off. Say, if you don't mind, I want to drive out Smart Avenue. I have to pick up a little hat I left at a shop. Then from there we can swing over to Swank Road and get out in your general direction. Or, wait—do you think it would be better to drive on out Smart Avenue and get to Petunia Boulevard? . . . Well, how do you usually go? . . . On the Geranium Heights bus? . . . What street does it go out? . . . Rosebud Avenue? . . . How many blocks is that from Petunia Boulevard? . . . Yes, I know it's all very confusing, especially when you haven't lived there long.

"What? . . . No, no, I wouldn't think of your taking the bus! No, no, we'll find it—once we get started . . . Now, if you'll just wait a minute I'll dash in this shop and pick up my hat and then we'll really get going.

"Sorry you had to wait, but they're so busy this time of day. Now, then, we're off . . . I wish I could decide whether to get over on Swank Road or go on to Petunia Boulevard. I really ought to go by the Suburban Center and get some things—they have the most marvelous homemade rolls—but I'm afraid we'd get lost.

"What? . . . No, no, it's really no trouble at all! . . . Now, then, here's Swank Road. Now, how far on it I should go? . . . Wait! What's that street? . . . Chrysanthemum Place? . . . Do you suppose that would lead into Rosebud Avenue? . . . You see, I'm not at all familiar with this part of town . . . No, no, now it's no trouble at all . . . Take a taxi! Oh, I wouldn't think of letting you take a taxi!

'Why, here's Petunia Boulevard! Now, I wonder where it leads . . . Do you think we ought to follow it? . . . What? . . . No, no, don't bother asking anyone yet. I'll get my bearings in a minute . . . Say, now here's a street that looks as if it might lead somewhere. Let's follow it! . . . What? Well, maybe we had better turn round and go the other way. I'll just drive around the block . . . Now, then, watch for Rosebud Avenue? . . . What? A bus. What does it say on it? . . . Rosebud Avenue? Why, then, we're on Rosebud Avenue! What? . . . No, no, I wouldn't think of letting you take a bus . . . Now! . . . I'll take you right to your door.

"Now, we'll just follow this bus to your street. You watch for Cranberry Avenue . . . Now, here's Mulberry — what? We have passed it! . . . Not two blocks back! No, no, don't get out! I'll turn around—what? . . . Oh, well, if you really must. But I know I could get you there a lot quicker in the car."

Original Chests

Early chests were made for varied and important use in olden days—by the church for religious plate and vestments, as a strong box for keeping valuables, as a dower chest for a bride to fill with her trousseau, just as she uses a cedar chest today.

Apricots in Frosting

Here is a new frosting tip: Put 2/3 cup chopped dried apricots (well washed of course) in frosting used on white or yellow cake. Flavor with ¼ teaspoon each of almond and lemon extract along with the usual teaspoon of vanilla called for in most frostings.

Clothing Wage Parley Put Over 3 Days

By the Associated Press

Atlantic City, N. J., March 16.—Representatives of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers (C. I. O.) and the men's and boy's garment industry adjourned today until Wednesday in New York's Pennsylvania Hotel their conferences on union demands for wage raises up to 15 per cent.

Negotiations, begun last night and resumed briefly today on a contract to replace the existing one early in May, brought union rejection of the United States Clothing Manufacturers' Association's counter proposal for ten per cent increases.

Richard Rohman, public relations director of the union, which claims 135,000 members, said the wage proposals are the "minimum" possible.

Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated, did not participate in the conferences. He is on leave of absence while serving as co-director in the Office of Production Management in the national defense program.

$20,000,000 a Year More

Rohman said conferees started from scratch on the basis of the original union proposals: a 15 per cent increase for workers on grade one (cheapest) clothing; 12 per cent for grade two (medium) and ten per cent for grade three (better grade.)

The counter proposals were for a ten, eight and five per cent wage increase scale.

Rohman estimated the manufacturers' annual pay roll would be increased $20,000,000 by the union requests.

Another union proposal was for a fund to be set up by the manufacturers to provide health and life insurance for employes covered by collective labor agreements with the Amalgamated. Contributions of 3 per cent of their pay roll was recommended.

Raymond H. Reiss, president of the Manufacturers' Association, and recently a $1-a-year man in the National Defense Advisory Council, presided at the conference.

No Increases in Four Years

Jacob S. Ptotfsky, general secretary-tressurer, and Frank Rosenblum, vice president, spoke for the Amalgamated.

Rosenblum declared that the union members have received the same scale for the last four years, "though entitled to higher standards of living." He added that the wage request was "fair and reasonable and in line with the upward trend in the country."

The manufacturers represented have a wholesale production volume of $850,000,000 a year. Wage rates in shops working on Government contracts were not involved in the discussions.

Amalgamated contracts renew automatically unless either party gives 60-day notice of intention to demand changes.

Howard County to Hear AAA Plans Explained

Ellicott City, Md., March 16 (AP).—Provisions of the 1941 Agricultural Adjustment Administration program, including corn allotments and wheat and corn marketing quotas, will be explained at a series of Howard County meetings beginning tomorrow night at Clarkesville High School.

Other meetings, all of which begin at 7:30 p. m., will be held Tuesday at Lisbon High School; West Friendship High School, Wednesday; Ellicott City courthouse, Thursday, and Guilford School, Friday.

To Aid Tobacco Farmers

La Plata, Md., March 16.—For the seventh year, the Charles County Packing House at White Plains will be ready for operation to assist farmers in marketing their tobacco. The packing house, under the management of John A. Lyon, will be ready to receive tobacco April 1.

Work Begins Today on Kelly Miller Dwellings in District

169 UNITS—Work on the Kelly Miller Dwellings, an Alley Dwelling Authority project of 169 units, is slated to begin today. Victor R. Beauchamp, Inc., of Washington, was the successful bidder with a low bid of $630,900. The dwellings, the architect's conception of which is shown, will be in the squares bounded by Second, Fourth, V and Oakdale Streets, and Fourth, Fifth, V and W Streets Northwest. The property will consist of 40 one-family dwellings and 129 apartments in three-story multi-family dwellings

Ellicott City, Md., March 16 (AP).—The March term of the Howard County Circuit Court will convene here tomorrow morning with Chief Judge William Henry Forsythe, jr., presiding. Howard Downs, of the First District, is foreman of the county grand jury.

Doctor Praises Grit of British Children in War

New York, March 16 (AP).—A Federal pediatrician said today that English children were standing up as well as their elders under wartime privation and bombardment and that shell-shock among them was "rare."

Returning aboard the Atlantic Clipper from a Government mission to London, Dr. Martha Eliot, assistant chief of the Children's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor, said:

"On the whole, the children of England are taking their ordeal very well. On the other hand, some of them are suffering from the bombings, and from the fact that they are being removed from their homes."

The Clipper also brought a State Department courier, four Englishmen who declined to discuss their missions here, and Maj. Rudolph Smyser, returning to report on his assignment as U. S. Army military observer in London.

Hearing Slated on Request To Develop Patuxent River

A public hearing will be held on the application of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission for permission further to develop the Patuxent River as a source of water supply for suburban Maryland March 26 before the Water Resources Commission of Maryland.

Dean S. S. Steinberg, of the college of engineering, University of Maryland, recently named chairman of the commission, announced that the hearing will be held at 10:30 a. m. in the police courtroom of the County Service Building, Hyattsville, Md.

The project proposed consists of the construction of an impounding dam and reservoir in Montgomery and Howard Counties near Brighton, the construction of an intake pumping station and filter plant near Laurel and the construction of pipe lines connecting to the water system of the commission in Prince Georges County.

NYA Names Four As Interviewers

According to J. Bayne Castle, NYA area director, four Prince Georges County youths—Mary Van Camp, of Hyattsville; Beatrice Glascoe, of Aquasco; Beatrice Bolling, of Fairmont Heights, and Lawrence Henry, of Bowie—have been named as junior interviewers for the National Youth Administration of Prince Georges County.

Miss Van Camp will be available Monday through Friday from 1 to 3 p. m. at the home demonstration office in the County Service Building. Miss Bolling may be seen weekdays from 9 to 11 at Fairmont Heights Elementary School. Miss Glascoe will receive applications during these same hours. Henry may be reached through the office of Maryland State Teachers College at Bowie.

The experience of working in the various NYA projects often enables the part-time NYA worker to find full-time employment in these fields elsewhere, Castle explained.

Applications may also be filed in the NYA area office, board of education, Upper Marlboro.

Republican Women To Make Garments

The Prince Georges County Federation of Republican Women will meet today in the Professional Building, Hyattsville, at 10:30 o'clock to plan for the making of garments for European War sufferers to be turned over to the Red Cross for distribution.

Mrs. Irene Vaught, Mrs. George B. Merrick, Mrs. Elizabeth Laughton, and Mrs. T. H. Wildman have been named as a committee to arrange for the luncheon meeting to be held in April at the Lord Calvert Inn, when the State Federation will be guests of the county unit.

Va. Democrats To Hear Connally

Richmond, Va., March 16 (AP).—United States Senator Thomas I. Connally, of Texas, will be the chief speaker at the Virginia Democrats' annual Jackson Day dinner here on March 29.

State Senator William A. Wright, managing director of the $25-per-plate affair, said that Connally had accepted an invitation to address the gathering of party leaders at the Hotel John Marshall.

He will be introduced by Senator Harry F. Byrd, of Virginia. Gov. James H. Price will make a brief address.

Rockville Church Forms Brotherhood

Men of the Rockville (Md.) Presbyterian Church have organized a brotherhood. Richard T. Schwartz is president, John R. Spates, jr., vice president, and Walter Higgins, secretary-treasurer.

The program committee includes Harold C. Smith and John G. McDonald. The Rev. Henry K. Pasma and Keith Cornelius and Spates comprise the membership committee. The brotherhood, which starts with 20 members, will meet the second Wednesday of each month.

Red Cross Needs Yarn

Mrs. Fred Strine, production chairman of the Montgomery County Red Cross Chapter, has announced that scraps of yarn are needed for the chapter's war relief sawing projects.

Last Rites Tomorrow For George T. Gordy

Salisbury, Md., March 16 (AP).—Funeral services for George T. Gordy, 76, retired Salisbury merchant, will be held at his home tomorrow at 11 a. m. Gordy was born in Worcester County near Snow Hill, where he engaged in farming. He later entered lumbering enterprises in Maryland, Virginia and North Carolina before opening his feed and fertilizer store here.

He retired five years ago, after conducting his Salisbury store for 21 years.

240 Dwellings Are Condemned By Alexandria Authorities

A total of 240 dwelling units described as substandard by the Alexandria Housing Authority are to be demolished or rehabilitated by the city of Alexandria under a cooperative agreement between the authority and the city council.

The condemned homes equal the number of dwelling units to be included in the housing authority's apartment developments for white and colored families in the low-income class, now under construction in two sections of the city.

City Manager Carl Budwesky yesterday said more than 200 dilapidated structures already have been torn down or repaired.

The city manager said additional units were being demolished as they become vacant, but the city is refraining from condemning occupied dwellings, in view of the acute shortage of housing facilities among the poorer residents of the city.

Building Operations Drop to Normal Level

Alexandria building operations, already well on the way to a new all-time record, dropped to a normal level for the first time since January 1 last week when projects costing $62,295 were authorized by Building Inspector A. R. Lash.

Six permits were issued for new construction at a cost of $60,855, while six permits were issued for alterations, repairs and additions, costing $1,440.

The largest individual project on record for the week was represented in a permit issued to Faye Widre and Ann Shurgin for the construction of row houses on E. Luray Avenue, at a cost of $26,280. The group will include five two-story brick dwellings.

Other new construction permits were issued to Interstate Construction Co. for Abe Cohen, on Princess Street, for one group of four brick two-story row houses at a cost of $14,130, and to Permanesque Homes Villages, Inc., on Halcyon Drive and North Overlook Drive for three single-family brick and frame two-story dwellings, costing $5,860, $6,125 and $8,060, for a total of $20,045.

200 Rotarians To Meet Tonight

Approximately 200 members of Rotary International from the Northern Virginia area will attend the annual intercity dinner tonight at 7 at the George Mason Hotel, Alexandria. Scheduled to participate in the session are club members from Alexandria, Arlington, Fairfax, Herndon, Warrenton and Leesburg.

The principal speaker will be Air Vice Marshal Jack Slessor, D. S. O., M. C., of the British Royal Air Force, who is in this country on temporary mission from London. He is the director of plans for the Royal Air Force, and is known as one of England's most prominent aviators.

Also scheduled to address the Rotary members is Clyde N. Allen, governor of the 187th District, who will outline plans for the annual district convention in Richmond on May 15 and 16. At the business session, the intercity delegates will map plans for northern Virginia representation at the convention, and will select a nominee for this area to succeed Allen as district governor.

Robert D. Graham, of Fairfax, is in charge of arrangements, assisted by J. S. Everly, president of the Alexandria Rotary Club.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Klutz

Selectees, reservists, national guardsmen and all other Federal employes on active duty in the armed forces can't be covered under Civil Service by the Ramspeck Bill, the Civil Service Commission has ruled. Commission officials say the law forbids them from ruling otherwise. However, it's taken for granted that the employes on military leave will ultimately be covered under Civil Service. The President can do it by executive order and it's possible that he'll do it when he issues the anticipated blanket order making the Ramspeck Bill effective. Representative Tom Eliot has introduced a bill in Congress which would bring draftees and others in military service under the Ramspeck Bill. The commission, incidentally, has approved the Eliot bill.

It's also a possibility that the executive order will cover into Civil Service employes who have recently been furloughed. The commission has ruled that "no person who is on furlough or leave without pay will be eligible to receive a classified status. PWA employes recently furloughed would benefit under such an order.

The commission also decided that the head of a department can't be required to recommend any incumbent for classification. And the jobholders who aren't recommended for status will be permitted to remain in the service, though they won't be eligible for promotion or transfer. Employes recommended for status and who flunk the noncompetitive mental test must be separated. Physical exams also are required, but the requirements have been eased considerably. Employes must show ability to perform the duties in an acceptable manner "and in performing such duties he does not, by reason of his physical condition, constitute an employment hazard to himself or to others."

Employes with remediable defects, such as bad teeth, won't be disqualified, provided the defects are remedied within six months. Employes who already have status won't be examined and unclassified laborers may be covered under. The six months of service required for classified status can be served in one or more agencies.

The commission officially ruled that all administrative employes paid from emergency relief funds, except WPA employes, are eligible for merit under the bill. This means 3,000 G. A. O. employes and thousands of others at Farm Security, Procurement, Accounts & Deposits, Interior, and Employes Compensation Commission, among others. All that remains is for the President to issue the order. The proposed order has been held up for more than two weeks at Justice.

Gov. Albert G. Black of Farm Credit Administration is being boomed for the seat on the Federal Reserve Board vacated by Chester Davis. And it's agreed that Black has an excellent chance to get the lucrative post. The FCA governor is understood to have discussed the job with both Vice President Henry Wallace and Agriculture Secretary Claude Wickard. Wallace was responsible for placing Davis on the reserve board and whoever is appointed must be approved by the Vice President and Wickard, as the appointee generally looks after the farmers' interests.

Parking is such a terrific problem here that undercover attempts are being made to convert some of the District's park land into Government parking lots. To date, however, the attempts have been stopped cold by Interior Secretary Ickes, guardian of the parks. It is known, for example, that both War and Navy Departments have proposed that the polo field and other available park space in West Potomac Park be made available for parking space.

The parking problem has become so desperate that the Navy proposed to take over some park space on the Virginia side of the Memorial Bridge, where the old CCC camp was located. Navy officials arranged to buy several of the small buses used last year at the New York's World Fair to transport employes assigned parking space. White House approval of the plan is understood to have been given, but Ickes said no emphatically, and now the battle for parking space continues.

D. C. Sales Tax Among Topics For Citizens

District suffrage, the proposed sales tax and the Overton-fiscal bill will be discussed this week at meetings of 13 organizations representing more than 40,000 District residents.

Final organizational meeting of the Municipal Assembly is scheduled for Wednesday at 8 p. m. in the Y. W. C. A., where a panel of Congressional sponsors will examine vote legislation and delegates will vote on an assembly constitution.

The newly-formed assembly is expected to be discussed tonight at a meeting of the Interfederation Conference, representing 50 citizens associations in Washington and others in nearby Maryland and Virginia.

Members of the Lincoln Park Citizens Association will meet tonight in the Kingsman School, Fourteenth and R Streets Northeast, the last meeting of this season to be held at this address, according to A. D. Calvert, president.

Tomorrow night, William R. Spicer, chairman of local draft board No. 5, will address the Petworth association on the status of District selective service.

Chevy Chase citizens Wednesday will hear a panel discussion by Woodrow Wilson High School students on "The Responsibility of the Citizen to the Community," at their meeting in the E. V. Brown School.

The Dahlgren Terrace Citizens Association Wednesday night will examine proposed bills before Congress to provide a public defender, to levy a local sales tax and to increase the Federal appropriation to the District government.

Church Recreation Facilities Offered To Service Men

Washington churches are planning to make available their recreational facilities to men in the armed services on Saturday afternoons, the Rev. John L. Mixon, of the Washington Federation of Churches, told an adult forum yesterday at the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church.

Dr. Mixon, who is chairman of the Christian laymen service committee, discussed the role of the church in the national defense program. And after his talk a committee was organized to develop a program to aid enlisted men.

Such games as ping pong and shuffleboard are to be arranged, Dr. Mixon said, and music and reading materials will be offered the soldiers. Some churches may hold Saturday evening dinners for the men. Congregations were urged to collect magazines for shipment to nearby Army posts.

Memorial Held as D.A.R. Opens Parley

More than 200 members of the Daughters of the American Revolution paid tribute to the memory of their founders and to those Washington members who have died in the past year at the opening of the fortieth annual meeting of the District State Conference held yesterday in Memorial Continental Hall.

In a candle-lighting service the memory of 13 deceased members was honored. Special tribute was paid to Mrs. Joseph N. Saunders, the late State chaplain, by Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, the vice president general. Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins, honorary vice president general, eulogized the founders, and Miss Janet Richards, honorary chairman of the golden jubilee, the charter members.

Mrs. William H. Wagner, the State chaplain, conducted the memorial services. The session was called to order by the State regent, Mrs. Harry C. Oberhosler. The Rev. William Henry Denney, assistant pastor of Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, offered the invocation, and the Rev. John F. B. Carruthers, the benediction.

Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., president general of the national D. A. R., will address this morning's session which opens at 9:30 a. m.

Greetings also will be brought by Mrs. John Morrison Kerr, national president of the Children of the American Revolution; Robert C. Tracy, vice president general of Sons of the American Revolution, and representatives of the District societies of the Children of the American Revolution, the Sons of the American Revolution and the Sons of Revolution.

The afternoon session will convene at 1:45 p. m. A concert will be presented by the United States Marine Band Orchestra at 7 p. m. today.

The president general, Mrs. Robert, will be the principal speaker at the annual banquet, which closes this year's meeting at 7 p. m. tomorrow in the Mayflower Hotel.

Brother Furnishes Valuable Clews In Girl's Slaying

Kansas City, March 16 (AP).—George Welsh 2d, brother of slain Leila Adele Welsh, 24-year-old heiress, has given officers valuable information, Sheriff Granville A. Richart said today.

Miss Welsh was hammered and slashed to death in her bed a week ago today.

The sheriff made his statement after a conference with Welsh which began at 5 p. m. Saturday and continued until 11:30 a. m. today with a three-hour intermission. The sheriff would not elaborate on what the additional valuable information was.

Street-Slaying Inquest Set For Tomorrow

The shotgun-slaying of Joseph L. Caliguirie, 21-year-old unemployed sign painter, will be investigated by a coroner's jury at 11:30 a. m. tomorrow.

Acting Coroner Christopher J. Murphy set that time for an inquest yesterday as police held Gay Alexander Penska, 32, of 833 Eleventh Street Northeast, for action of the jury.

Penska walked into the Ninth Precinct Police Station and announced, "I've just killed a man." 15 minutes after Caliguirie fell dead in front of a restaurant at 723 F Street Northeast, a shotgun blast in his heart.

Detectives quoted Penska as saying yesterday that he was hunting his estranged wife, Lena, 22, when he shot Caliguirie and that he knew "something like this would happen."

Caliguirie, according to witnesses, was attempting to protect Lena's sister, Ann Carlo, from Penska's threats when Penska turned the 12-gauge shotgun on him and fired.

Funeral services for Caliguirie, who lived at 1720 Newton Street Northeast, have been tentatively set for 9 a. m. Thursday at St. Anthony's Church, Twelfth and Monroe Streets Northeast.

Burial will be in St. Mary's Cemetery.

Methodists Hear Dr. Montgomery At Woodside, Md.

Dr. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House of Representatives, addressed the vesper service held yesterday afternoon at the Woodside (Md.) Methodist Church in celebration of the second anniversary of the new church on Georgia Avenue, Silver Spring.

Dr. Montgomery discussed the "Glory of the Obscure" and gave examples of faith among members of the House. The Rev. Ralph Delar Smith, pastor, presided. More than 300 persons attended.

Following the service a tea arranged by the Wesleyan Circle of the Women's Society of Christian Service was held in the parish hall. Presiding were Mrs. H. H. Howlett, Mrs. Ralph Smith, Mrs. Jackson Lusby, Mrs. J. D. Draper, Mrs. Howard Dozier, Mrs. Beryl English, Mrs. Harry Strickland and Mrs. John J. Dolan.

Vocal solos were presented by Mrs. Mathilda Heuser, Mrs. William C. Ward and Mrs. Velma Barnett, accompanied by Mrs. Norman Gleeker at the piano.

Home for the Aged Will Hold Open House Wednesday

Additions to the Home for the Aged of the Little Sisters of the Poor, at 220 H Street Northeast, will be opened for inspection on Wednesday, St. Joseph's Day, it was announced last night.

Dinner will be served to the old people at noon, with a Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament to be given at 4 p. m. and an open house to extend throughout the day.

Improvements in the home include a new scullery, baths on every floor and an invalid bathtub, according to Sister Celestine, the Sister Superior.

2 Die, 6 Hurt In District, Area Traffic

Maryland Man Hit-Run Victim; Trucker Killed Near Beltsville

Deaths of two persons and injury of six others, one critically, were reported in the Washington area traffic yesterday.

A 69-year-old District man, en route home after a visit to his mother, was struck and critically injured by an automobile yesterday as he crossed the street in front of his residence.

He is George W. Carrick, of 1519 Park Road Northwest, an interior decorator. He was struck, police said, by a car driven by Ethel S. Hayden, 17, of 3100 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, as he was walking across Park Road at Pine Street Northwest.

Taken to Garfield Hospital, Carrick was found to be suffering from a fractured skull and had not regained consciousness at a late hour yesterday. Miss Hayden was released on her own recognizance pending outcome of Carrick's injuries.

Fatal Beltsville Accident

In nearby Maryland, James H. Harper, 1345 Taylor Street Northwest, a 21-year-old truck driver was fatally injured early yesterday morning on the Baltimore Boulevard at Beltsville. He was a passenger in a car which crashed through guard cables north of the old grade crossing and vaulted a 4-foot embankment to land on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad tracks.

His companions, Robert Kuhn, 32, of 315 S Street Northwest, operator of the car, and E. E. Propst, 26, 1825 Second Street Northeast, owner of the demolished car, were both in Casualty Hospital last night with minor injuries.

Maryland State Police of the Waldorf substation were searching last night for the hit and run driver who fatally injured William Washington, of Waldorf, Md., near Gallant Green, Md., late Saturday night.

The body of Washington was found lying at the side of the road by Anthony Archer of Gallant Green, who called Maryland State Police. The body was taken to the Hunt & Ryon funeral home.

In other accidents on Washington Streets over the weekend at least three persons were injured seriously enough to require hospitalization.

A 70-year-old woman, Mrs. Cora Williams, of 2722 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, was injured Saturday afternoon when she tripped on a small wire hoop and fell in the 2800 block of Connecticut Avenue. At Emergency Hospital she was found to have suffered a compound fracture of the wrist and fracture of the left arm.

While waiting for a streetcar at Columbia Road and Champlain Street Northwest, Nancy Gibbs, colored, 25, of 1841 Park Road Northwest, was struck by a car bearing Pennsylvania license tags. Three men in the car took her to Columbia Hospital and then left without revealing their identities. Her injuries were treated at Emergency Hospital and she was released.

Princeton Student Killed

Bryn Mawr, Pa., March 16 (AP).—An automobile collision early today killed Robert Henry Weller, 19-year-old Princeton University student and son of Maj. John H. Weller, Army Ordnance Division, of 3042 Rodman Street Northwest.

The youth was en route from a party to his home in suburban Wayne when the collision occurred at the intersection of Morris Avenue and Gulph Road.

SCS Wives Plan Movie Benefit To Aid Britain

Lady Halifax, wife of the British Ambassador, and Mrs. Wallace, wife of the Vice President, head the list of sponsors of a motion picture show March 25 in the Department of Agriculture Auditorium to benefit "Bundles for Britain."

The event, arranged by the SCS Wives, a club of women whose husbands are Soil Conservation Service employes, yesterday received the approval of Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard. Mrs. Wickard is also a sponsor. Several Government films, including "The River" and "This Heritage We Guard" will be shown.

Attending a luncheon in the Agriculture dining room today to complete plans for the affair will be Mrs. C. F. Clayton, benefit committee chairman; Mrs. H. H. Bennett, Mrs. Paul Appleby, Mrs. M. L. Wilson, Mrs. H. R. Tolley, Mrs. R. M. Evans, Mrs. M. S. Eisenhower, Mrs. Marshall Harris, Mrs. C. S. Forsling, Mrs. Clarence Kitchen, Mrs. Howard Middleton, Mrs. Dillon Myer, Mrs. E. A. Disheveled Caller Frightens Daughters of Senator Davis

REAL-LIFE THRILLER—Jewell Davis shows how she was listening to a Boris Karloff thriller on the radio when a thriller developed in the Davis home

A horror story they were listening to on the radio seemed to come true last night for Jane, 20, and Jewell, 15, daughters of Senator James J. Davis (Republican), of Pennsylvania.

They were listening to "Inner Sanctum," with Boris Karloff, when the doorbell rang. Jane answered it, thinking her date had arrived.

Confronting her, she related later, was the "strange face" of a dishevelled man. She screamed and slammed the door. Jewell called police.

Outside of the residence, 3012 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, police picked up a man who identified himself as Michael F. Mulligan, 43, of Dublin, Ireland. He said he had jumped ship at Newport News, Va., nearly a month ago and was ringing the Davis doorbell to ask the occupants to call a cab for him.

At Eighth Precinct Police Station, where he was held for investigation, the man said he had obtained 50 cents from the British Embassy, to help him return to Ireland, just before he frightened the Davis girls.

The Embassy said he had been there, but denied giving him money.

Pianist Vladimir Horovitz Given Ovation at Recital

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey presents Vladimir Horovitz in a piano recital Sunday afternoon in Constitution Hall. Program: 32 Variations on an Original Theme in C minor (Beethoven), Arabeske, Op. 18; Toccata, Op. 7 (Schumann), 6 Etudes (Zhelobinski), Barcarolle, Op. 60; Mazureks in C sharp minor, Op. 59, and F minor, Op. 31; Etudes in G flat major, E major and F major, Op. 10; Polonaise in A flat major, Op. 53 (Chopin).

That prodigious pianist Vladimir Horovitz gave one of his exciting recitals yesterday afternoon in Constitution Hall and stirred a capacity audience to the point of frequent ovations by his exhibition of phenomenal speed, thunderous fortissimi and feathery scale flights. Seemingly, there is nothing in piano technique that he has not mastered, and differences of opinion about his playing must be confined to matters of interpretation. Some may not like his manner of pedaling in certain passages, others may object to what they consider heresies of dynamics in familiar pieces, but there can be no argument over his superlative virtuosity. He has the ability to make the mechanism of keys, hammers and strings respond with whatever degree of tone he desires, and he is unrivaled today in the school of velocity.

BROWN

As for his program, one cannot but regret that so skilled a technician and so eminent an artist chooses to abide as closely as he does to a conservatory repertoire. The sole novelty he offered was six etudes by the young Russian composer, Valeri Zhelobinski, who, in this instance, followed the harmonic style of Karol Szymanovski without attaining his poetic quality. These etudes are interesting to the pianist, because they present problems of execution, but they have little to say to the public. The best of them—the valse, the danse and the toccata—are rhythmically ingenious, while the others—nocturne, reminiscene and recitatif—are pallid reflections of romanticism.

It is to the great pianists, those whose accomplishments and reputations have given them security in public favor, that we ought to be able to look for an extension of our knowledge of piano literature. A vast amount of this literature remains unheard because of a program tradition that has no other merit than that of familiarity. Mr. Horovitz shattered the tradition at only one point, and otherwise respected it by playing Beethoven, Schumann and Chopin.

Beethoven's 32 variations in C minor show what that master could do at the age of 36 with a subject he had previously essayed at the age of 12. The "original" theme is simply a transformed memory of Dressler's march which he had used for the variations that constituted his first composition for clavecin.

The two Schumann works selected are least characteristic of that composer's fanciful way of thought. Part of the "Arakeske" has a dreamy charm, but the remainder is tenuous material, indeed, while the "Toccata" is a showy piece which reminds us that Schumann was ambitious to be a virtuoso performer before he strained a finger tendon in his excessive practice. Chopin was represented by the barcarolle, two mazureks, three etudes, and the "Heroic" polonaise.

At the end of the recital Mr. Horovitz responded to repeated recalls by playing more Chopin, and his farewell was his pyrotechnical fantasia on the "Chanson Boheme" from "Carmen."

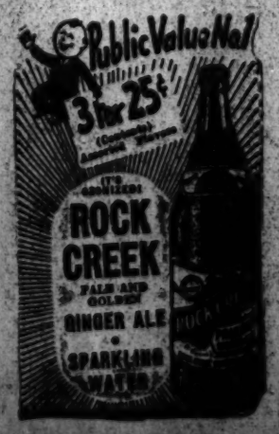
'First Riders' Open S. W. Line At $1 a Head

Sixteen Washingtonians who make a hobby of riding street cars saw to it yesterday that the Capital Transit Co.'s new Southwest Mall Line was properly inaugurated.

At $1 a head, they took the first ride on the new route over which service will start this morning for workers at the new Census Building.

The excursion was organized by G. F. Cunningham, of 3901 Ingomar Street Northwest, a War Department draughtsman, and frequent stops were made for participants to take pictures.

Cunningham said the excursion was unusual, as most such expenditions nowadays are made to mourn the discontinuance of an old street car line rather than to celebrate the inauguration of a new one.



Today Is the Day For the Irish

But Others, Too, Will Join in Honoring Memory Of St. Patrick

A number of other nationalities will join the Irish in celebrating the anniversary today of their most famous saint, and in Washington the St. Patrick's Day observance will begin with religious ceremony and proceed to a full program of wreath layings, parties and balls.

First event on the St. Patrick's Day calendar is a solemn high mass at 10:30 a. m. in St. Patrick's Church, 619 Tenth Street Northwest. There high Government officials and members of the Diplomatic Corps will be among the hundreds to hear the Rev. John Tracy Ellis, professor of theology at Catholic University, preach the sermon.

The mass will be celebrated by Dr. John Keating Cartwright, pastor of Immaculate Conception Church, and the Right Rev. John M. McNamara, auxiliary Bishop of Washington, will preside.

Ceremonies At Tomb

At the same time, ceremonies will be conducted at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier by the Irish War Veterans' Post No. 17. Officiating will be National Commander George L. Cassidy and Representatives Lawrence Connery, of Massachusetts; John Hunter, of Ohio, and Joseph J. O'Brien, of New York.

Members of the Ancient Order of Hibernians and the Ladies Auxiliary will hold their annual St. Patrick's banquet at 7 p. m. in the Mayflower Hotel. Charles Edward Russell, lecturer and author, will be the principal speaker and James Graham, Catholic University student, the master of ceremonies.

An annual St. Patrick's Ball will be held by the United Irish Club of Washington at 9 p. m. in the Kennedy-Warren. Michael Kelly is in charge of arrangements.

At St. Patrick's party is scheduled by the Friendship House Harlequins for 8 p. m. in Friendship House, 619 D Street Southeast, with Irish songs to be featured and the public is invited to attend.

The Delaware State Society will celebrate with a dance at 8 p. m. in the Thomas Circle Club, 1326 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, and the Massachusetts Society will hold its annual St. Patrick's Evacuation Day party tonight at Wardman Park Hotel, featuring entertainment by the Georgetown University Glee Club.

On Thursday evening, a joint St. Patrick's Day dance will be held be held by the Pennsylvania and West Virginia State Societies in the new ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel. A reception will begin at 9, followed by a dance at 10 o'clock.

Nats Beat Tigers on Bloodworth's Hit in Ninth

Eagles Beat Orioles, Clinch Hockey Title

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., March 16.—Like a good soldier, Cecil Travis has agreed to try to pull his hits into right field this season. Every spring in the Nats' training camp he makes the same promise, because every spring Manager Bucky Harris pleads with him to give it a try. And each year when the season starts, Travis continues to be the most incurable left-field hitter in the league.

POVICH

"If he would only pull the ball to right," sighs Harris, "he'd be a home run hitter in this league, with his power, instead of a line-drive single hitter to left. We wouldn't have to look any farther for a clean-up man."

Harris' wistful hope that Travis will hit to right field is understandable. The lanky Georgian would be capitalizing on all of his natural left-handed power. He would be pulling the ball instead of pushing it at a sacrifice of distance.

The hope that Travis will finally take a full cut and bang the ball consistent to right has been intensified by the fellow's two home runs thus far in the spring games. He hit both of them into rightfield—terrific line drives which cleared the 385-foot fence at Tinker Field, and the 380-foot barrier at St. Petersburg. They would have been home runs in any big league park. They seemed to prove Harris' theory that Travis is a home run threat when he pulls the ball.

"Ah'l try," drawls the Georgia boy, and he will try faithfully, but he's sort of dubious that he can change his style. "Ah just guess ah'm just a leftfield hitter and couldn't bat .250 if ah tried to get my hits in right field, but if they want it ah'll try."

If Travis is dubious about his ability to hit to rightfield, that too, is understandable. At the behest of the Nats' bosses he's tried it before without much success, and they've been willing to let him get his hits any way he likes. Of his long hits to right in the spring he says: "The pitching ain't much and ah belt it around pretty good, but when they start throwing for keeps ah gotta make sure ah meet that ball."

For several years now it has been pretty well established that the lanky Georgian is one of the really fine hitters of baseball. Only once since he joined the Nats eight years ago has he failed to turn in an average of more than .300 and that happened in a season when he was wracked by influenza. Last year his .322 led the Washington team and his lifetime average is the best on the club.

He's as unorthodox as three-dollar bills. The first big league ball game he ever played, he made five hits, all of them to left field. The league's outfielders play him like a right-handed hitter who pulls the ball. He swings later on a pitch than anybody in the league, with the possible exception of Luke Appling, of the White Sox.

That last habit may be the secret of Travis' batting success. He is able to follow the pitch longer than the ordinary batter because of his late swing, and thus judge it better. He has power, else he wouldn't hit .200, the way he swings. His usual hit is a sharp line drive between the shortstop and third base. It is not that he is content to get his mere singles and occasional doubles. His first concern is to meet the ball, and he meets it best when he swings late.

Around the league, the pitchers have a wholesome respect for Travis. He's high on any list of tough guys to get out. Unlike most lefthanded batters, lefthanded pitching doesn't bother him much. Of Travis, Lefty Gomes once said, "That guy could hit in the dark." That is a ball player's choice compliment to a ball player.

Because of his preference for following the pitch to the last possible moment, Travis gets hit by more pitched balls than anybody in league except Frankie Crosetti. He has less time to duck. And he's not cute enough up there to get himself hit deliberately.

But apparently Travis doesn't scare easily, despite all of the pitches he has taken in all parts of his anatomy. Thornton Lee, fast-balling left-hander who was with the Indians a few years ago, bounced a high hard one off Travis' skull and sent Travis to the hospital for three weeks with a concussion. When Travis finally returned to the line-up, the first pitcher he faced was the same Lee. Travis was so bat-shy, poor fellow, that he banged out a long three-bagger. It was to left field, of course.

Bobby Jones, Armour Beat Hagen, Sarazen

Never-Beaten Team Scores, 3 and 2, In Nassau Match With 7 Under Par Golf

By the Associated Press

Nassau, Bahamas, March 16.—The incomparable Bobby Jones and the silver-thatched Tommy Armour, returning to the golfing wars together for a reunion of champions, still haven't lost a golf match as a team.

They beat Gene Sarazen and the venerable Walter Hagen, 3 and 2, today in the finale of a 36-hole Red Cross match refereed by the Duke of Windsor, and they did it beautifully with a five-under-par pace through the last 16 holes.

Armour hitting the fine iron shots that made him a three-time champion, had helped build up a halfway lead of two holes, but Jones came through today. First one, then the other, sank a birdie putt.

Sarazan carried the load for his side, although the 48-year-old Hagen did manage to click off two birdies.

The Connecticut squire, who has taken recently to consuming vitamin pills, gave a half-dozen to the Haig this morning, but he wasn't sufficiently rejuvenated to pull the match out of the fire.

It appeared for a time that Sarazen and Hagen would square the match. Hagen dropped a 25-foot putt to win today's second hole and reduce the carry-over deficit to a single point.

Armour won the next in par, however, and Jones took the fourth with a 20-foot birdie putt. Tommy captured the sixth with another birdie after a great approach shot within 6 feet of the pin, and the team had a lead too large to overcome.

Sarazen birdied three of the next four holes with an assortment of excellent shots, paring the Jones-Armour lead to one hole.

Emperor Jones, winner of 13 national titles, and Armour won the thirteenth together in birdies, and closed out the match on the sixteenth. Armour, on the par five green in two shots, holed his second putt to wind it up, but Jones himself, after a magnificent recovery from a trap, had only a 2-footer left for his birdie.

Sarazen tried gamely to keep the match alive, but his 10-footer missed by an inch.

Jones and Armour were seven under par for the 34 holes, Hagen and Sarazen five under.

Before today's final round, the Duchess, as president of the Red Cross' Bahamas branch, presented each of the players with an inscribed gold fountain pen.

It was estimated that upwards of $5,000 was raised for the war relief agency through ticket sales and contributions.

Tokle Captures Another Ski Title

Salisbury Mills, N. Y., March 16 (AP).—Torger Tokle, Norwegian-born Brooklyn youth, today captured the Norsemen's Invitation jump, but wet snow prevented his usual record-breaking performance.

Tokle, who has established new records in nearly all meets he has participated in this winter, combined jumps of 159 and 166 feet for a point total of 233.5. Record for the hill is 184 feet, set last month by Jay Rand, of Lake Placid.

In the runner-up spot came the Conn., who totaled 221.2 points. Third place went to Omar Laccase, Lebanon, N. H., with 217.6. Satre's best leap was 155 feet, Laccase's 159.

Gallaudet College, Bridgewater Join Mason-Dixon Loop

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, March 16.—Gallaudet College of Washington and Bridgewater College, Bridgewater, Va., were admitted to the Mason Dixon Athletic Conference at a meeting of ten member organizations here today.

In addition to admitting the new members, officials revised their plans for the next basketball season.

They set a conference game deadline of February 28, with the tournament to be held annually on the weekend following that date.

Fight Mars Contest; Paul Corteau Scores Deciding Marker In Monumental City

By Jack Munhall

Post Staff Writer

Baltimore, March 16.—To the accompaniment of thudding fists and flailing sticks, the Washington Eagles tonight clinched the hectic Eastern Amateur Hockey League championship with a comeback 2-1 victory over the defending champion Baltimore Orioles.

More than 3,300 fans crowded their way into Iceland Arena to watch the Eagles win their first league title in their two years of organization by scoring two goals in the final period.

Punctuating the victory that gave the Eagles a lead of 7 points which the Orioles cannot overcome in their remaining three matches was a third-period altercation in which Paul Courteau, of Washington, took a physical beating. Strange reward for Courteau was his punishment at the hands of Baltimore's Bob Dill, for it was the fiery little French Canadian who decided the match with his goal at 13:28 of the wild final session.

Corteau Scores

Courteal tallied during a heated scrimmage in front of the Baltimore nets. While the Washington wingman lay on the ice Dill rapped him several blows on the head with his stick. Gordon Pranschke, of Washington, also was scuffing with Dill who had been spilling Eagles all over the ice all evening. The trio was separated and Courteau was standing with teammate Len Burrage, rubbing his head, when Dill came up from behind and struck Courteau a rabbit punch. Further trouble was averted and Dill was awarded a five-minute fighting penalty, the second major penalty suffered by the Orioles during the period. Earlier Ned Vitarelli drew a two-minute banishment for hitting Jack MacBeth, of the Eagles, in the head with his stick and then a ten minute misconduct for shouting at Referee Mel Harwood.

Two Other Eagle Heroes

Co-heroes with Courteau in the Washington triumphs were Hal Dewey, the Falls River, Ontario, brakeman, and Goalie Gordon Hemming. Brakeman Dewey put the skids under the Orioles 1-0 lead with a tying goal only 29 seconds of the last period, while Hemming contributed 23 saves during a brilliant stand before the Washington nets.

The match was a sell-out since Tuesday and police estimated that about 1,000 fans were denied admittance.

Baltimore tallied its only goal in the second period after an opening 20 minutes of superb defensive play by both teams, especially Goalies Hemming and Frank Ceryance.

The Orioles second period goal scored at 17:45 by Chick Webster, was, to coin a paraphrase, like the lull after the storm. For it came at a time when the Orioles were supposedly on the defensive due to one of the many penalties littering the period, and just after Washington had escaped a dangerous situation engendered by two successive penalties.

3 Players Out

Walt Scherer and Len Burrage were banished within 1 minute and 10 seconds, and for 50 seconds the Eagles were forced to hold off the Orioles with only three players. Then, after Scherer returned, they had to start all over again and repel the hosts for almost another minute with but four players.

Bravely, the Eagles survived this storm and then when the sun should have appeared for Washington in the nature of a penalty which left the Orioles outnumbered, fate played them an odd joke.

Webster, amid a routine assignment of harassing the power line which Washington sent crashing down ice, saw his chance when

Bloodworth Safe at Third as Ball Gets Away From Tiger

Hudson Pitches Three Hitless Sessions; Greenberg Ties Score Twice; Chase Pounded

Post Staff Writer

Orlando, Fla., March 16.—The Nats got tough today. They outslugged the Detroit Tigers. They pecked and pounded at four Detroit pitchers and shoved across the winning run of an 8-7 game in the ninth inning to the furious glee of 2,500 natives and tourists in the rickety, unvarnished stands of Tinker Field.

Jimmy Bloodworth won the ball game. He did it with a welly powered swat into deep center field with the score tied at 7-7 and the bases full in the ninth. It could have been a triple if Bloodworth had run it out, but he was content to stop at first base after the winning run crossed the plate. Left-handed Hal McKain was the losing pitcher.

The Tigers' defeat wasn't Hank Greenberg's fault. Big Flat Foot tied the score twice for the Tigers with his pair of booming triples and a long single. It was his single in the ninth against Arnold Anderson that drove the tying run across the plate.

Sid Hudson pitched the first three innings for the Nats, and the Tigers haven't had a hit off him yet. They did get a run, however, after Hudson walked the first two batters to face him. But nobody else got to first base against Hudson, who has now allowed only one hit in six innings of exhibition game work.

Chase Pounded Freely

The guy the Tigers sent townward was Ken Chase. They scored five of their runs and made six of their nine hits while Chase was pitching the fourth, fifth and sixth innings. They were hitting almost strictly for distance against Chase, who gave up a pair of triples to Greenberg, and another to Harris. He also pitched a near-ruinous double to George Tebbetts.

Anderson allowed only one run in his three-inning turn, but it was the tying run, in the ninth. To that point he had pitched hitless ball. Even in the ninth he sort of distinguished himself after Mullins, Harris and Greenberg singled in succession with one out to tie the score. With the potential winning run on third, Anderson got himself out of his mess by causing Rudy York to pop up, and Murray Franklin to ground out.

The hardy old perennial, Sammy West put the Nats' winning run in motion in the ninth. With one out, he banged a McKain pitch against the right field screen for a double. McKain then filled the bases by walking Lewis and Potash, and it was at that point that Bloodworth cow-tailed the climactic pitch over Center Fielder Mullins' head.

Al Evans was no drawback to the Nats today. The muscular rookie catcher banged out three straight hits in three times at bat. He got

Rovers Beat Sea Gulls, 9-4; Change Rules

By the Associated Press

New York, March 16.—The New York Rovers and Atlantic City Sea Gulls experimented today with some changes in the rules of hockey designed to open up the game and from the Rovers' point of view they were a complete success. The Red Shirts, tailenders of the Eastern Amateur League, romped off with a 9-4 victory.

The ice surface was divided into two zones instead of the usual three, with one blue line down the center, and the result was a wide open contest which put the accent on offensive play.

Fans Enjoy Play

New system was designed to produce more scoring and it certainly did. The 11,127 spectators seemed to enjoy the proceedings immensely, but it was a different story with the players, who were so tired at the end of the second period that a new surface was put on the ice to give them an extra five minutes' rest.

Alex Smith, coach of the Rovers, said after the game that he thought the type of play was just what the customers wanted to see and that he was in favor of continuing with it.

The Rovers' system of using two goalies, started last Sunday, was made to order for this kind of hockey. Johnny Fischer and Gerard Cosby alternated in the nets and held the visitors to one goal until half way through the final session.

Dartnell Scores Thrice

In order to try out the new rule for penalty shots both sides agreed to take one during the last period, and one of the Gulls goals resulted from their shot.

Under the new rules the team making the penalty shot lines up on the penalty line with the defending team lined up even with the goal. As soon as the puck is fired both sides close in and continue play, unless the shot is good. Hec Pozzo took the shot for Atlantic City and bounced the puck off Fischer's pads but Harry Dick stormed in and sent the rebound into the Rover cage.

Snead, Wehrle Defeat Grout, Allan for Title

Victory Worth $1,000 to Sam Snead In St. Augustine Pro-Am Golf Tourney

By the Associated Press

St. Augustine, Fla., March 16.—Long-driving Sammy Snead, of Hot Springs, Va., and Wilford Wehrle, of Chicago, licked par by 12 strokes and their opponents, Jack Grout and Frank Allan, of Pittston, Pa., 1 up, today to win the national pro-amateur best ball golf tournament.

Snead and Wehrle took a two up lead on the morning 18 holes with a six under par 66 to their opponents' 68, but barely staved off the Pennsylvanians in the afternoon with another 66 as Grout and Allan fired a brilliant 65.

The victory was worth $1,000 to Snead, a third of the $3,000 at stake in the event, and Grout received $500. Their amateur partners received trophies.

Wehrle Clinches Match

Although Snead carried the load most of the day and personally accounted for the morning 66, it was Wehrle, who applied the clincher by sinking a 6-foot putt for a birdie 3 on the thirty-sixth hole.

Slammin' Sammy started with birdies on the first, second and fifth to amass a three-hole lead. Grout, dark horse of the tournament, had his turn with a putt for a birdie 3 on the tenth and a breath-taking 45-footer for another birdie on the fourteenth. Snead birdied 15 and 17 and Grout No. 18 to leave Sammy and Wehrle 2 up at lunch.

Allan began to give his professional partner plenty of help in the final round by hitting the cup with his second shot on the twentieth hole, the ball bounding out and stopping a foot away for an easy birdie 3.

Allan Sinks 40-Footer

The youthful Pennsylvanian sank a 40-footer for a birdie on the twenty-first, a par 4, to square the match, and Grout followed with a 15-foot birdie putt on the twenty-fourth.

Wehrle laid his second shot within a foot of the pin on the twenty-fifth, a par 5, for an easy eagle.

Allan put his team ahead again with a birdie 4 on the twenty-sixth, but Wehrle holed a 25-footer for a 3 on the twenty-eighth, a par 4, to square the match once more. Snead birdied No. 30 and Grout No. 33, and it was still all even as they came to the final hole where Wehrle recovered from a poor tee shot to put his approach 5 feet from the hole and victory.

Heart Attack To Torres' Dad Halts Pitcher

By the Associated Press

Havana, March 16.—Gilberto Torres, clever pitcher of the Cuban All-Stars, couldn't hold onto a long lead today after learning that his father had collapsed from a heart attack during the game and the Brooklyn Dodgers rallied to gain a 7-7 tie in the final game of their exhibition series here. The game was called at the end of the ninth inning to allow the Dodgers to catch a plane for Florida.

Torres had a 7-2 lead, as the result of a seven-run rally against Ed Head in the fourth, when the arrival of an ambulance to remove a spectator who had collapsed. After learning that it was his father, the Cuban pitcher was somewhat less effective and his teammates gave him little help, making five errors.

Tod Morgan Beats Ron McLaughlin

Schmidt Named Grid Coach At U. of Idaho

By the Associated Press

Moscow, Idaho, March 16.—Francis Schmidt, whose Ohio State University football teams won two Big Ten championships in seven years, was named head football coach today at the University of Idaho.

Salary terms were not disclosed by University President Harrison C. Dale, who announced Schmidt's selection after a meeting of the State board of education.

Schmidt was one of five prominent coaching figures considered by a special faculty-student-alumni committee charged with recommending a head coach, an athletic director, an assistant grid coach and a basketball-baseball mentor of the State board. No mention was made by Dale of the other positions.

Thornhill Loses Out

Dixie Howell, of Arizona State, Ben Kinkelman of San Jose State, and Claude E. (Tiny) Thornhill, former Stanford coach, also were here in quest of the job left vacant by Ted Bank, coach for five years, who was released after a disastrous 1940 football season. The fifth applicant was Pete Cawthon, formerly of Texas Tech.

Although Bank's contract runs until Sept. 1, Schmidt was to take charge immediately and said he would remain in Moscow to begin spring football practice at once

"I hope to have the alumni and the school working together for a great, successful athletic program," the new coach said.

Two Separate Jobs

Schmidt was graduated at Nebraska in 1914 and coached at Kendall College, now Tulsa University, at the University of Arkansas and Texas Christian University before going to Ohio State in 1934.

The athletic directorship at Idaho, formerly part of Bank's job, was made a separate position by the board of education at the committee's sugestion.

The other positions were left open when Forrest Twogood, coaching basketball and baseball, resigned and Bob Tessier, assistant to Bank, was released. Tessier subsequently signed as assistant at Manhattan College in New York.

Schmidt resigned his Ohio State post last December 16 while a special committee was studying the football "situation" as an aftermath of the Buckeyes' most disastrous season in a decade—four won and four lost. He was succeeded by Paul Brown, producer of spectacular football team at Massillon, Ohio, High School.

Schrider Wins Kenwood Stake

Frank J. Schrider opened the competitive golf season at Kenwood yesterday by winning an abbreviated sweepstakes with a nine-hole total of 40, minus six handicap strokes for a net 34. C. D. Wright was second, 48-13, 35. More than 200 golfers played the course.

Jack Keele, runner-up in the club championship, knocked in a pair of eagles in the first nine holes of a morning round, reaching the par five fifth green in two shots and dropping an eagle putt of 15 feet while he holed an eight-iron for a deuce on the par four seventh hole.

Keele was in trouble on the par three holes of the out nine, however, taking six on one and four on another, and finished with a 70 for the round.

Toledo Wins Pro Tourney

By the International News Service

Chicago, March 16.—The Toledo White Hens, paced by Chuck Chuckovits, who scored 21 points, tonight turned back the highly favored Sheboygan, Wis., Redskins, 36-28, before 8,000 fans at the 1941 World's Professional Basketball tournament.

The Ohioans jumped into an early lead, and led, 9-8, at the end of the first period, 20-15 at the half and 29-21 at the end of the third period.

Earlier, the New York Renaissance beat the Dayton, Ohio, Suchers, 43 to 20.

The Royals, of Kenosha, Wis., defeated Seagrams, of Rochester, N. Y., 40 to 36. The lead changed hands three times during the game, but the Royals went ahead with three baskets near the close of the contest. Ken Binder, of the Royals, led the scoring with 15 points.

Earlier the Oshkosh, Wis., All-stars, champions of the National League, defeated the Fort Wayne, Ind., Zollners, 47 to 41.

Pastor Fights Tonight

Hollywood, March 16 (INS).—Bob Pastor, of New York, and Turkey Thompson, California heavyweight champion, ended training tonight for their 10-round fight tomorrow night at Hollywood ball park. Pastor will enter the ring on the favorite's end of 7-to-10 odds.

Blozis Shatters Own Indoor Shot Put Record in Cleveland

Tolmich Sets Hurdle Mark In K. C. Meet

Hoya Star Tosses Ball 56 Feet 4½ Inches; 6,425 Fans Witness Event

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, March 16.—Al Blozis, giant Georgetown weight star, and Allan Tolmich, former Wayne University hurdle ace, bettered two world indoor track records here tonight in the Cleveland Knights of Columbus meet, staged before 6,425 fans.

Blozis eclipsed his own mark of 56 feet 2⅛ inches with the 16-pound shot on a toss of 56 4½ inches. The husky Easterner had posted the old mark in a New York meet earlier this winter.

Tolmich ran the 45-yard low hurdles in 5.4 seconds to snap a 40-year-old record, set by F. B. Echeuber in Boston on March 16, 1901. The Detroiter also tied the mark of 5.7 seconds in the 45-yard high hurdles, leading Charles Hlad, of Michigan Normal, to the tape.

Rice was a quarter lap ahead in posting the time of 8:58.9, which was 5.5 seconds off the record held by the victor.

Walter Mehl, of Wisconsin, 1941 national A. A. U. mile champion, took the event in the slow time of 4:19 despite covering the last half in 1:58.9. Mel Truitt, of Des Moines, Iowa, was second and Luigi Becalli, of the New York A. C., third. Gene Venzke, of the New York A. C., trailed his teammate by about 4 yards.

Charles Beetham, former Ohio State flash, finished strong in the 600-yard run to shade Jim Herbert, former New York University ace and record holder for the distance. The Ohioan's time was 1:12.5.

Oberlin Wins Mile Relay

The Oberlin A. C. team took the A. A. U. 1-mile relay in 3:37, with the Buffalo A. C. coming in second.

Blozis' new mark was under the 56 feet 6 inches which he heaved the shot two weeks ago in the I. C. 4-A. meet, but the fact he used the wrong type shot probably will prevent acceptance of the longest throw.

John Borican, of New York City, holder of the record in the 1,000-yard run, took the event in well over his best time, Campbell Kane, of Indiana, coming in second and George O'Brien, of Columbus, Ohio, third. The New Yorker was clocked in 2:11.9, almost three seconds off the record.

Celtics Beat Brewers, Near League Title

The Brewers jumped out in front early and appeared comfortably ahead with but eight minutes remaining, 33-23. Then it was that Moe Frankel stepped into stride and personally tied the count at 33-33 when he flipped in a basket with little more than three minutes to go.

Nick Shaback, Celtic rookie, sent the invaders ahead to stay with but a minute to go on a beautiful shot from the pivot and Bernie Fleigel converted a foul to clinch it.

Constant bickering between Referee Chuck Solodare and the Brewers' bench and a spectacular spill in which Phil Rabin was knocked out after colliding with Mickey Kupperberg on the dead run under the basket provided some thrills.

A. A. U. Fighter Leaves Hospital

Al Horton, young featherweight from the St. Mary's Boys Club of Alexandria, was released from Emergency hospital yesterday. He was taken there Friday night after his fight in the District Amateur Athletic Union tourney at Turner's arena.

Horton was knocked down by Lewis Hanbury, of Merrick, in their senior battle and collapsed in the dressing room after the fight. It was at first thought he might be suffering from a brain concussion and he was taken to Emergency for observation.

Bockwinkle Meets Steinborn on Mat

Warren Bockwinkle, the St. Louis flash, long overdue for a headline wrestling match, will go semiwindup Thursday night at Turner's Arena when he meets Milo Steinborn, the Memphis Blacksmith.

Featured on the card are the Green Hornet, mysterious hooded grappler, and Joe Cox, the Kansas Krasher.

Redskin Office Puts Deadline On Season Tickets

If you intend to get the same seats your season ticket last year called for at the Redskins' home games, you'd better get a move on—deadline for picking up reservations passes Thursday at 6 p. m., General Manager Jack Espey announced yesterday.

Persons having reservations must exercise their options at the Redskins' Ninth and H Street offices. After Thursday all seats will be made available to the general public, and first attention will be given to the requests from 3,000 "new" fans who have requested 1941 season ticket books.

The advance sale for the Redskins' 1941 games in the National Professional Football League is far ahead of the 1940 sale at the present date. Orders have been taken for 14,000 seats—12,500 $9.90 ticket books and 1,500 $13.20 blocks. Total gross sale indicated is $123,750, Espey said.

Setter Wins Field Trials At Baltimore

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, March 16. — Sports Peerless Beaupride, black and white setter owned by M. H. Simmons, of Milroy, Pa., won the featured shooting dog stake at the Maryland Sporting Association field trials today.

The 3½-year-old settter had two perfect finds and also honored another dog's point to take first honors over the Carroll Manor course. He was handled by R. E. Christian, of Deerfield, Va.

Roberson's Prince, owned and handled by C. P. Roberson, Baltimore, took second place in the field of 27.

Allegheny Flying Trixie, owned by Dr. A. R. C. Benner, of Washington, placed third. She was handled by Porter Carter, of Trevains, Va.

Kovacs Takes Indoor Tennis Championship

By the Associated Press

Oklahoma City, March 16.—Frank Kovacs, of Oakland, Calif., playing in his first national indoor tennis tournament, won the singles championship today by routing former Champion Wayne Sabin, of Portland, Oreg., in straight sets, 6—0, 6—4, 6—2.

The 21-year-old cut-up, who clowned his way through the earlier rounds, was never more serious in his life then as he humbled Sabin with a withering cross-court fire.

Kovacs broke Sabin's service on the opening game and was the master all the way, slipping behind only once when the Oregonian made his lone threat early in the second set.

The Californian, who ousted Defending Champion Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, in the semifinals, crossed Sabin up in the opening set, sticking strictly to the defense.

McNeil-Guernsey Victors

In the doubles finals Don McNeil, Oklahoma City, and Frank Guernsey, Houston, Tex., defeated Bobby Riggs, Chicago, and Jack Kramer, Los Angeles, 6—1, 7—5, 6—3.

The shots which Sabin used in eliminating National Champion Don McNeil, of Oklahoma City, yesterday simply wouldn't work.

After losing the first four games, Sabin loafed through the set, to make his bid in the next.

He held his service on the first game of the second set and broke through on the next one to take his only lead of the match.

Sabin held service only on the fifth and seventh games in the final set and Kovacs won going away.

The victory was the fifth tournament triumph of the winter campaign for Kovacs, who started his sensational season by stopping Riggs in the finals of the Oklahoma indoor meet on this same court in December.

Riggs-Kramer No Match

Riggs, who won the indoor doubles championship with Elwood Cooke, of Seattle, last year, and Kramer, who holds the outdoor doubles title with Ted Schroeder, of Stanford University, were no match for the second-seeded duo of McNeill and Guernsey today.

After sweeping through the opening set with the loss of only a single game, McNeill and Guernsey fell behind, 1—4, in the second before rallying to square it 4-all.

McNeill held his service in the sixth game and broke through Riggs on the seventh, pulling even as Guernsey held on the eigth. Kramer and McNeill both held their serves, but Riggs was broken on the eleventh and Guernsey served the game that won the set.

Service was held through the first six games of the last set, but McNeill and Guernsey broke through twice, ending the match with Kramer serving.

Baseball League Seeks Two Additional Teams

Teams interested in joining a newly formed unlimited baseball league which will play its games at the Ballston Stadium are asked to call Norman Outcault at North 1477 any time during the day.

The league will play two night games a week and on every third Sunday. Four teams have already joined and two more would like to be added.

Phillies Beat Bob Feller and Indians, 5 to 1

By the Associated Press

Miami Beach, Fla., March 16.—The Phillies bowled over Bob Feller and the Cleveland Indians today before an overflow crowd of 2,500, 5 to 1.

Four of the five runs were scored off Feller, Merrill May knocking in all four tallies. He singled in the first with the bases full and duplicated the feat in the third. Johnny Rizzo hit a homer off Southpaw Al Milnar in the eighth for the Phils' other tally.

Meantime, Frank Melton, Tommy Hughes and Ike Pearson held the Indians scoreless until the ninth. Then Pearson walked Lou Boudreau. Grimes and Ray Mack followed with singles to score Boudreau.

Browns Beat Bees

Monterrey, Mexico, March 16 (AP). Two singles, a walk and a sacrifice hit enabled the St. Louis Browns to take an 11-inning 6-to-5 decision over the Boston Bees, in the first game of an exhibition double-header here this morning.

It was an expensive victory, however, because Shortstop Johnny Berardino pulled a leg muscle beating out a hit to first base and will be out for several days.

Cards Down Yanks Behind Rookie Grodzicki

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 16 (AP). The St. Louis Cardinals rallied in the ninth inning to defeat the New York Yankees, 6 to 5, in an exhibition game today as Rookie Johnnny Grodzicki went the full route for the Cards and allowed only six hits.

The Yanks tied the score with three runs in the first half of the ninth when Charley Keller belted a home run over the bleachers with Red Rolfe and Phil Rizzuto on base. Then with two out, Jimmy Brown slashed a bounder to Rolfe, who made a bad throw to first. Joe Gordon tried to tag Brown and had the ball knocked from his hands and Marty Marion scored from first on the play.

Chapman Hits Homer With Bases Full; A's Win

Los Angeles, Calif., March 16 (AP). Sam Chapman's home run with the bases loaded in the first inning and another by Bob Johnson with one on in the fifth helped the Philadelphia Athletics turn back Chicago's Cubs, 8 to 4, in an exhibition game today.

Chapman's round tripper came off Pitcher Claude Passeau, while Johnson got his off Dizzy Dean, who was nicked for five hits in the three innings he worked. Dean permitted no other runs than those produced by Johnson's blast.

Finney Homers as Sox Defeat Cincinnati, 5-1

Tampa, Fla., March 16 (U.P.).—Lou Finney's sixth-inning home run today featured the Boston Red Sox 5-to-1 victory over the Cincinnati Reds in an exhibition game. Both teams made 10 hits, but Boston Pitchers Charlie Wagner, Bucky Harris and Mike Ryba scattered them so as to allow only one Cincinnati counter.

Frank Allan, Pro-am Finalist, Will Play at Chevy Chase

Frank Allan, the Pittston, Pa., amateur who was on the losing team in the St. Augustine pro-amateur finals yesterday, will be here in May for another crack at the Chevy Chase Invitation Championship, it was learned yesterday.

Allan, who holds the Bahamas and Florida West Coast Amateur titles, will play in the remainder of the southern amateur events before his annual competitive appearance here.

"Shanty" Allan, as he was better known here, advanced to the finals of the Chevy Chase Invitation three consecutive years but lost in the finals each time, in 1937 to Levi Yoder and 1938 and 1939 to Claude Rippy. Last year he was a second round victim of Roger Peacock.

CONSIDINE

Nassau, Bahamas, March 16.—The record attendance for a sports event in the United States—whatever it is—might well have been smashed to bits if the Jones-Hagen-Sarazen-Armour golf match, which ends here today, had been played on one of the courses near any big American city.

About 1,000 persons, probably the best-dressed golf gallery in history, are seeing these Red Cross matches down here on Nassau's fine little course. At a place like Fresh Meadow, just out of New York, the matches probably would have drawn more than 100,000. Once upon a time they nearly broke Fresh Meadows' doors down, trying to get a look at a match played by Babe Ruth, Babe Didrickson, Sylva Annenberg and John Montague, who had just before that won a decision over an old stick-up charge.

One can only guess at the turnout in New York for a match which not only embodied these four immortals of golf, but utilized the Duke and Duchess of Windsor as referees.

Yet this match may well bring in more of a "gate" than any other. One played, despite the modest size of the crowd that followed it. It is for benefit of the Red Cross, as you perhaps know. Admission here is $2.50, but if you buy a $5 ticket you get the autographs of the players and the Duke. And, atop this, you can become a kind of honorary member of the nonpresent gallery by sending $5 to the Miami Biltmore Hotel, Coral Gables, Fla., care of the Red Cross golf fund. In return, Fred Corcoran, the young man who is doing such a notable job of building up professional golf in America, will send you a scorecard autographed by the players and, if possible, the Duke's signature. No rubber stamps, either.

This is the first time that Jones, Hagen, Sarazen and Armour ever played together. Their names have been symbols of the golden age of sports in the United States, and they appeared in many tournaments together. But until now they never made up a foursome. Among them, they won the enormous total of 33 United States and British national championships—topped by Jones' 13 titles and Hagen's 11.

They took this thing very seriously. Jones has had no stomach for competitive golf since he quit that side of the game in 1930 after his increasingly unbelievable feat of winning the U. S. Open, the U. S. Amateur, the British Open and the British Amateur. He plays quite a lot, but it is club golf with friends, and if the putts don't drop . . . who cares? Once a year, about this time, he practices in order to play a little decent golf in his Masters Tournament. But this year he began bearing down shortly after the duke announced the match. At his old club, the East Lake, near Atlanta, he recorded rounds of 65 and 66 which shows that if he had to do it, Jones would still be near the top of the heap.

Even Hagen trained, despite the obvious shock it must have been to his system to go to bed on time and take care of himself. Armour also prepped for this supposedly friendly match and beat Ben Hogan recently at Boca Raton with 14 pars and four birdies. As for Sarazen, Gene very early was out to shine in this one. He brought his game up to a dizzy peak in the recent Miami four ball.. In other words, despite all the cordiality, and the sports-for-sports-sake motif, these fellows are out for blood. Sarazen and Hagen all but came to blows last summer, and there is little or no appeasement in either of them.

The Duke and Duchess seem to have tremendous interest in the match, jotting down scores, and trudging all the way around the island's pleasant course. The couple is no longer an object of curiosity here. They shop almost unnoticed along the city's hot and colorful main street, with its quaint rows of clothing, woolen, perfume, and grog shops. They are hard to distinguish from the international colony following this match. But they add to a picturesque setting, what with the varicolored sports outfits of the select little gallery, the lush green course, the incomparable blue-green of the water, the ebony-colored and barefoot caddies, the pink and yellow and white mansions of the elect looking down from a bluff off the course, and the great squadron of reservoir windmills nearby.

But what a crowd this match would have drawn almost anywhere except on this peaceful little jewel of an island set in the great ring of the gulf stream.

Tommy Forte Fights Corchado Tonight

Philadelphian 5-8 Favorite; 3,000 to See 10-Rounder in Turner's Arena

By Al Hailey

Washington's boxing public will be afforded the chance to see one of the leverest little men in the business tonight at Turner's Arena when Philadelphia's Tommy Forte steps up for a ten-round engagement with Victor Corchado, dusky graduate of the Puerto Rican bantamweight ranks.

Although Corchado is quite a capable lad with his fists, Tommy will take the ring a 5-to-8 favorite.

Forte is an expensive piece of goods, and Promoter Joe Turner—back on the scene after a lengthy period of idleness—is counting on filling his recently renovated arena to its 3,000 capacity.

Tommy will be the second of the fighting Fortes to make a fistic debut here. Brother Johnny made his bow on the Billy Conn-Dan Hassett card by defeating Billy Banks.

If Johnny is any standard for judgment, tonight's business should be a large success, for Tommy is said to be much superior to his younger brother. Tommy has a terrific punch for his size and is a more skillful boxer than Johnny, his handlers allow.

Corchado, who upset Billy Banks in a fast fight at Turner's last month, is a rugged youngster with a good punch and a lot of speed that may make trouble for Tommy, however.

Forte will be at a slight weight disadvantage. He'll weigh in today at 122 pounds in the District Boxing Commission offices. Corchado expects to weigh in at 125.

Both boys are graduates of the 118-pound class. Forte won the National Golden Gloves bantam title in 1938 and since turning pro he has beaten Lou Salica, present bantamweight champion, and lost to him in a return match.

Turner last night said he has a good chance to bring Salica to Washington late in May to defend the title against Forte in Griffith Stadium, or against Corchado if the Puerto Rican upsets Tommy tonight.

Forte's victims include Lew Transperenti, whom he knocked out in two rounds; Larry Bolvin, the highly regarded New England featherweight, and Joey Archibald, former featherweight champion.

Forte Won Before

Tommy's activities have been largely on his home front. Under the management of Pete Moran, Herman Taylor and Mickey Diamond, Tommy has been one of Philadelphia's best drawing cards there for the past two years. Tonight's business brings Tommy and Corchado together for the second time. Their first fight two years ago resulted in a close decision for Forte.

Matchmaker Gabe Menendez has lined up a strong supporting card, opening at 8:30 p. m. In the eight-round semifinal, Pedro Hernandez, Puerto Rican featherweight, fights Johnny Marcelline, of Philadelphia. El Brookman, Washington middleweight, fights El Franklin, of Philadelphia, in a six; Oscar Wright, local colored lightweight, fights Bobby Woods in another six and Wilbert Reabin meets Johnny Thomas in the four-round opener.

Louis, Simon Meet Friday

By the Associated Press

New York, March 16.—Joe Louis, world's heavyweight boxing champion, makes his fourth start in his fight-a-month program, as the feature of this week's national program.

Louis takes on Abe Simon, of New York, in a scheduled 20-rounder at Detroit Friday night. This is the second 20-round bout in which Louis has participated in Detroit, the last was the one in which he knocked out Bob Pastor, of New York, in 11 rounds. This will be Louis' fifteenth defense of the title.

Fritzie Zivic, welterweight champion from Pittsburgh, goes in two over-the-weight bouts during the week. On Monday he meets Saverio Turiello, of Italy, at Pittsburgh, and he meets Felix Garcia, of Puerto Rico, at Baltimore, Thursday. Both are 10-rounders.

D. C. Inboard Racer Second; Mark Broken

By the Associated Press

Lakeland, Fla., March 16.—Frank Alderman, of Fort Myers, Fla., piloted his Miss Demeser II to a new national inboard Class D record of 44.117 miles an hour today in the sixth annual Lakeland Motorboat Regatta.

Alderman's mark displaced the old record of 43.987 miles an hour held by Bub Gambrill, of Washington, D. C., who was second in today's event with a speed of 43.451.

In was the third new record in the two-day event, the last on the Florida winter circuit, two having been shattered yesterday in outboard races.

Pinder Sets Mark

George Pinder, of Miami, hit 33.461 miles per hour in winning the Miami Flyer race, and it was entered as a record, as it was the first time the event had been run in an American Powerboat Association sanctioned meet. Guy Marvin, of Jacksonville, was second in both heats.

Kenn MacKenzie, of New Haven, Conn., took both heats of the race for 91-cubic-inch hydroplanes, with Jack (Pop) Cooper, veteran Kansas City racer, second. Fastest time was MacKenzie's 48.103 miles per hour, far below the 52.295 record.

Cooper, whose 225 record of 70.810 miles per hour, set here last year, still stands, finished second and third in the two heats for 225's today, while Hugh Gingras, Rockledge, Fla., came in first both times. The best speed Gingras made in his Gray Goose was 66.372 miles per hour. Jack O'Mara, New York City, was runner-up to Gingras in the second heat and was third behind Gingras and Cooper in the other.

Edwards Is Winner

Mabry Edwards, Jacksonville, and Tommy Gore, Miami, finished one-two in both heats of the event for outboard racing runabouts. Top speed was 48.361 by Edwards.

In the class E inboard race, Norman R. Fry, of Lancaster, Pa., and Frank M. Baker, of Miami, took a first and a second apiece, but neither came close to the record of 53.571.

J. W. Alligood, Miami, who finished third in both heats of the family runabout event, wound up with first money when most of the other entries in a field of 17 were disqualified for improper starting and illegal motors.

St. Patrick's Bowling Won By Rose, Clark

The record-tying total of 2,566 pins posted by Lucy Rose and Astor Clarke in the St. Patrick's Day mixed doubles stood up for first prize as the record field of 92 teams finished after 4 o'clock Sunday morning at Silver Spring.

Mrs. Rose, bidding for the No. 1 spot among the women bowlers and Clarke, the top-ranking male star for the past four years, won first prize of $150. Mrs. Rose posted a 1,289 and Clark 1,277 in the winning effort.

The winning total tied the previous mark in the tournament, conducted annually by Earle Stocking and Hugh Arbaugh, rolled by Evelyn Ellis and Howard Parsons in 1937.

Orlando, Fla., March 16.—Al Evans has not only surpassed Jake Early in the ranking of the Nats' catchers, but he is giving Rick Ferrell a valiant battle for the No. 1 catching job . . . in his last two games, Evans has made five hits and is showing the kind of speed on the baselines that enabled him to beat out two infield hits today. If the St. Louis Browns are still interested in swapping a pitcher for Rick Ferrell, it will be all right with Manager Bucky Harris who is perfectly willing to let Evans do the Nats' regular catching . . . the muscular young redhead batted .364 in the few games in which he saw service last season, and there never has been anything wrong with his throwing arm . . . in fact, it's on the brilliant side . . . Jimmy Pofahl made a play today that attests to the complete recovering of his throwing arm . . . he crossed far behind second base to scoop up Frank Croucher's grounder and throw him out easily from off balance . . . Pofahl was also robbed of a hit when his line drive to right field was caught . . . Ken Chase's lack of success against the Tigers today was no surprise to Coach Benny Bengough who warned Chase up before he went on the mound . . . "You'll be lucky to get anybody out today," said Bengough, "you haven't got anything on the ball" . . . Chase admitted it, saying his arm "didn't feel right" . . . How far is a city block? . . . That's how far George Chase was thrown out when he tried to stretch his second-inning double into a triple . . . Jack Sanford went hitless in his first tryout at the first base job today but the ball he lined into Hank Greenberg's glove in the eighth inning was murdered . . . Big Arnold Anderson's single that drove in a run in the eighth inning today was not a complete surprise . . . Anderson led the Nats in hitting last season with three hits in five times at bat . . . Ripley should have been here today. . . . two runs scored on two different plays because the catchers made throwdrows to the pitchers in returning the ball. POVICH.

Bowie to Have Another 'First' With Start of 8-Race Cards

Daily Double Among Other Innovations

Nearby Oval First With Starting Gate, $1,200 Minimum in Purses, Loud Speakers

When Joseph A. Farrell, general manager of Bowie, obtained permission from the Maryland Racing Commission to schedule eight races daily for the spring meet, which will open the Eastern racing season on April 1, close students of the sport declare it was at least the tenth innovation that the Southern Maryland Agricultural Association introduced to modern racing in the Old Line State.

When the track was built in 1914 the first of the "firsts" was the inclusion of a seven-eighths chute. Many races were run over that distance, but less than a decade ago it was discontinued, and barns erected upon the strip. It did not meet with the approval of the horsemen, particularly in the springtime.

Then followed (2) the coupling of horses, trained by the same man, but in different interests; (3) starting stalls inside the oval; (4) starting gate; (5) daily double; (6) modern concrete grandstand; (7) automatic sprinkler; (8) loud speakers; (9) $1,200 overnight purses, and 10 eight races.

Installed Gate

Although the Maryland Jockey Club first to use the electric starting gate, when several races were started from it a couple of seasons ago, it was Bowie that used it for every event that same fall, proving conclusively that the apparatus was feasible for future employment.

The increase of overnight purses from $1,000 to $1,200 met with instantaneous approval of the turfmen, and so many desired to run last fall that it was not unusual for 80 to 100 animals to be thrown out of a race. The boost will be beneficial again this spring because the management will have more "springtime" horses than ever before. And the eighth race will permit more to start.

With the passing of the Ides of March the Bowie turf colony has taken on a racy aspect. The snow of ten days ago packed the racing strip, which was at its best last fall and this spring should find the course just as good. Horses have been galloping daily and they are being educated from the starting gate by Jim Milton and his crew of assistants.

Officials Arriving

Eleven years ago the first winner of the Rowe Memorial, the first $5,000 stake to be decided at Bowie, was captured by a thoroughbred that was to make international history eight years later. That thoroughbred was Battleship, which sported the silks of Walter J. Salmon, the New York sportsman, who bred him. Battleship was a 3-year-old in 1930, being by Man o' War and Quarantine, trained by Jack H. Pryce, and which won the then James Rowe Memorial Handicap, at 7 furlongs. After the death of Jimmy Rowe, jr., the stake became known as the Rowe Memorial, in honor of both father and son.

Won Two at Miami

Battleship was fresh from winning two races at Miami when he came to Bowie. He was ridden by Lou Schaefer, who brought him home in front of Lee Rosenberg's Mr. Desmond and Harry Payne Whitney's Frumper. Others in the field were the Audley Farm's Enid, J. E. Davis' Colossal, A. W. Wentzel's Titus, the Brancastle Farm's Guide Right and Mr. Whitney's other starter, Prometheus. The Whitney entry was the favorite at 13 to 10 and Battleship the second choice at a little better than 3 to 1.

Mrs. Marion du Pont Scott later acquired Battleship from Mr. Salmon and she had him converted into a steeplechaser. He was sent to Aintree with the Grand National his objective and was returned a surprise winner in 1938 under Bruce Hobbs, a 17-year-old jockey. Hobbs came to the United States that year and rode several races in this country. Later he was badly injured in England, but recovered.

Three Maryland turfmen have won the Rowe Memorial. Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Towee was home first in 1932, the A. C. C. Stable's Sun Egret was returned the winner in 1938 and Yancy Christmas' Rough Time accounted for the event the following year. A year ago Whitey Abel's Honey Cloud led Sun Egret to the wire.

Bruins Score Over Rover Five, 32 to 20

Pointing for their big games next week with the Brewers, Philadelphia Toppers and Philadelphia Sphas, the Washington Bruins, colored professional court tossers, yesterday defeated the Atlantic City Rovers at Turner's Arena, 32 to 20.

The Rovers led at the half, 15 to 13, principally due to the accurate shooting of Kern from midcourt. But "Reds" Briscoe took Kern in charge in the second half, and he failed to locate the basket thereafter.

"Long John" Williams started the offensive to open the half, tying the score, 15-all, with a push-paw hook shot. "Ace" Clarke followed with an overhand ringer off the backboard, and the Bruins' new acquisition, "Bricktop" Wright, traveling fast, with a hop, skip and jump, put the Bruins 4 points in front.

"Soupy" Campbell pushed one through the basket, and Tom Sealey whirled about to add another before the former Florida University star, "Lofty" Channell, could get under the buckboard and shove through the Rovers' only basket of the half. Sealey and Briscoe, and a dazzling passing attack, accounted for the Bruins' additional points.

Thoroughbred Club Reelects Thomas Piatt

Lexington, Ky., March 15 (AP)—Thomas Carr Piatt has been reelected for his third term as president of the Thoroughbred Club of America.

Our Boots Tops Arkansas Derby Entries

By the Associated Press

Hot Springs, Ark., March 16.—Nominations for the sixth consecutive running of the $5,000 Arkansas Derby March 29 at Oaklawn Park totaled 23 today.

The list announced by Racing Secretary Eugene W. Bury included six Kentucky Derby eligibles.

Outstanding among the thoroughbreds is the winter book favorite for the Kentucky Derby, the Woodvale Farm's Our Boots, winner of $72,600 as a 2-year-old and never out of the money in his six starts here.

Other Kentucky Derby nominees named for the Oaklawn event are the Walmac Farm's Bushwhacker and New Englander; Tall Trees Stable's Quintilian; V. V. Long's Sporting, and Dr. C. N. Finch's Burman.

The big Denemark Stable, whose Super Chief was first and Colorado Ore second in the Arkansas Derby last year, will be represented by Lactose.

Others nominated include: J. McCuan's Wise Moss, W. U. Ridenour's Joan T., E. F. Bennett's Quizzle, H. T. Deahl's Lady Psychic, K. Murchison's Libercaise, Mrs. W. R. Reid's Aljack, Mrs. V. P. Noyes' He Rolls, Hilltop Stock Farm's Chocolate Maid and My Bobby, J. C. Humes' Doubtful, T. E. Sanderford's Leon Pirate, W. W. Seroggins' Four Fifty, H. M. Walker's Miss Romance, G. K. Wilson's High Talent, J. English's Oakmount and Traumelus.

Blue Pair's Derby Stock Is Boosted

By the Associated Press

Lexington, Ky., March 16.—Blue Pair, the Bluegrass-owned colt whose chances of getting in the Kentucky Derby seemed dim only a week ago, has reestablished himself as a potent possibility for the May 3 classic.

The picturesque speedster, which won seven out of 13 races and never finished out of the money as a two-year-old last year, was limping in his stall a few days ago as the result of an injury to the bar of his hoof.

Many trainers said openly there would be no chance for the brilliant son of Pairbypair to recover soon enough to be in condition for the Derby's gruelling mile and a quarter, and he appeared definitely out of the big race.

But Blue Pair bugged the eyes of the railbirds by spinning six furlongs at Keeneland race track yesterday in the splendid time of 1:14 1/5.

The horse went absolutely sound and pulled up dancing and playing. He looked as if the workout were just what he needed.

Jockey Gruber Hurt In Caliente Spill

Agua Caliente, Mexico, March 16 (INS).—Willie Gruber, 17-year-old apprentice jockey from Chicago, was seriously injured when his mount fell turning into the stretch in the last race at Agua Caliente race track today.

Gruber was taken to a San Diego hospital. The accident occurred at almost the same spot where Jockey Earl Dew, last year's national hockey champion, was fatally injured last February 2.

Gruber was riding La Self, a 5-year-old mare. The horse stumbled when Gruber attempted to guide her through next to the rail. The horse was uninjured.

Cardinals Meet

The Washington Cardinals will hold a baseball meeting tonight at 8 p. m. at 1112 Raum Street Northeast. All players are requested to be present.

Dear Al:

Here it is two weeks and one day from the opening of Bowie and I harping on the Kentucky Derby. Friend Frank Menke sends along an interesting paragraph on the subject of going to the Derby. I expect some of you are making plans to attend so I'll pass this along:

The question: "What does it cost to see the Kentucky Derby?" can be answered in various ways. If a man has a lot of money, and wants to sit in a box somewhere on the de luxe third floor of the clubhouse, the seat—provided there's one still left for sale—will cost him $18.60—including admission and taxes. But, if he's operating on a budget, he can find himself a spot over in the "bleachers," where the admission price is exactly 50 cents. Grandstand admission is $2.35 on Derby Day—and $5.85 into the clubhouse enclosure. Reserved seat prices begin at $8.40. If he gets to the Churchill Downs early, and decides he wants lunch—how much does he pay? That also depends on how much he cares to pay. The prices are geared to fit any pocketbook. In the second floor de luxe dining room of the clubhouse, the "Derby Breakfast," served table de hote, is $5. In the monster ground floor clubhouse dining room, seating 1,500, the "Derby Breakfast" is $2.50. If the man is in the grandstand section, and wants a hearty luncheon, he can have it, at a la carte price, which will total, between 50 cents and $1.25. But over in the "bleachers," Louisville city food prices prevail. Sandwiches are 5 or 10 cents, according to the meat content. Coffee and soft drinks are 5 cents and desserts are 5 cents or 10 cents, meaning that anywhere from 20 cents to 35 cents will provide him with a wholesome luncheon. So, on Derby Day at Churchill Downs, you can get into the park, have luncheon, see nine races, including the Derby, for anywhere from 70 to 85 cents up to $21.60 for a clubhouse box seat and a de luxe luncheon. What'll you have?

Perhaps I don't know a horse from a billy goat, as Art Brown has been bellowing over WOL, but I can beat him bowling. Galt Davis, who knows horses and is a first-flight bowler, wants to stage a Bennings-Brown match at his Rosslyn Alleys. I'll go him one better and challenge Art for a battle in the Old Dominion Open Handicap Saturday night and the loser pays for the entries. What do you say, lug? BILL.

First race—Maiden 3-year-olds open, the program and I spot LEWISTON on the reserve list. This one will do a lot of running if sent postward and appears best. ROSE RED is a fair sort and will be a factor. CARLSTONE may be the third one.

Second race—WANNA HYGRO is tossed in this with light weight and may be the right one. SIR QUEST figures to be in the thick of contention and looms as a keen rival for the top one. WISE COUNSEL should be in the money circle.

Third race—PETTACAIRN, according to the chart, should have won that last. Meets about the same brand of opposition and needs only the right handling. DARBY DESMOND promises to furnish contention. BAD COLD for the minor award.

Fourth race—This looks like a tight fit between CALORY and RIFTED CLOUDS. Either could take it all. If there is an upset, I believe ESPINO GOLD will be the medium.

Fifth race—This would be a nice spot to turn PLOWSHARE loose on the boys and gals. I understand Meade will have the mount and that he will be out there kicking. SICKLE T. is the figure horse and the probable favorite. MISS QUIZ for the show end.

Sixth race—BONIFIED and BRASS BELL appear to be the pair slated to battle it out in this event. Both are fit as hands make horses and should provide plenty of excitement. KAHYRITE could be the third one.

Seventh race—BALLOTER has been improving lately and seems ready to take down a set of brackets in company of this caliber. MARY SCHULZ is as good as recent races. YES AND NO for the third money.

Eighth race—SUPREME CHANCE is the class of this cheap field and needs only the right handling. PICK OUT is good now and will be in the thick of contention. CLARO may be able to take care of the others.

Best bet—FETTACAIRN.

Bill Ackerman On Fishing

Miami, Fla., March 16.—This year at Cat Cay, the tiny Bahama island on the eastern side of the Gulf Stream just 49 miles from Miami Beach, there will be no "Cookie," for, according to D. R. Wasey, owner of Cat Cay, his general manager retired.

ACKERMAN For 10 years, C. N. Cook has hovered over this tiny island paradise like a hen over her chicks, accomplishing the impossible oftentimes. There is no doubt, that it was through his efforts that Cat Cay has become the most ultra modern of present-day fishing camps. Whatever his reason for leaving, it must have been pressing, for "Cookie" will probably miss his island home as much as those who visit there will miss him.

In his place, to conduct the annual tuna tournament and marlin contest, which starts this year for the first time, shortly after the regular contest closes, there is one of the grandest guys in the sportfishing world—Tommy Aitken.

Tommy, for many years, was marine editor of Outdoor Life; and for the past four years executive director of the Greater Miami Fishing Tournaments—a competitive tourney, that since his association with it, has become the greatest in all the world, considering it from the point of numbers participating. No better man could be found, in our estimation, to fill this job, that, not only requires a real knowledge of the game, but executive ability far above the average.

The tuna tournament at Cat Cay springs from one of the greatest wonders of the marine world—the migration northward of the giant bluefin tuna, not in small schools, or even by the thousands, but literally by hundreds of thousands.

Lean, fighting fish appearing almost as if by magic, regularly each year almost to the day in mid-May, in the waters within a stone's throw of Cat Cay, where the green inshore Atlantic turns to the intense blue of the Gulf Stream and the bottom drops to unfathomable depths.

In a few weeks the run is over, for just as suddenly as they appear, so they disappear in mid-June, leaving in their wake, broken tackle, aching shoulders and blistered hands—and memories, until another season and another run.

This year's Cat Cay Tournament, subject to invitation as those of previous years so that only top-notchers can compete, will see many of the world's outstanding big game fishermen gathered on this glamorous little isle on May 27, when the actual fishing will get under way.

It runs until June 7, but out of the ten days only three are official, and count in the scoring. These official days are decided only after a survey has been made and the tuna found to be running in considerable numbers. The starting gun is fired, and there is a mad race over the bar to get going.

The winner last year was Thomas Shevlin, who, based on a point system, accumulated 42,568 points. He nosed out Frank O'Brien by catching five of the giant fish on the last day—equalling the record established by several anglers.

Sacred Heart Five Captures Court Crown

Sacred Heart basketball team captured its second title of the season yesterday afternoon by nosing out St. Martin's 19 to 15, in the St. John's Parochial School League Tournament. The winners had previously taken the Gonzaga championship a few weeks ago.

Both teams countered from the floor 7 times. Sacred Heart made good 5 free throws while St. Martin's chalked up 4. Dudley and Cotton led the winners with 5 points apiece. Durkin was best for the losers, scoring 9 points.

St. Joseph's won third place by defeating St. John's 11-10.

Individual prizes and team trophies will be presented to the winners next Sunday.

Faculty to Dominate Bull Gone, El Magnifico Jeered by 30,000

Once Hailed as Public Hero No. 1, Matador May Be Jailed for Losing Bullring Glamor

By the Associated Press

Mexico City, March 16.—The last vestige of bullring glamour dropped away from matador Lorenzo Garza today, and with hanging head he walked out alone after failing to dominate the bulls in his latest effort to win back the fans who formerly hailed him as El Magnifico.

Thirty-thousand angry spectators jeered his performance and none rose to his defense.

"He ought to retire for awhile," said one of the more moderate experts. "He has lost his faculty to dominate."

Thus Garza slipped farther down the scale while his two greatest rivals scored tremendous triumphs in their appearances on the same program.

No Ears for Garza

As heroes on the afternoon of Garza's bitter defeat, Armillita, known as the Master, and Silverio both received the highly prized tails and ears lopped from the animals they slew with the satisfactory bravery and "emotion" of a bullfighter in good standing.

Moreover, the heroes were carried out on the shoulders of their wildly exultant fans, whereas Lorenzo, the disgraced, had to totter out by himself without ears or tails although he killed his bulls, too.

Garza, who dropped into supreme disgrace and was fined 1,000 pesos for permitting a bull to survive nine sword thrusts two weeks ago and further failed to distinguish himself last Sunday when a bull tore his pants, drew a brave one for his first this afternoon.

Maybe It's the Brig Next

Garza gets $2,800 per performance for handling situations like this, and he called up all his bravery and "emotion." His cape and muleta waved out the invitation and the bull charged fiercely.

Garza constantly gave ground before the charges, but finally killed the bull—with a badly placed thrust. His second bull must have been the first bull's twin, for the spectacle was the same.

Garza's contract calls for his appearance again next Sunday, but his future is doubtful. With the approval of President Avila Camacho, the federal authorities may fine an unsatisfactory bullfighter up to 5,000 pesos (about $1,000) now and may cancel his contracts, and may even jail him for a maximum of 15 days.

West, of D. C., Receives R.-M. Sports Award

Special Dispatch to The Post

Front Royal, Va., March 16.—Randolph-Macon Academy awarded monograms to varsity cagers, tankmen and boxers yesterday.

Orengo Stars; Giants Nose Out Dodgers

Miami, Fla., March 16 (AP).—Joe Orengo, the New York Giants' new shortstop, accounted for three runs with a homer and a double today as the Giants defeated the Brooklyn Dodgers' Florida squad, 6 to 5.

It was the Giants' fifth straight exhibition victory. Orengo clouted his homer with a runner on base in the fifth inning after Brooklyn had taken a 4-to-0 lead, and he doubled home Johnny McCarthy with the winning run in the eighth. Peter Reiser hit a Brooklyn homer in the fourth.

In the second inning, the Nats scored four runs against Luther (Bud) Thomas, their former pal, to barge into a 4-1 lead. They made only three hits in the process, and it all happened after two were out. Bloodworth and Jack Sanford drew walks, and Bloodworth galloped to third when Catcher Birdie Tebbetts overthrew second base. He crossed the plate when Evans beat out a single to Bartell. At this point, Sid Hudson delivered a clean single to left to score Sanford, and then George Case walloped a long double to right to drive in the third and fourth runs of the inning.

The Tigers got all those runs back against Chase, and more. They came up with two runs in the fourth on consecutive triples to right by Harris and Greenberg, and Mayers' single. Harris' single and Greenberg's triple into the bushes in left tied the score at 4-4 in the fifth, and in the sixth they came up with two more runs after Chase had walked a pair. Tebbetts' smash against the rightfield screen was the big blow of the inning.

The Nats pecked away at Lefthander Tom Seats and got a run in the fifth after Case walked. Welaj's single to right and Chapman's line drive fly to center scored him, and in the seventh the Nats tied the score at 6-6 after Welaj and Chapman singled, Tebbetts returning the ball to Pitcher Hal White made a wild throw and Welaj scored from third.

All of a sudden, in the eighth, the bottom of the Nats' batting order produced a run against White and took a 7-6 lead. Two were out when Rick Ferrell banged a double to left in his only batting appearance. Here, Anderson demonstrated his prowess as a hitter by driving a single to center on the next pitch to score Ferrell.

Bowlers Compete In Old Dominion At Rosslyn Alleys

Bowling stars of nearby states and the District will gather Saturday and Sunday at the Virginia end of the Key Bridge to battle it out in the Old Dominion Handicap on the Rosslyn Bowling Center alleys. With a guaranteed first prize of $150 to shoot for, the cream of bowlers hereabouts will battle it out on the usual handicap basis. In addition to the top cash award there will be 30 additional prizes of cash and merchandise.

The word "open" behind the Old Dominion means just what it implies. Both men and women are eligible and a handicap will be given all bowlers carrying sanctioned league averages. The five games can be rolled anytime during the hours between 8 p. m. on Saturday and midnight on Sunday. The entry fee is $3.50.

Eagles Defeat Orioles in Thriller

Pranschike and Courteau started kicking the puck around. Swiftly the star Baltimore center darted in, scooped up the disc from beneath Pranschike's legs and raced up the rink with a trio of Eagles in close pursuit. Into a corner they forced Webster, but as the Oriole smacked up against the end boards he backhanded a shot which caught Goalie Hemming by surprise and slithered throught the tight side of the nets. It was a spectacular play and the due applause shook the house.

The Orioles, already weakened by the absence of two leading players through injuries, and a third because of a penalty-enforced suspension, suffered further in this period as first Bob Dill and then Guy Roach were half carried from the ice after collisions. Dill returned, however, just as Roach left, thus saving the Orioles the embarrassment of having both their best available defensemen off the ice simultaneously.

Boston Olympics Beat Skeeters, 4 to 1

Boston, March 16 (AP).—The Boston Olympics ended their regular Eastern Amateur Hockey League season by bowing to the River Vale Skeeters, 4-1, today before 10,000 at the Boston Garden.

Hughie Bell paced the victors by scoring two of their tallies. Before the game got under way, Cliff Thompson was presented with the Henry G. Lapham Trophy, awarded annually to the Olympic displaying the greatest improvement during the season.

Boston Bruins Play Deadlock With Detroit

By the Associated Press

Detroit, March 16.—The champion Boston Bruins and third-place Detroit Red Wings drew the three-cornered fight for the Georges Vezina Trophy for goalkeepers into a photo finish by playing a 2-to-2 tie before 10,049 spectators in a matinee National Hockey League game today.

With a final game between the two teams slated for Boston Tuesday, Goalie Johnny Mowers, of Detroit, maintained a three-goal advantage over Frank Brimsek, of Boston, for the award that goes annually to the net minder with the best defensive record. Mowers has yielded 98 goals, Brimsek 101 and Walter (Turk) Broda, of Toronto, also with one game to go, has given up 99.

Detroit overcame a two-goal deficit in the third period to keep its 24-year-old rookie in the race. Milt Schmidt scored for Boston in the first period and Roy Conacher got a goal in the third period before Detroit launched an offensive in which Alex Motter and Joe Fisher tallied.

Tempers flared and fists flew in the second period when Jimmy Orlando, of Detroit, and Eddie Wiseman, of Boston, were banned for fighting. The game was delayed five minutes while the ice was cleared of debris hurled by fans.

Rangers End Regular Season

Copyright by New York Times

New York, March 16 (INS).—The New York Rangers and Americans closed National Hockey League competition here for the season tonight when the Rangers won a 6-3 decision over their intra-city rivals.

The Rangers took an early goal lead in the first period when Lynn Patrick scored twice and Kilby MacDonald once. Wycherley tallied for the Americans in the first period and Lorne Carr was responsible for both their other markers, one in the second and one in the third period.

Bryan Hextall, league leading goal scorer, was unable to increase his total, although he did get credit for one assist.

The Rangers threatened throughout and Earl Robertson's valiant work in the strings was responsible for keeping the score down to respectable proportions.

Adam Hats Five Trounces Regal, 48-31

Adam Hats evened the count with Regal Clothiers in the Heurich Amateur Basketball League title playoff yesterday as the Hatters turned back the Clothiers, 48 to 31, on the Heurich floor. The third and final game will go on tonight for the championship.

Bob Berry and Joe McGrath provided the scoring punch for the winners with 15 and 10 points, respectively. Acky Viana was best for the losers with 10 points.

Adam Hats took the lead shortly after the start of the game and held a substantial margin throughout play.

In a preliminary game, the Alexandria Police five defeated the All-Stars, 43-36.

The playoff clash tonight will be preceded by the Tucker A. C. and the Arlington Maccabees game which will decide the Arlington County championship at 7:30.

$31,547,662 Netted in Year By Texas Corp.

By the Associated Press

New York, March 16.—Texas Corporation reported today consolidated net profit for 1940 of $31,547,662, or $2.90 a share, compared with $32,886,807, or $3.02 a share, in 1939.

W. S. S. Rogers, president of the oil firm, told stockholders in the annual report that during the year, "domestic sales of Texaco products were the largest in volume and costs of marketing were the lowest in the history of the corporation."

The accounts of European subsidiaries were not included in the consolidated financial statements, but incomplete information indicated that property and inventory losses in the Netherlands, Denmark, Belgium and France would aggregate at least $1,300,000.

Bahrein, operating a refinery on the island of that name in the Persian Gulf, estimated its net profit at $7,000,000 compared with $6,600,000 in 1939 and $3,400,000 in 1938. California Arabian is mentioned in the report as under production with a 3,000-barrel-a-day refinery completed last November at Ras Tanura, in the Persian Gulf.

American Smelting

New York, March 16 (AP).—American Smelting & Refining Co., one of the world's largest nonferrous metals companies, reported today net income for 1940 of $12,735,200, or $4.21 a common share, compared with $13,057,145, or $4.36 a share in 1939.

Simon Guggenheim, president, told stockholders that 1940 earnings, before taxes, improved over 1939 by an amount equal to $1.15 a share but that taxes increased by a sum equal to $1.30 a share, "thus more than canceling the increase in earnings."

Surveying the copper supply and price situation, Guggenheim pointed out that the United States Government had imported South American copper to hold the domestic price down to 12 cents a pound and he recommended modification of the present import duty of 4 cents a pound on foreign copper.

American-Hawaiian Steamship

New York, March 16 (AP).—American-Hawaiian Steamship Co. today reported 1940 consolidated net profit of $3,431,169 after depreciation and Federal income taxes (and including gain of $1,462,984 from sale of ships), equal to $7.87 a capital share. This compared with $992,524, or $2.27 a share, in 1939.

Union Carbide & Carbon

New York, March 16 (AP).—Union Carbide & Carbon Corporation, for the year 1940, today reported net income of $42,247,274 after taxes and charges but excluding unrealized foreign earnings, equal to $4.55 a share on common stock.

This compared with $35,847,400 in 1939, equal to $3.86 a common share.

During the year 1940 the company spent $19,676,293 for construction, Jesse J. Ricks, president, said, and in 1941 construction expenditures may total $35,000,000. Part of the expansion is to meet demands for products arising from the national defense program.

Contract Bridge

The skillful technique which has brought so many victories to Morrie Elis is well demonstrated in today's hand which he played with Miss Ruth Sherman as partner, during the national mixed-pair championship at Philadelphia.

Today's Hand

East and West Vulnerable

Opening lead: 4 ♣.

Clever reading of the defender's strategy enabled him to take an extra trick at a four-heart contract which required delicate handling to win even ten tricks. South opened the four of clubs which North won with the ace. As South had bid spades, North's obvious return was a spade to develop a trick for his side and knock out declarer's entry to the strong diamond suit. Since North did not return a spade but instead chose a trump, Ellis reasoned that North must have the diamonds stopped and therefore the queen. So he resolved upon the following play:

He took the heart lead with the king and trumped a low club in dummy. He played the jack of diamonds and when North followed small, he let it ride. A low diamond went to his king and another club was trumped.

The ace of diamonds was cashed and declarer's losing spade discarded. South, of course, could ruff this trick, but he would then lose his heart queen as declarer, upon getting the lead, would draw the remaining trumps with his ace.

Declarer made four hearts with an overtrick, losing one club and one heart.

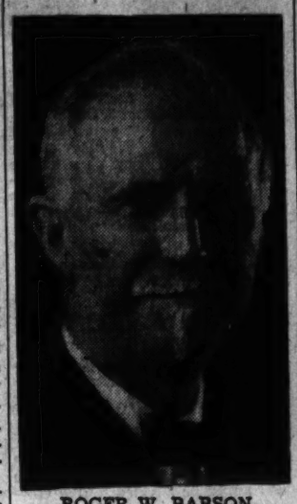
Expanding Debts

By Roger W. Babson

The Pitfalls of Borrowing

I was brought up in a frugal household in which debt was considered a sin. My father always did the family marketing, going personally to the corner grocery and paying cash. As a young man, I can remember but few bills, except for water, gas or taxes, coming into the house. Even these my father paid in cash, taking back a formal receipt.

My father maintained a creditable bank balance, but drew his checks sparingly. He was a generous man; but he had a healthy respect for the value of a dollar. As a result of his influence and example, I have never borrowed a dollar in my life either for business or for personal reasons.



ROGER W. BABSON

I know from a lifetime of observation that the borrowing of money, either by an idividual or by a corporation, can result in terrible consequences. This is likewise true from a national point of view. Note the effect upon individuals of other countries when inflation followed upon the heels of a broken-down debt structure. Indebtedness of any kind, whether of a social or a financial nature, is best to be avoided. Certainly, in its wake can come discontent, distress, poverty and unemployment.

Today, much of our national prosperity, as reflected by larger pay rolls, higher wages, increased retail trade, and a generally larger volume of business, is based upon our expanding debts. Some of our needs are legitimate, real and economically sound; but others are false and should be abandoned. But note the word "expanding." It is not the debt which gives us good business, but the continued increasing of the debt. Herein lies the danger of borrowing. Read Romans thirteenth chapter, eighth verse, and see what the Bible has to say on this subject.

Newspaper readers know that the limit of the national debt has been recently raised from 49 to 65 billion dollars. The latest figures available for the actual size of the national debt put it at $45,876,972,769, as of January 31. The per capita share of this debt amounts to $346.48 for every man, woman and child in the country, or about $1,500 per family. It may be of some interest to note that on August 31, 1919, when World War I was at its peak, the national debt amounted to only $26,596,701,648, the per capita share being $250.18.

Private debt now also far exceeds the existing and contemplated national debt. The long-term private debt amounts to about $75,000,000,000, and includes $42,000,000,000 of mortgages, $12,000,000,000 of railroad debts; $13,000,000,000 of public utility debts, and $8,000,000,000 of industrial corporate debt. The additional short-term private debt is represented in $24,000,000,000 of bank loans, $10,000,000,000 of retail credit extensions and $3,000,000,000 of loans on life insurance policies. Altogether, we have a private debt of $112,000,000,000. Our combined municipal and State public debt is $20,000,000,000. Adding our national, private and public debts we get a grand total of $178,000,000,000, or about $6,000 per family.

The Federal Government will shortly announce a new loan. More and larger ones will follow. I am continually being asked if these new bonds will be paid. My answer is, "Yes," because the Federal Government can print paper money to pay them off. This is something that States, municipalities, corporations and individuals cannot do. But how much this paper money will be worth is another matter. If the war lasts very long, it will not be worth much.

A constant increase in national, city or municipal debt is just as bad as an increase in personal debt. This especially applies to war debt. If Germany loses the war she will repudiate her debt and forget it; while if she wins she will make us pay it. Great Britain will follow a similar program. But you say that Uncle Sam will not let Britain lose. Very well, I agree; but still the war could end in a stalemate with a compromise peace. This is very likely. Then what will become of war debts? The majority of people know the danger of private debts; but the public debt is of little concern to the average individual. I am very sorry for this.

In plain English, our national debt should rigidly be measured against our willingness to produce and save real assets. This, in turn, is contingent upon our moral eagerness to work longer and harder in raising our national income to a point where its tax load will carry and even reduce the debt. Real assets, however, do not include war supplies. The safety valve of our national debt is controlled by our willingness to make sacrifices, by working harder and longer to reduce private, corporate and municipal debts. We must recognize individual responsibilities or be content with our lot in the deluge which may eventually result.

Private, corporate and public debt should be kept to a minimum when our national debt is increasing. Our war "prosperity" should enable many to get out of debt for the first time in years. By all means pay cash during the remainder of the war. Do not get messed up with installments. However, the main thought I want to drive home is that it is a choice between harder work, longer hours and lower wages during the defense effort—or else repudiation in some form.

Sloan Stresses Time Element In Defense Race

New York, March 16 (AP).—Alfred P. Sloan, jr., chairman of General Motors Corporation, said today that American industry had "the capacity and the ability" to expand national defense production "indefinitely," but warned that "time is an essential factor."

In his annual report to stockholders, made jointly with Charles E. Wilson, president, Sloan said:

"The national defense program may be said to be the greatest productive effort that industry has ever been called upon to make from the standpoints of its magnitude, its technical complications and the limited time available for accomplishment. . . .

"The policy of management with respect to the program for national defense should be clearly established. The responsibility of industry in this time of emergency stands out crystal clear. Industry becomes the backbone of national defense.

Fight of Technologies

"War today is more particularly a conflict between two opposing technologies. The nation that is able to capitalize the most advanced technology in terms of mass production is bound to have a tremendous advantage over any adversary. . . .

"America is the home of the machine. Through the process of industrial research and the intensive application of an ever-advancing technology it has become possible to produce more useful things and in a greater variety than anywhere else in the world.

"The efficiency of our enterprise, the skill of our workmen and the resourcefulness of industrial management have importantly contributed to the strength and productive capacity of this country.

"These now are being capitalized in the interest of national defense. Whatever the demands upon American industry in this great program may be, they will be met intelligently and aggressively.

"The task is an important one requiring the utmost understanding and cooperation of which we all are capable. But time is an essential factor."

Time Is Major Factor

Sloan pointed out that American industry needed time in which to meet mass demands for airplanes, tanks, guns and ships.

"Mass or quantity production is not a process that can be started at will. It is a factory system and requires the most careful coordination between many important factors as well as definite procedure involving rigid limitations. These processes and limitations must be recognized if satisfactory results are to be obtained."

Channel Yields Body of Missing Alexandria Woman

The body of a woman, identified by Claude R. Brown, of 411 Clifford Avenue, Alexandria, as that of his missing wife, Grace, 59, was recovered from the Washington Channel, near Hains Point, shortly after 3 p. m. yesterday by Harbor Police.

Brown, who is a painter at Fort Belvoir, had reported his wife missing earlier in the day. A note, which he turned over to the police and said he had found in his home, read:

"I am leaving my hat, coat and pocketbook where they can be found, but my body will be all right in the river."

The body was identified at the District Morgue, where it had been taken after recovery.

At 11:15 p. m. Saturday the woman was seen to leap from the center of the Fourteenth Street Bridge, leaving a postcard behind with the name "Mrs. C. R. Brown," of the Alexandria address, written on it. A passing Alexandria fireman, H. L. Segars, tried heroically to rescue the woman, but was unsuccessful.

48-Hour Week Order Affects Md. Projects

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, March 16.—Harry D. Williar, jr., State work projects administrator, said today that all Maryland certified WPA defense jobs would be affected by the Government order increasing working hours to 48 per week.

"This step, which is being taken on authority from Washington WPA headquarters, is required to move up completion dates and expedite defense construction which has been certified by the Secretaries of War and Navy," Williar declared.

Explaining that work hours on normal WPA projects are limited to 30 per week, the State director observed the new hours inaugurated on defense work means an increase of more than 50 per cent.

He listed these defense projects as among those where the work speedup would be ordered:

Curtis Bay ordnance depot construction, Fort George G. Meade, Detrick Airport at Frederick, Edgewood Arsenal, Aberdeen Proving Ground, access road to Fort Meade, access road to Edgewood, access road to Fairchild Aircraft Co. at Hagerstown, Hagerstown Airport, Baltimore Municipal Airport, Naval Militia Armory bulkheads at Baltimore, Maryland National Guard hangar at Baltimore Airport, Camp Holabird and Camp Ritchie.

"Work at these various Army and Navy posts includes the erection of buildings, laying of sewer and water lines, barracks improvements, ammunition storehouses, garages, road building, target range improvements, grading and drainage, construction and runways, installation of heating systems, placing electrical conduits and other types of improvements essential to effective operation of Army and Navy facilities."

He said a double shift would be put on the Baltimore Municipal Airport landing field about April 1 in order to expedite work. About 200 additional WPA men will be assigned to the project.

"Double shifts are also to be started at the Hagerstown Airport, which is being enlarged for military purposes, and plans have been made to use floodlights to supply illumination for night shifts."

W. W. Britt Heads Church Federation Drive for $25,000

Walter W. Britt, a member of First Congregational Church, will be general chairman of the coming financial campaign of the Washington Federation of Churches, the federation's president, the Rev. Edward H. Pruden, pastor of First Baptist Church, announced yesterday.

"The campaign, which is for the purpose of providing a budget of $25,000 to finance the federation program for the ensuing year will get under way on Sunday, March 30, which has been designated 'Federation Sunday,'" said Dr. Pruden.

Plans for the campaign are already taking shape under the chairmanship of Britt, who is also chairman of the federation's finance committee. Other members of the committee who are serving with Britt, as the campaign executive committee are: Daniel Dollarheide, a member of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church; O. L. Beardsley, of Park View Christian Church; W. Galt Mish, Gunton Temple Memorial Presbyterian Church; Dr. Dudley N. Carpenter, Episcopal Cathedral; Norton M. Little, Mount Pleasant Congregational Church; Frank L. Smith, Hamline Methodist Church; A. J. Thomas, Church of the Reformation.

Listen! with Glynn

Today being St. Patrick's Day, being celebrated throughout the world by the Irish and those of Irish nativity and descent, the Columbia Broadcasting System — WJSV in Washington—brings greetings to the world from the No. 1 Irishman, Eamon de Valera.

The American-born prime minister of Eire is to be heard on a world-wide hookup—via C. B. S.'s short wave transmitters to Europe and South America, as well as nationally through America by the network's 127 stations—as he speaks from Dublin at 11:30 p. m., our time.

In addition to extending St. Patrick's Day greeting, Prime Minister de Valera is expected to deal with Ireland's solemn present-day problem of maintaining its neutrality, and to tell what effects the neighboring European war is having upon the Emerald Isle.

De Valera's speech will follow by a few hours the annual ceremonies held at College Green, principal square before the old Parliament Building in Dublin, to be climaxed this year by a parade of Ireland's military might.

Other programs on WJSV will reflect Irish atmosphere, too. Tenor Frank Parker, on his 3:15 show, is to sing those well loved Irish ditties, "The Harp That Once Through Tara's Halls," "The Low-Backed Car" and "Irish Love Song."

Beatrice Kay on "Gay Nineties Revue," at 8:30, is to sing "Down Went McGinty" with appropriate brogue and everything.

Martin to Stay As Republican Chairman

By William B. Ardery
Associated Press Staff Writer

Representative Joseph W. Martin, Jr., has agreed to stay on as chairman of the Republican National Committee, it was learned authoritatively last night, with a salaried assistant to help in organizational work.

The Massachusetts Representative and Wendell L. Willkie conferred at length tonight and Martin was reported to have given assurances not only that he would remain chairman but also that the question of foreign policy would not come up at the committee's meeting here March 24.

Some Republican leaders had expressed concern that a fight might develop between factions differing over foreign policy but Martin was said to have told Willkie that only organization problems would be discussed at the meeting.

Willkie was understood to have counselled against any action which would be interpreted as putting the party in the "isolationist" category.

Friends said the 1940 Presidential nominee believed strongly that if the Republicans failed to cooperate in the aid-to-Britain program they would weaken the party both in the Congressional elections next year and the Presidential election of 1944.

Headed by Willkie, leaders of all party factions have urged that Martin continue in the chairmanship despite his avowed desire to resign because of the press of his duties as House minority leader.

In his position as national chairman, Martin could name a paid party manager at any time. He was said to believe, however, that any such action should be indorsed by the National Committee.

Recently, Senator Taft (Democrat), of Ohio, and other party leaders have favored the idea of a salaried manager. The consensus has been that a salary of $10,000 to $15,000 annually should be paid, and that the man selected should concern himself with "grass roots" organization rather than with party policy.

D. C. Short to Address Delaware U. Alumni

Oliver C. Short, personnel director of the Department of Commerce, and Randolph Hughes, secretary of Senator James H. Hughes, of Delaware, will address a banquet of the Washington Alumni Club of the University of Delaware at 6:30 p. m. today at Wesley Hall, Seventeenth and K Streets Northwest.

They will discuss the Federal employment situation in Washington from the viewpoint of the personnel director and the politician.

Elevator Kidnap Epidemic Spreads—Rises, That Is to Say

By Gladwin Hill.
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, March 16.—Those trick movies where a high diver soars neatly out of the water back onto the board have nothing on your Screwy News report today, because the national monkeyshine marathon has been reversing itself, too.

Last week a Philadelphia man kidnaped a hotel elevator and ran it up and down until forcibly interrupted. This week an elevator in Urbana, Ill.—indicating that elevators have souls and maybe even read the papers—turned the tables and kidnaped a man, and ran him up and down, up and down, for many minutes until he finally managed to jump out.

And whereas last week a Los Angeles cop successfully sued his wife for smashing into his car, this week a Detroit policeman's wife avenged her sex by tossing her husband over her shoulder, while he was teaching her jiu-jitsu, and breaking his leg.

And the Elkhart, Ind., swimming coach who last week had to postpone a meet because half his team had the measles this week had to postpone it again because the other half had the measles.

President Roosevelt set a record by using six pens to sign the lend-lease bill, but the record was promptly broken by the Governor of New Jersey, who, in putting his name on a new labor law, managed to employ 35 different pens.

The Senate voted a $1,500,000,000 defense appropriation in a few minutes—and then spent several hours on a law about peanuts . . . and Wichita, Kans., draft officials, along with an order to use only black and red ink, received a shipment of blue ink.

And if you thought you got a kicking around on your income tax, pity the Knoxville, Tenn., man who was forced to pay exactly twice as much as he owed. His bill was half a cent, and the Government didn't have any change.

Speaking of jiu-jitsu, it's probably a good idea for the cops to be practicing up on it, because the robbers certainly must have been taking some body-building courses . . . A thief in Easton Pa., stole a manhole cover . . . a Baltimore man discovered that somebody had lifted the motor out of his car . . . a couple of light-fingered individuals were caught dismantling the roof of the Indiana State House . . . and out in Los Angeles it was discovered that somebody had made away with a million-dollar glass factory.

But along with big muscles, some of the felons still have big hearts. A Chicago hold-up man relieved a truck driver of $38, and then gave him back a nickel—to call the police.

Defense Affect On Housing To Be Discussed

A series of five lectures on how the defense program is affecting housing needs will open at 8 p. m. tomorrow at the Federal Workers' School, 532 Seventeenth Street Northwest, with Carl Monesse, of the Office of the Defense Housing Coordinator, as speaker.

Warren J. Vinton, of the United States Housing Authority, will speak March 25;; Cecil Owen, United Construction Workers' Organizing Committee, April 15; John Ihldor, Alley Dwelling Authority, April 22, and Faith Williams, Bureau of Labor Statistics, April 29.

Monsees will discuss "Coordination of Government Housing Efforts."

The school is operated by the District Council of the United Federal Workers of America (C. I. O.).

2 Legislators To Plead for 19 Jailed in Spain

A national emergency conference on aid for Spanish Loyalist refugees was told yesterday that Senator Chavez, of New Mexico, and Representative J. Hardin Peterson, of Florida (both Democrats), will intercede with the State Department on behalf of 19 American citizens imprisoned in Spanish jails.

The conference, sponsored by the United Spanish Aid Committee, was held Saturday night and yesterday at the Hamilton Hotel.

Dr. Edward K. Barsky, national chairman of the committee, said that names and other information about the 19 citizens are being sent to the two members of Congress. The committee, he added, has agreed to pay any costs necessary to rescue them. The 19 include men and women who served with the International Brigade in the Spanish civil war.

The conference was informed that A. C. E. Malcolm, second secretary of the British Embassy, told a delegation that called upon him Saturday that he was unaware of any efforts by his government to secure a ship to transport Spanish refugees from French concentration camps to Mexico.

The delegation showed Malcolm a letter from the British charge d'affairs in Montevideo, Uruguay, which stated that the British authorities "are at this moment approaching the steamship companies with the intention of obtaining a ship for the transportion of Spanish refugees."

To Seek Building Funds

The Wellington Villa Association Arlington, Va., will sponsor a campaign to raise funds for construction of a clubhouse, Mrs. Mildred L. Finks, chairman of the executive committee, announced yesterday.

Montrose Pupils Form 4-H Club

A 4-H Club has been organized among pupils of the Montrose (Md.) public school. The officers are Phyllis Olsson, president; Donald Duckworth, vice president; Harriet Olsson, secretary; Eugene Henley, treasurer.

The club will hold its first regular meeting tomorrow to adopt a constitution and by-laws and a program for the remainder of the school year.

Falls Church Group To Stage Shaw Play

The Villagers, of Falls Church, Va., will stage George Bernard Shaw's "Candida" tonight at the State Theater, Falls Church, for benefit of the Arlington unit of Bundles for Britain. The performance will start at 8:30.
